at a rent sale to recover possession of the tenure from the landlord, who denied the title of the plaintiff, on the ground that on the death of the previous tenant, the land reverted to himself, was not a possessory suit to which the provisions of s. 37 of the Chota Nagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act could apply. Art. 138 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act refers more to questions between the auction purchaser and the judgment-debtor, and the present case fell under Art. 142 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act. The special limitation provided in s. 42 of the Chota Nagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act did not apply to this case. The period during which a suit was prosecuted bonâ fide in a Court without jurisdiction was properly excluded in computing the period of limitation, although the plaintiff in his plaint did not expressly ask for an extension of time on that ground. Joyeshwar Roy v. *Rajnarain Mittra, 8 C. 10. ——— Decree—Settled accounts, order directing re-opening of—Attorney and client—Settlement of untaxed bills, when liable to be reopened—Fiduciary relationship—Onus of showing good faith—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 111—Independent advice, opportunity to obtain—Promissory note, assignment of, without endorsement. Plaintiff, a solicitor, had advanced various sums of money to a client from time to time on a mortgage bond and three further charges. The consideration for the third further charge was not paid in cash, but was made up of (i) amounts due to the plaintiff on several promissory notes in plaintiff's favour, (ii) certain promissory notes executed by the client in favour of a third party, which the plaintiff is said to have "taken up," (iii) balance of amount due as interest on the mortgage and two further charges, and (iv) a certain amount stated to have been found due to the plaintiff as costs for acting for him in various suits upon a settlement made of amounts due under various taxed and untaxed bills, a large remission having beed allowed in consideration of all the bills not being taxed. In a suit by the plaintiff against the heirs of his deceased client to realise the amounts due on the mortgage and the three further charges the plaintiff obtained a decree on the first three bonds, but the 4th bond was ordered to be re-opened, and it was directed that the plaintiff "do get all his bills of costs up to the 3rd August 1903 taxed by the Taxing Officer of the High Court, and then refile the bills in this Court, that then a Commissioner be appointed to take accounts in the light of the observations in this case: that after the Commissioner's report is received and the parties are heard thereon, a final decree will be drawn up under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act": Held, that this order was a decree. The fact that the Subordinate Judge intended hereafter to adjust the equities arising out of the contract, did not in any way do away with his adjudication that the contract, as it stood, was not binding on the defendants. Coverji Luddha v. Morarji Punja, I. L. R. 9 Bom. 183, distinguished and doubted. Rahimbhoy Habibhoy v. C. A. Turner, I. L. R. 15 Bom. 155; s. c. L. R. 18 I. A. 68, referred to. As between attorney and client, the existence of fiduciary relationship alone, or the fact that certain bills of costs were not taxed, but were settled out of Court by execution of a deed, will not justify a Court in re-opening accounts settled, on which the bond is based, unless sufficient grounds of suspicion exist, or the bills are primâ facie shewn to be extortionate. Lambert v. Still, [1894] 1 Ch. 73, followed. Lawless v. Mansfield, 1 Drury & Warren 557, distinguished and explained. influence by a person in a position to dominate the will of another when the contract appears on the face of it to be unconscionable. To prove "good faith" of a transaction in which one party stands in a fiduciary relationship to the other, it is certainly not necessary to prove that all the accounts on which the contract is based are correct. Under the practice obtaining on the Original Side of the High Court, taxation of bills of solicitors is deemed to be optional with the client, and bills of costs are not infrequently adjusted without taxation. The case of Monohur Doss v. Romanath Lov, I. L. R. 3 Calc. 473, was decided on the special circumstances of that case and does not lay down any general rule of law. An attorney may be bound under certain circumstances to advise his client to take independent advice. It is not his business to see that the attorney selected by his client fulfils his duties to his client and is not guilty of any remissness or negligence. If he sends his client to another attorney and is ready to comply with all reasonable demands for information, he cannot be expected to do more, or to be responsible for another's omissions. If the parties to a promissory note agree that on the promisor executing a bond for the amount due in favour of a third person, the promisee would cancel the note, this arrangement would be a perfectly valid contract, whether the third party paid any money to the promisee or not. Although a negotiable instrument can only be assigned by endorsement, that does not prevent any arrangement not to negotiate the note, but to put an end to it. The word "procedure" in s. 3, Act X of 1877, has not the same meaning as the word "proceedings" in the above-mentioned section. The proceedings in a suit instituted before Act X of 1877 came into force, including a special appeal if the old Code allowed one, go on to the end of the suit, notwithstanding the repeal of the old Code. The "procedure"—that is to say, the machinery by which those proceedings are conducted—is, after decree to be that provided by the new Code. RUNJIT SINGH, v. MEHERBAN KOER. I. L. 3. ——— Decree, meaning of. The effect of the proviso to s. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 taken in connection with the definition of the word "decree" in s. 2 is that in all suits pending when that Code came into force, the practice and procedure to be followed down to the final result of such suits (i.e., when nothing remains to be done but to execute the decree or to appeal from it) are the same as previously existed, but that in all subsequent proceedings in execution of the decree, or in appeal from it, the practice and procedure provided by the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 are to be observed. The word "decree" in s. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1877, means an order final in its nature, and does not include an interlocutory order, such as an order of reference to take accounts, although such order may, in general, be properly termed a "decree" and, therefore, a suit which has been referred by the Court to the Commissioner to take accounts is still in a stage "prior to decree" within the meaning of s. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877. 4. ——— Effect of change of law on proceedings already commenced—Attachment—Enforcement of decree—Political pension. On the 28th of September 1877,—i.e., three days before the new Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877) came into operation,—an application was made for the enforcement of a money decree by attachment (inter alia) of a political pension enjoyed by the defendants. Under s. 216 of the former Code (Act VIII of 1859), a notice was issued on the same day to the defendants, calling upon them to show cause why the decree should not be executed. The defendants accordingly appeared on the day fixed at which date the new Code had come into force, and contended that, under s. 266, cl. (g), of the new Code, the pension was no longer attachable. Held, that all proceedings commenced and pending when Act X of 1877 became law were, under the General Clauses Act (I of 1868), s. 6, to be governed by the Code theretofore in force, the general rule of construction contained in that section not being affected or varied by ss. 1 and 3 of Act X of 1877; and that a bonâ fide application for enforcement of a decree in a particular way, coupled with an order of the Court in furtherance of that object, as much constitutes a proceeding in execution commenced and pending as the actual issue of a warrant of attachment. 5. ——— Effect of repeal of Civil Procedure Code, 1877—Proceedings commenced before repeal. Cl. 3 of s. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) provides that nothing in that Code shall apply to any proceedings after decree that had been commenced and were still pending on the 1st June 1882. In case of any question connected with proceedings commenced prior to that date, the applicability of the Code of 1882 depends on whether the new proceeding subsequent to that date, out of which the question has immediately arisen, is so intimately connected with the proceedings prior to that date as to be regarded as part of them. A decree was passed in 1876 by which the suit was referred to the Commissioner to take accounts. On the 21st June 1882, the Commissioner, in the course of taking the said accounts, issued a warrant ordering the defendants to show cause why they should not give inspection of certain books. Held, that the question as to inspection was so intimately connected with the taking of the accounts that it should be regarded as part of the same proceedings, and as these had commenced and were still pending on the 1st June 1882, the question whether the order refusing inspection was appealable or not was (under s. 3 of Act XIV of 1882) to be determined by the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII) of 1859, and not by the Code of 1882 RUSTOMJI BURJORJI v. KESSOWJI NAIK

The lower Court made a declaration that the defendant was not entitled to call himself a Shankaracharya of the Jyotir Math or of a branch of it at Dholka and an injunction against the defendant so styling himself and claiming or receiving offerings. The claim for an account and recovery of offerings received by the defendant was not allowed as the offerings might or might not have been made to the plaintiff. On appeal by the defendant: Held, dismissing the suit, that to decide disputes as to precedence or privilege between purely religious functionaries is no part of the business of the Civil Courts, nor will they grant injunctions to prevent preachers from preaching where they like under any title they please provided no office or property is disturbed or interfered with. 1. ——— Res judicata—Previous suit in Munsif's Court in ordinary jurisdiction—Subsequent suit on Small Cause Court side. A decision in a previous suit in a District Munsif's Court in the exercise of its ordinary jurisdiction may operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties on the Small Cause side of the Court-SIMHADRI APPA ROW v. RAMACHANDRUDU (1904) . . . . I. L. R. 27 Mad. 63

2. ——— Res judicata between co-defendants—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 56, 81, 82—Marshalling between purchasers of mortgaged property—Rule of inverse order—Rate of contribution—Equity. S. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code does not preclude the decision upon any issue from operating as res judicata merely because the issue is raised as between co-defendants, if the matter involved was directly and substantially in issue in a former suit and the other necessary conditions are satisfied. The words "between the same parties" in s. 13 qualify not only the words "former suit," but the whole expression "in issue in a former suit." Gokul Mandar v. Pudmanund Singh, 6 C. W. N. xlviii 825: s. c. I. L. R. 29 Calc. 707; Cottingham v. Earl of Shrewsbury, 3 Hare's Rep. 627; Ram Chandra Narayan v. Narayan Mahadev, I. L. R. 11 Bom. 216; Sheikh Khoorshed v. Nubee Fatima, I. L. R. 3 Calc. 551, referred to. Four parcels of property, A, B, C, D, were mortgaged by the owner. Subsequently the plaintiff-appellant purchased in July 1888 the properties A, B, at an execution sale subject to the said mortgage, and the respondents-defendants first party, the properties C and D at a private sale in January 1888. The mortgagee later on brought a suit in which the said purchasers were co-defendants, and obtained a mortgage decree, which directed the sale of the properties A and B to satisfy the mortgage-debt. The debt was completely satisfied out of the sale-proceeds. It was found by the Court that the said respondents bought without express notice of the said mortgage, which had been registered. In a suit for contribution by the plaintiff-appellant against the said respondents-defendants first party: Held, that the decree in the mortgage suit did not operate as res judicata on the issue of contribution in the latter. Kali Krishna Tagore v. The Secretary of State for India, I. L. R. 16 Calc. 173; Jagatjit Singh v. Sarbajit Singh, I. L. R. 9 Calc. 159, referred to. Held, further, that the respondents were not entitled to throw the whole of the mortgage-debt on the properties A, B, the rate of inverse order not holding good in such a case. That the plaintiff-appellant was entitled to contribution, and that the properties in the hands of the purchasers should contribute to the mortgage-debt in proportion to their respective values. Lala Dilwar Sahay v. *Dewan Balakiram, I. 3. ——— Res judicata—Decision of a Rent Court on a question of title. Held, that when an Assistant Collector hears a suit for profits, or for rent, or any other suit, which under the Rent Act he is competent to hear, although it may be necessary for him for the purposes of that suit to decide every question, whether of title or otherwise, which may be raised before him, his decision of such question cannot operate as res judicata in respect of any suit which may afterwards be brought in a Civil Court in which the proprietary title to the land out of which such profits or rents may arise is in issue. 4. ——— Decision on a question of law not res judicata when the object-matter of the subsequent suit is different—Hindu law—Trustee of Charitable Trust has no power to appoint a co-trustee in place of a deceased trustee. The provisions of the Indian Trust Act do not apply to charitable trusts. In the absence of provision in the instrument creating such trust or of some statutory provision, a trustee, as such, has no power to appoint any person as trustee either in his own place or to act jointly with him. A decision on a question of law in a previous suit is not res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties, when the object-matter of the two suits are different. Quære: Whether such a decision can be res judicata against a party, who could not have prosecuted an appeal against it. Parthasaradi v. *Chinna Krishna, I. 5. ——— Res judicata—Erroneous decision in a former suit—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 67, 179—Interest. Where in a previous suit for rent the Court erroneously held that interest exceeding 12 per cent. per annum was not recoverable from a permanent tenure-holder in a permanently settled area, although the kabuliat stipulated for the payment of such interest: Held, that in a subsequent suit for rent the erroneous decision in the former suit would not operate as res judicata. ALIMUNNISSA CHOWDHRAIN v. SHYAMA CHARAN RAY (1905) . . 9 C. 6. ——— Res judicata—Erroneous decision in a former suit—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 67, 74, 179—Mokurari lease—Abwab—Illegal cesses, stipulation to pay. Where the plaintiff in a suit for recovery of rent claimed certain cesses, which the defendant had stipulated to pay in his kabuliat and which the defendant said he was not liable to pay, inasmuch as in a previous suit for recovery of rent of a previous period it had been held that the same was not recoverable according to law: Held, that the present claim was barred by the rule of res judicata. PADMANAND SINGH v. RADHA SINGH (1905)

9 C. W. N. 469

7. ——— Res judicata—Matters in issue. A plea of res judicata taken on the ground that the questions in issue in the suit were formerly in issue in probate proceedings cannot be given effect to, when the said proceedings are not in evidence and there is thus no sufficient evidence to support the plea. A judgment passed in the previous proceedings showing what the Judge understood to have been the questions for decision in those proceedings, is not enough to support such a plea. The Court cannot give effect to the plea, unless it can say for itself that the matters in issue in the suit were in issue in the previous proceedings. 9. ——— Res judicata—Question directly and substantially in issue—Omission to raise ground of defence in former suit. H, an Oudh talukdar, executed a deed of gift in 1859 by which he purported to give to R (the only son of his elder son who was dead) the whole taluk with the exception of a few villages. In 1871 a suit brought by H against R to have it declared that notwithstanding the deed of gift the proprietary right in the taluk was vested in him was settled by a compromise by the terms of which various portions of the taluk were to be held for life by H, R and D, the mother of R, and on the expiration of those three lives, L (the younger son of H) and his heirs were to succeed to the whole of the estate. This compromise was embodied in a decree of Court. In 1876 H and L brought a suit against R and his wife to cancel a deed conveying a portion of the taluk to the latter as being in excess of the powers of alienation given to R by the compromise of 1871. The defendants in that suit did not contest the validity of the compromise, but upheld the alienation as valid, and asserted that L had no such interest in the property as entitled him to sue, and issues were raised on those points. The Court held that L was "a certain remainderman under the terms of the agreement," that he "or his representatives will certainly inherit the estate some time or other," and that he was entitled to sue; that the alienation was void as against H as being in excess of the power reserved by the compromise to R, who was held only entitled to alienate for his life; but that no right had yet accrued to H and L to disturb the possession of R's wife. In 1889 after the deaths of H, D and L, a portion of the taluk was attached by creditors of R and sold in execution of the decree without limit of title. In a suit brought by the son of L in 1896 against R, his judgment creditors, and the purchaser at the sale to have it declared that the plaintiff was entitled as the immediate reversioner to an absolute estate in the portion sold on the death of R, and that after R's death the sale would be inoperative as against him, the defendant R set up the defence that he had by virtue of the deed of gift of 1859 an absolute title, which was not displaced by the effect of the compromise and the decree embodying it. Held, by the Judicial Committee (confirming the decision of the Judicial Commissioners of Oudh) that the decision in the suit of 1876, as having established between R and L (the father and predecessor in title of the plaintiff) that R had only a life interest in the taluk, and that L (and therefore also the plaintiff as his heir) had a vested interest in remainder, was res

10. ——— Res judicata—Pro formâ defendant. The plaintiff sued Nathu Mal and Mathri to recover possession of certain mortgaged property alleging that the mortgage had been discharged by payment of half the amount due to the persons, whom he made defendants and half to Malhi Kunwar and others as representatives of one Mitter Sen. The defendants, 1st party, pleaded that they were entitled to the whole of the mortgage money, and that payment of one-half to the representatives of Mitter Sen was no payment as against them. Malhi Kunwar and others were made defendants to the suit, and in the end it was held that the defendants, 1st party, were entitled to the whole of the mortgage money, and a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff on payment of R997 to Nathu Mal and Mathri. The Court in that suit exempted the defendants Malhi Kunwar and others, holding that they had no interest in the property in suit. Subsequently the plaintiff sued Malhi Kunwar and others to recover from them the money paid on account of the mortgage. Held, that the decision in the former suit did not render the question of payment to the present defendants *res judicata. 11. ——— Res judicata—Execution of decree—Application dismissed for want of jurisdiction—No appeal from order of dismissal—Subsequent application barred. A Munsif, as a Court executing a decree, dismissed an application for execution, holding that owing to certain proceedings in insolvency, which had taken place at the instance of the judgment-debtor in the Court of the District Judge, he (the Munsif) had no jurisdiction to entertain it. No appeal was preferred against the order of the Munsif dismissing this application for execution, and the Munsif's order became final. Held, that a further application by the same decree-holder in the same Court to execute the same decree against the same judgment-debtor was barred by s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. 12. ——— Res judicata—Estoppel—Suit in Civil Court for ejectment of defendant as a trespasser—Effect of previous litigation in Revenue Courts. Plaintiffs applied to a Rent Court to eject defendant, alleging that he was their tenant, but their application was ultimately rejected on the finding that defendant was either the owner or a rent-free tenant of many years' standing. Again plaintiffs applied for enhancement of rent in respect of the same land from which they had previously sought to eject defendant, but were again defeated on the finding that the defendant was in adverse possession. Subsequently plaintiffs sued in the Civil Court to eject defendant as a trespasser. Held, that the plaintiffs were not debarred from having recourse to the Civil Court. Baldeo Singh v. *Imdad Ali, I. 13. ——— Res judicata in rent suits—Incidental or collateral issues—Adjudication upon title to the land in rent suits, when res judicata in a subsequent title suit. Where in a suit for rent the defendant denies the relationship of landlord and tenant and either sets up the title of a third person to the land for which rent is claimed, or pleads that she is not in occupation of the land or that the tenancy which existed has expired, the only material issue to be decided in the suit is whether the relationship of landlord and tenant subsisted between the parties for the period covered by the suit, and the issue, if any, raised as to the title to the land is an incidental or collateral issue not necessary for the decision of the suit: therefore the adjudication on this latter issue cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties for the establishment of title to the land. Srihari Banerjee v. Khitish Chandra Roy Bahadur, I. L. R. 24 Calc. 569, Run Bahadur v. Lucho Koer, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 301, and Dwarka Nath Roy v. Ram Chand Aich, 3 C. W. N. 266: s.c. I. L. R. 26 Calc. 428, referred to. But where in a rent suit, the alleged tenant denies the plaintiff's title to the land and sets up his own title to the same the issue as to the title to the land becomes a substantial issue in the suit, and the decision of the Court on the question of title becomes res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties for establishment of title to the land. Raj Krissen Mukerjee v. Radhamadhab Haldar, 21 W. R. 349, Radhamadhab Haldar v. Monohur Mukerjee, I. L. R. 15 Calc. 756; and Kasiswar Mukhopadhya v. Mohendra Nath Bhandari, I. L. R. 25 Calc. 136, referred to. Where in a suit brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for rent in respect of an alleged jama of R7, the defendant pleaded that he did not hold any separate jama of R7 under the plaintiff, but that the lands covered by the suit were included in a jama of R33 and odd, which they held under the plaintiff, and the Court held that the defendant did not hold any separate jama of R7 under the plaintiff and the lands of the alleged jama were included in the defendant's jama of R33 odd: Held, that the decision that the lands were included within the defendant's jama of R33 odd, was not necessary for the decision of the suit, and consequently could not be res judicata in a subsequent suit brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for the declaration of his title to those lands and for khas possession thereof. one decree only—Decree unappealed no bar to the decision of the appeal. Where cross-suits between the same parties on the same facts were tried together and judgment was given on the same day, but separate decrees were passed and an appeal was preferred against one of the decrees alone: Held, that the decree unappealed did not operate as a bar under s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure so as to preclude the Appellate Court from dealing with the decree appealed against. The doctrine of res judicata has no application when the very object of the appeal, in substance, if not in form, is to get rid of the decision, which is pleaded in bar. Abdul Majid v. *Jew Narain Matho, I. 15. ——— Res judicata—'Of competent jurisdiction,' meaning of—Decision against which no second appeal allowed, no bar to suit open to second appeal. The words 'of jurisdiction competent' in s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure admit of the provisions of law relating to appealability being considered in giving effect to the principle of estoppel, which ought to be so applied that, so far as possible, Courts of higher jurisdiction are not tied down by the decisions of inferior Courts. A decision in a previous suit of a small cause nature, in which no second appeal is allowed by law, is no bar to a subsequent suit, in the same Court, which not being of a small cause nature is opened to second appeal. Subbammal v. *Huddleston, I. 16. ——— —Res judicata. To support a plea of res judicata it must appear from inspection of the record that the person whose interest it is sought to bind was in some way a party to the suit. A mortgagor of an undivided share may redeem the entirety, if the mortgagee does not object and may be compelled to do so, if required by the mortgagee. Therefore, the fact that a suit for redemption of the entire property instituted by such a person was dismissed cannot affect the right of a co-sharer, who was not a party to that suit. In a suit for redemption it was ordered that the mortgagor should recover possession on depositing the mortgage money in the Government Treasury. The money was deposited, but before it could be made over to the mortgagee, the Sepoy Mutiny broke out and the Treasury was looted. Held, that the decree having become incapable of execution owing to vis major, a fresh suit for redemption was required to give effect to the rights of the parties and do justice between them; and such a suit was not barred under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. 17. ——— —Res judicata—Award of committee of taluqdars appointed under s. 3 of the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869)—Question of adoption—Claim in former suit as adopted son—Estoppel—Evidence and proof of adoption—Evidence of adoption where lapse of time precludes proof—Presumption as to probability from conduct of parties. In a suit by the appellant against the respondent for a share in certain family property the question was whether the respondent had been in 1853 validly adopted into another family. Held, that the committee of taluqdars appointed under s. 33 of Act I of 1869 (Oudh Estates Act) to decide on claims for maintenance is not such a Court as is described by s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), and their award refusing the respondent maintenance in his own family on the ground that he had been adopted into another was therefore not res judicata in the present suit. The committee had no jurisdiction to decide the question of adoption, and the affirmation of their award by the Financial Commissioner could not give judicial validity to their decision on a point outside their jurisdiction. The fact that the respondent had in 1879 on the death of his alleged adoptive mother claimed to succeed her as the adopted son of her deceased husband, and so secure the succession to which the predecessor in title of the appellant was then entitled, though he did not oppose the respondent's claim, did not estop the respondent from denying the alleged adoption in this suit. To establish the fact of a valid adoption it was essential for the appellant to show that it was made by the direction of the deceased husband of the adoptive mother, and that the respondent's father had given him in adoption. In the absence of proof, which the lapse of time made impossible, it was incumbent on the appellant, before any presumption that those conditions were fulfilled was justified, to establish an initial probability that the adoption was likely to have been validly made, and that the conduct of the parties cognizant of the facts had at least been consistent with such an hypothesis. But the evidence rather showed the contrary; and no weight could be given to the statements of the respondent, as they fell short of founding an estoppel, and as he had asserted or denied the adoption just as it suited his purpose throughout the whole of the protracted litigation between the members of the family. —Finding in the negative—Extension of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879) to the District—Application for Instalments—Res judicata. In a suit instituted in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge of Ahmedabad on a promissory note an issue was raised as to whether the amount sued for should be made payable by instalments and the finding was in the nagative. The suit was decreed on the 21st July 1905. The Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879) was extended to the Ahmedabad District on the 15th August 1905. Thereupon the defendant having applied for payment by instalments the application was dismissed on the ground that the question of instalments was res judicata. Held, that s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) was not applicable. S. 20 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879) contemplates that even when a decree has been passed which does not allow of instalments, the Court should have power to allow instalments in execution. In a previous suit between the same parties in respect of the years 1306, 1307 and 1308, the plaintiffs' right to receive the annuity had been admitted by the defendant, and a decree passed accordingly which had been affirmed by the High Court. Held, that the fact that the two suits related to different years did not prevent the judgment in the former operating as res judicata in the latter. Chandi Prasad v. Mahendra Singh, I. L. R. 24 All. 112, followed. Neither did the fact that the first decision was that of a Court of Revenue make any difference. 24. ——— Res judicata—Two suits decided by same judgment—Appeal in one suit, if barred by decision in the other suit—"Former suit," what is—Hearing two suits together—Irregularity. A Mahomedan died leaving two widows. Each of them brought a suit for the recovery of her dower from the estate of the husband making the other a party defendant. One of the widows, M, having claimed certain houses to be her exclusive property, and the other J, denying it, an issue was raised in each of the suits as to whether those houses belonged to the estate of the husband so as to be liable for the dowers claimed or were the separate property of M. The two suits were, with the consent of the parties, tried together and decided by one and the same judgment, though two separate decrees were made, the Court holding that the houses were M's separate property. J appealed only from the decree in her suit, and it was contended on behalf of M, that the judgment in her suit not having been appealed from became final, and was a bar to the trial of the issue as to the ownership of the houses in the appeal preferred by J in her suit. Held per GHOSE, C. J., agreeing with HARINGTON, J. (RAMPINI, J., contra), that there was no separate judgment in M's suit to operate as a bar by way of res judicata to the trial of the appeal in J's suit. Abdul Majid v. *Jewnarain Mahto, I. 2. ——— Res judicata—Matter which might and ought to have been made a ground of attack in a former suit. The plaintiffs sued for their share by right of inheritance in the assets of a deceased Mahomedan, the defendant being the widow of the propositus. In that suit the widow pleaded that she was in possession of the property claimed in virtue of a deed of gift from her late husband, and also that she had a lien on it for unpaid dower. The latter defence was accepted by the Court, and the plaintiffs' suit dismissed. The plaintiffs then brought a second suit against the widow, in which they offered to redeem the dower-debt and claimed possession after such redemption. Held, that this second suit was not barred by s. 13, expl. 5. ——— Res judicata—Property not included in the former suit—Right as heir decided in the former suit with respect to other property—The decision does not bar the second suit. K brought a suit against A and others to recover some property as heir of one S, praying for a partition of the properties specified in the plaint and for allotment to him of S's share therein. A denied K's heirship and asserted himself to be heir of S. It was decided that A was the heir of S and the suit was dismissed. A then brought another suit against K to establish his right as S's heir to property not included in the plaint in the first suit. The lower appellate Court negatived the claim upon the ground that as A failed to make the omission by K to include the property in dispute in the previous suit for partition a ground of defence, A's right to the property was in the second suit barred under Expl. II to s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). On appeal to the High Court: Held, that A's right to maintain the suit was not barred by res judicata. Expl. II to s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) must be read in conjunction with and as part and parcel of the leading provisions of the section itself. According to those provisions, several conditions are necessary to constitute a matter res judicata. Two of these conditions are : (i) that the matter must have been in the former suit directly and substantially in issue ; and (ii) that it must have been heard and finally decided in that suit. The explanation does no more than lay down that, if a matter, which might and ought to have been made a ground of defence in the former suit, is not made such a ground, it shall be dealt with as falling within the first of the above-mentioned conditions. That is, the omission shall have the same effect given to it as it would have had, if it had been made a ground of defence. But to constitute res judicata, a second condition is necessary—it must have been finally decided, and if the former suit went off on a preliminary ground not calling for adjudication on other grounds of defences whether raised or not, those grounds remain undecided. The same effect must be given to a matter, which might and ought to have been, but has not been, made a ground of defence in the former suit, as must be given to it if it had been made a ground of defence in the former suit. village S. C instituted two suits, one to set aside the sale in execution of the Small Cause Court decree and the other to set aside the decree and sale in the mortgage suit. The latter suit was dismissed for default, but the former succeeded. In this suit, A did not set up as a ground of his defence the title obtained by him at the mortgage sale. Held, that A was not bound to do so, and a suit by A to recover the lands in village S purchased at the mortgage sale is not res judicata under Expl. II of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Per BRETT, J. Expl. II of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code refers to the title litigated in the former suit as distinguished from the relief claimed. When several independent grounds of action are available, a party is not bound to unite them all in one suit though he is bound to bring before the Court all grounds of attack available to him with reference to the title which is made the ground of action. This rule equally applies to the converse case of a defendant, when pleading in his defence. Pittapur Raja v. *Venkata Mahipati Surya, L. R. 12 I. 7. ——— and s. 42—Res judicata—Person claiming property as heir of another might and ought to set up all the kinds of relationship in one suit. On the question whether a person, who sued to recover property as the reversionary heir of the deceased on an alleged relationship to the deceased is, when such suit is dismissed, debarred by s. 13, Expl. II of the Civil Procedure Code, from bringing another suit for the same property as reversionary heir under a different kind of relationship: Held by WALLIS and MILLER, JJ. (Chief Justice, dissenting), that such subsequent suit was barred. Per Sir ARNOLD WHITE, C.J. The question whether a matter "ought" to have been made a ground of attack within the meaning of s. 13, Expl. II of the Civil Procedure Code, will depend on the facts of each case. Where the two different kinds of heirship, under which a person claims property, cannot co-exist, he is not bound, in a suit based on one kind of heirship to join the other in the alternative, when the former, if proved, will necessarily negative the latter. It cannot be said that a part "might and ought" to have claimed alternatively in the view that the ground of title set up was false or that he would be unable to prove it. Per WALLIS, J. The question of what "ought" to be made a ground of attack under s. 13, Expl. II, must be determined by the provisions of s. 42 of the Civil Procedure Code. The first question to be considered in such cases is whether the provisions of s. 42 required the plaintiff to join in the former suit the ground of attack in the subsequent suit. Where a person claims as heir, the "matter" within the meaning of s. 42 is his heirship, and he is bound to include in one suit all the different grounds on which he bases his heirship "as far as practicable." It will not be practicable to join in one suit the different grounds only when the evidence in support of one ground will be destructive of the other. Ramaswami Ayyar v. Vythinatha Ayyar, I. L. R. 28 Mad. 760, followed. MILLER, J. The construction of the word "ought" in s. 13, Expl. II of the Code of Civil Procedure, must to a great extent depend on considerations of hardship and inconvenience caused to the parties. There is no hardship or inconvenience requiring a plaintiff suing as heir to state all the facts on which he bases his heirship, even though it may result in the presentation of an alternative case, while great inconvenience and hardship may be caused to the defendant by allowing the plaintiff to keep a ground in reserve. Muthumadeva Naik v. *Sivattamuthumadeva Naik, 7 Mad. The plaintiffs believing that the buildings themselves had been partitioned, brought a suit for recovery of their share in the houses alleging a dispossession from that share by the defendants. But they were defeated in this suit upon the ground that the supposed partition of the houses by a Court of Revenue never could have taken place. In a former suit plaintiffs had sued certain defendants (two of whom were defendants in the present suit) to recover money alleged to be due under a mortgage by sale of the land. the sale of the land could be maintained. In the present suit, plaintiffs claimed as mortgagees and complained that the two defendants, though let into possession as tenants, refused to surrender the land and were setting up a title. Held, that the suit was not barred by s. 43 or by s. 13, expl. 3. ——— Former suit to redeem kanam, no bar to subsequent suit based on the kanam and title, so far as the latter is based on title. A previous suit to redeem four out of six items of land mortgaged under a kanam deed on the ground that the kanam was split up by a subsequent demise, and which suit was dismissed on the ground that such demise was not valid, will be a bar to a subsequent suit to redeem under the same kanam, so far as such suit is based on the kanam. S. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure will be a direct bar to any claim on the demise and ss. 13 and 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure will bar a claim on the original kanam, as an alternative claim on it might have been made in the prior suit. But where in the subsequent suit the plaintiff relies as well on his title, such title is a distinct cause of action, and neither s. 13 nor s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure will bar his claim on such title. A claim on a kanam is a claim arising ex contractu, while a claim on title against a trespasser is founded on tort. Ramaswami Ayyar v. *Vythinatha Ayyar, I. L. amount of the principal to the defendant, but it was not accepted. The plaintiffs in consequence filed a suit, under s. 62 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), to recover possession of the mortgaged property, and at the same time under s. 83 of the Act deposited the amount of the principal in Court as the amount payable on the mortgage. The Court passed a decree for possession. In 1904 the plaintiff filed another suit to recover mesne profits from the defendant from the date of the deposit to the date when he recovered possession of the mortgaged property from the defendant in execution of the redemption decree in the previous suit. The claim was disallowed on the ground of res judicata. Held, that the plaintiffs having failed to ask for mesne profits in the previous suit, his present claim was barred either under s. 13 or 43 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The profits derived by a mortgagee after a proper tender made or after the amount due has been deposited in Court are profits for which he has to account to the mortgagor in virtue of a liability tacked on, so to say, by the statute to the mortgage contract; and as such a claim to them by the mortgagor is one arising from and connected with his right to redeem or recover possession of the property. From the date of the tender or of the deposit, as the case may be, the mortgagee continues as mortgagee but with a statutory liability to account for the profits received by him from that date. He is not then a mere trespasser but a mortgagee still, holding the property as a kind of trustee for the mortgagor and as such accountable to the latter for the profits. ——— ss. 13, 283—Order 'in investigation' under s. 283, what is—Payment of decretal amount more than one year after order, effect of—Decision on question of mixed law and fact res judicata—Voluntary payments not recoverable. A claim to attached property by A was dismissed by the following order:—"The sale seems collusive. Claim rejected." The order was apparently made on a consideration of the sale-deed alone and there was nothing to show that any evidence was gone into. More than a year after the order B, claiming the properties under a sale by A subsequent to the order, paid the decretal amount and the attachment was raised. In a suit by A to redeem the lands on the strength of his title under the sale dealt with by the order: Held, that as the order on the claim by A purported to be made on the merits, it was valid as one made after 'an investigation' of the claim within the meaning of the word as used in the Code: Held, further, that the order was conclusive between A and the defendants and that the payment of the decree-debt by B having been made more than a year after the date of the order, did not relieve A from the obligation to bring a suit within a year to set aside the order. A judgment in a previous suit between the same parties not based on a misapprehension as to a general rule of law, but deciding a question of mixed law and fact is binding as res judicata in a subsequent suit. Sardhari Lal v. *Ambika Pershad, I. On the case being called on A's evidence was partially gone into. On the next day of hearing, A made default and his counsel stated that he had no instructions. On that, the Court dismissed the case without delivering judgment. Subsequently B instituted this suit in 1900 to recover certain properties, covered by the deed, which he alleged remained in A's possession and which A had failed to make over to him. A raised the defence that the property belonged to him and that the deed being benami, was inoperative. Held, that A was precluded from raising the above defence, as those issues were res judicata. Held, further, on the construction of the Deed of Release, that the suit was not barred as Art. 116, and not Art. 49, Sch. II, of the Limitation Act applied. ROMA NATH DASS v. MOHESH CHUNDER PAL (1905) 9 C. W. N. 679

1. ——— "Place where the contract was made"—Jurisdiction. Plaintiff, who resided at Kurnool, filed a suit in the District Court of Kurnool against the defendants, who resided in Madras, for damages. Plaintiff had been consigning goods for sale to the defendants as commission agents and he now complained that they had sold his goods at rates unnecessarily low. The contract of agency had been concluded by postal communications between plaintiff and defendants. Held, that suit was one arising out of contract within the the meaning of s. 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that within the meaning of explanation III to that section the cause of action arose at the place where the contract was made, i.e., at Madras, and that clause (iii) of the explanation was inapplicable to the suit, inasmuch as the amount claimed was one payable not in performance of the contract, but as damages for its breach. Under the Indian Contract Act, where the proposal and acceptance are made by letters, the contract is made at the time when and at the place where the letter of acceptance is posted, though the contract is voidable at the instance of the acceptor by communication of his revocation before the acceptance has come to the knowledge of the proposer. II and III—Jurisdiction—Place where contract was made—Promissory note, dated and signed within the jurisdiction of one Court, and sealed and countersigned elsewhere. A negotiable promissory note, drawn on behalf of a Company, was signed by the Secretaries and Treasurers and dated at Bellary. The note was then sent to another place, where the Agent countersigned and affixed the seal to it and posted it, addressed to the payee at Madras, who received it there. A suit was subsequently brought on the note in the Court at Bellary : Held, that the Court had jurisdiction. A statement of the place of execution is not essential to the validity of a negotiable promissory note, nor are the parties precluded from dating it at a place different from that at which it is actually made, if, for any purpose of theirs, they consider it necessary to do so. Where, therefore, a negotiable note is dated with reference to a specified place, and the justice of the case does not necessitate a different conclusion, the parties should be presumed to have agreed to that place being taken to be the place of the contract. Winter v. *Round, 1 Mad. ——— ss. 17 and 20—Suit against several defendants—Some defendants residing outside the jurisdiction of Court—Objection—Earliest opportunity—Acquiescence in the institution of the suit. Plaintiff filed a suit against three defendants in the Court at Sirsi. Defendant 1 lived within the jurisdiction of that Court and defendants 2 and 3 lived within the jurisdiction of the Court at Barsi. Plaintiff did not apply under s. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) for leave to sue defendants 2 and 3; on the other hand, these defendants, though they had taken an objection in their written statement that the Court had no jurisdiction, did not apply under s. 20 of the Code. The Sirsi Court allowed the claim against defendants 2 and 3, who did not reside within its jurisdiction. On appeal by defendant 3, the District Judge set aside the decree on the ground of want of jurisdiction and ordered that the plaint be returned for presentation to the proper Court. The plaintiff having appealed against the said order: Held, reversing the order, that defendants 2 and 3 not having made any application under s. 20 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), they must be deemed to have acquiesced in the institution of the suit and the suit could not now be said to have been improperly instituted against them in the Sirsi Court. (g), sub-s. 5, cl. (b), principles of, application of—Payment by purchaser to protect his interest—Payment for vendor's benefit—Right to refund—Suit on deposit receipt—Admissibility of evidence to prove object of deposit—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92.* Defendant executed an amanati receipt in favour of the two plaintiffs, the contents of which were as follows: "That you keep in deposit with me R7,774-5-10 in order to pay off debts due to your Calcutta creditors on account of your joint business as well as to meet the expenses of your joint law suit. I shall return the said deposit money to you when you both will . . . jointly demand payment from me of the said money in deposit. . . . ." (The rest of it provides for the payment of interest at a certain rate from the date of demand.) The amount mentioned in the receipt represented the unpaid balance of the purchase-money of a mortgage decree sold by the plaintiffs to the defendant, on the same day, free of incumbrance. The decree, however, had been already attached by some creditors of the plaintiffs. In a suit brought by the plaintiffs on the basis of the amanati receipt, to recover the amount of deposit with interest, the defendant claimed to set off a sum of R6,289-12-5 paid by him to release the decree from attachment, the payment having been made at a time when a second mortgagee of the property covered by the decree applied for execution of a decree obtained on his mortgage by sale of the property. In support of his claim the defendant adduced evidence to prove (i) that the deposit was made as a security for the release of the decree from attachment, and (ii), further, that there was an oral agreement between the parties that on plaintiffs failing to pay off the attaching creditors, the defendant would be at liberty to make the payment out of the deposit. Held, that as it was established that the receipt embodied the real contract between the parties with regard to the deposit, the evidence offered to prove a separate agreement empowering defendant to pay off the attaching creditors, was not admissible. But s. 92 of the Evidence Act would not bar evidence to prove the object for which the deposit was made or to explain the meaning of the first sentence in the receipt, and this evidence prove that the defendant was to pay the money to the plaintiffs when called on and that the plaintiffs were then to pay off the claim with the money. Held, nevertheless, that the defendant was entitled to the set-off claimed—(i) because, having the right to compel the plaintiffs to pay off the claim of the attaching creditors, defendant had been forced to pay it off himself in order to save his own interests under the purchased decree from the second mortgagee. James Hills v. Woomamoyee Burmonee, 15 W. R. 545, referred to; (ii) because, the payment was made on the plaintiffs' behalf and they had the benefit of it; and (iii) because, the claim for repayment of the deposit and the payment made to release the decree were so connected together as to form parts of the same transaction. ——— ss. 26, 53—Amendment of plaint—Amendment may be allowed when such amendment does not raise a case essentially different from that first set up—Misjoinder of parties and causes of action. Where in a suit brought by four members of a Hindu family against the widow of a fifth to recover the property of the deceased by right of survivorship, the plaint contained the further allegation that one of the plaintiffs was the adopted son of the deceased, and the defendant pleaded division and also denied the adoption, it is open to the Court on finding the adoption proved, to pass a decree in favour of the adopted son alone, even in the absence of a prayer in favour of such adopted son, without trying the question of division between the plaintiffs and the husband of the defendant. Such a course in no way contravenes the provisions of s. 53 (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure, as the object of the proviso to that section is only to prohibit amendments, which involve the trial of issues substantially different from those raised by the original pleadings. Where the finding on one of the issues negatives any right in the defendant to hold the properties on the case set up by such defendant, it is not open to such defendant to insist on the trial of other issues, which can only affect the rights of the plaintiffs inter se and probably other rights of the defendant and plaintiffs not in issue in the suit. Semble: A plaint will not be bad as contravening s. 26 of the Code of Civil Procedure,

1. ——— s. 28—Misjoinder of parties—Claim in the alternative against debtors and agent of plaintiff. The plaintiff, in a suit to recover money from certain persons alleged to have borrowed money from his agent, is entitled when the alleged debtors deny the loan, to make his agent a co-defendant, and pray for a decree in the alternative against such agent. Such claims are made in respect of the same matter within the meaning of s. 28 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Muthappa Chetty v. Muthu Palani Chetty, I. L. R. 27 Mad. 80, distinguished. 2. ——— Misjoinder of parties and causes of action—"In respect of the same matter," meaning of—Practice. The plaintiff sued two sets of defendants to recover from either the one or the other a sum of money for the rent of his godown. The plaintiff agreed to let a godown to defendants 1—6 from 1st May 1906. At the date of the agreement the godown was in the possession of Messrs. N. and Co. Defendants 1—6 alleged that they did not get possession of the premises in terms of this agreement; that only one compartment out of three was given to them on the 22nd May; that they did not get possession of the other two compartments and in consequence they had to hire other premises. Messrs. N. and Co. pleaded that there was an oral agreement with the plaintiff that they should occupy the godown till the end of May 1906; that they gave up possession of one compartment of the godown before the 22nd May 1906, and on the 22nd May they gave up possession of the remaining portion to the plaintiff and the first set of defendants. The defendants all pleaded that the suit as framed was bad by reason of misjoinder of parties and of causes of action. Held, disallowing the objection, that the suit was properly constituted. The most convenient way to try all the questions arising between the plaintiff and the defendants and the two sets of defendants inter se would be by one suit where all the three parties are before the Court as parties. The subject-matter in respect of which the plaintiff seeks relief is the rent of his godown. It is the same matter as regards both sets of defendants, and both sets of defendants are interested in the adjudication of the questions involved in the suit. The general principle governing the joinder of defendants would seem to be that there must be a cause of action in which all the defendants are more or less interested, although the relief against them may vary, but that separate causes of action against separate defendants quite unconnected are not involving any common question of law or fact cannot safely be joined in one action. The object of s. 28 seems to be to avoid multiplicity of suits if it could be done without embarrassment to any of the defendants. Madan Mohun Lal v. *Holloway, I. L. 3. ——— Lands situate at different villages and in possession of different persons under different titles—One suit to recover possession of the lands—Misjoinder of parties or causes of action—Interlocutory judgments against different defendants—Final judgment for possession to be reserved till the conclusion of the trial. The plaintiff, one of the reversionary heirs, sued to recover possession of a moiety of certain lands which were situate at different villages and in possession of different persons who were alienees by sale, mortgage or lease from the widow of the last male holder. In the lower Courts the suit was dismissed for misjoinder of parties or causes of action. Held, on second appeal, that though the lands were situate in several different villages, provided the venue for the trial is the same, the right of the plaintiff to have her claim tried in one suit is the same as if the different holdings were all in the same village. It is never any bar to a suit in ejectment that many persons are in possession. The only possible objections were on the ground of inconvenience. The difficulties arising from variety of defences can be cured by the successive trial of the issues separately affecting different defendants. Following the English practice interlocutory judgments may, if the plaintiff succeeds, be given against different defendants as their cases are disposed of, final judgment for possession of the whole property

4. ——— Misjoinder of parties—No adverse interests as between the parties—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 119—Adoption—Suit to declare validity of adoption—Interference with adopted son, nature of. Plaintiff 1, the daughter of Ningangavda, and plaintiff 2, the adopted son of Ningangavda, together brought a suit against the defendants to recover possession of Ningangavda's property. The right alleged in plaintiff 1 was that she had been living with plaintiff 2, in the house of which possession had been given to the first defendant under a decree of the Mamlatdar. The plaint contained no averment asking for relief in favour of plaintiff 1 in the event of plaintiff 2's adoption being found not proved. On an objection having been raised as to misjoinder of parties: Held, that the suit was not bad for misjoinder of parties, since plaintiff 1, beyond alleging in the plaint that she was Ningangavda's daughter, did not set up her right to recover the property as Ningangavda's daughter, but claimed it with plaintiff 2, on the ground that the latter was Ningangavda's son, and that she lived with him. Fakirapa v. *Rudrapa, I. ——— ss. 28, 46, 53, 578—Misjoinder of causes of action—Relief "in respect of the same matter"—Partners—Suit by one of two partners against the other partner and third party—No allegation of collusion—Maintainability. A suit was brought in which the following reliefs (as the High Court found) were claimed:—As against first defendant, damages for his breach of contract as an agent of the firm in which first plaintiff and third defendant were partners: and as against third defendant for dissolution of partnership and for damages. First defendant had been sent to conduct the firm's business, as its agent, at S, and on his failure to carry out instructions and to render accounts, it was agreed that the third defendant should proceed to S, receive the accounts and collect the firm's assets, and that the firm should be wound up in six months. Third defendant, it was alleged, went to S but acted in collusion with first defendant, wound up the business and collected the firm's assets at S, but failed to render an account thereof or to give first plaintiff his share in them. The other parties to the suit were all impleaded as undivided sons.

On its being contended that the case fell within s. 28 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that, inasmuch as first plaintiff was not in a position to know whether first defendant had or had not handed over the firm's assets to third defendant, he was entitled to sue them jointly or in the alternative: Held, that the suit was not maintainable, the plaint alleging two distinct causes of action as against defendants Nos. 1 and 3 respectively. Even if the words "in respect of the same matter" in s. 28, warranted a different construction being placed upon that section than that which the English Courts have placed on the corresponding rule 4 of order XVI, it could not be said that the right to relief alleged to exist against first defendant was "in respect of the same matter" as the right to relief alleged to exist as against third defendant. Held, also, that there was a further objection to the plaint in that the plaintiff was not entitled to sue in his own name in respect of first defendant's breach of contract with the firm, the cause of action not being based on any allegation of collusion by first defendant with third defendant. Such a misjoinder was not a mere irregularity as would be condoned under s. 578. A case like the present, in which separate causes of action were alleged against the two defendants, did not come within s. 46, which empowers a Court to order that the suit be confined to such of the causes of action as may be conveniently disposed of in one suit. The power given to the Court by s. 53 to return a plaint for amendment is only discretionary, and where the Court does not return a plaint, which is bad for misjoinder of parties or of causes of action, the defendant is not precluded from raising the objection at the hearing of the suit or on appeal. 8. ——— Agent's right to execute decree obtained by him as agent—Waiver—Execution of decree. P filed a suit in the second class Subordinate Judge's Court at Mahad. As P resided at Thana, outside the jurisdiction of the Mahad Court, she authorized her agent, under a general power-of-attorney, to conduct the suit on her behalf. The agent carried on the litigation up to a final decree passed by the High Court on appeal in P's favour. The agent then sought to execute the decree. The Court at Mahad passed an order upon his darkhast granting only partial execution. Against this order the Agent filed an appeal in the District Court at Thana. Then, for the first time, the judgment-debtors challenged the agent's right to represent P, who was residing within the District Court's jurisdiction. This objection prevailed, and the appeal was dismissed. Held, that the agent could not be prevented from executing the decree which he had obtained as agent. No objection had been taken to the agent's right to represent P at any stage of the litigation prior to the final decree. That objection must, therefore, be deemed to have been virtually waived, and could not be raised after the defendants had had their chance of success in the litigations. 1. ——— s. 43—Cause of action—Splitting of cause of action—Suit to recover exclusive possession of land—Suit to obtain a share by partition of land—Certificate of sale relied upon in both suits. The plaintiff in execution of a decree obtained by him, purchased at a Court-sale the right, title and interest of his judgment-debtors, Rajaram and Sitaram, in certain lands; and, on the 12th November, 1886, he obtained a sale certificate in respect of all the properties so purchased. In 1891 he brought a suit (No. 519 of 1891) against the heirs of Sitaram, then deceased, for possession of certain of the lands included in the sale certificate, of which they were in exclusive possession, and he obtained a decree. In the next year, 1892, he brought another suit (No. 518 of 1892) against the heirs of Rajaram, then deceased, and another person, for possession of other lands included in the sale certificate, of which they were in exclusive possession, and he again obtained a decree. In both the above suits he based his claim on the sale certificate showing his title as purchaser. The remainder of the lands included in the sale certificate were held by the heirs of Rajaram and Sitaram jointly with other members of the family who were coparceners with them, and in 1897 the plaintiff filed this suit to recover by partition the shares of the heirs of Rajaram and of Sitaram in these lands, basing his claim upon the sale certificate. The lower Courts rejected the claim on the preliminary ground that the suit was barred by the provisions of s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held by CHANDAVARKAR and ASTON, JJ. (CROWE, J., dissenting) reversing the decree and remanding the case, that the suit was not barred by s. 43. That section does not apply where the cause of action is different. The title on which the former suits were based was exclusive ownership, while that on which the present suit was based was joint ownership. A person who has succeeded in recovering one property under one title is not debarred from suing to recover another property under another title. The certificate of sale is not the title; it is merely the title-deed. NARAYAN BHAGWAN GANDHI v. SHAMBRAO LAXUMA (1903) . . . I. L. R. 27 Bom. 379

On its being pleaded in defence that plaintiff had already filed a suit in respect of fasli 1306: Held, that the present suit was barred by s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Though there were separate muchilikas for the faslis 1306 and 1305, yet there was but one cause of action, namely, the non-payment of rent by a tenant to his landlord. Plaintiff now sued to recover the money. On its being contended that the suit was barred by s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure: Held, that the suit was one for money paid on an existing consideration which had since failed; that this right of action was different from the right on which the suit for specific performance had been brought, and that

The plaintiffs, believing that the buildings themselves had been partitioned, brought a suit for recovery of their share in the houses alleging a dispossession from that share by the defendants. But they were defeated in this suit upon the ground that the supposed partition of the houses by a Court of Revenue never could have taken place. Upon a second suit brought by the plaintiffs in a Civil Court asking for partition of the house property, it was held that neither s. 13 nor s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure was a bar to the suit. After seven days B gave A a promissory note for R700 representing seven days' fees. B, who was a vakil, also promised to assist A professionally in certain litigation. B, however, died before he could fulfil his agreement to render professional services. A sued B's son upon the promissory note first, and subsequently in a separate suit for the balance of his fees for attendance at Hardwar, under the alleged agreement and for fees for later attendance at Benares. Held, that the second suit was barred by the provisions of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure so far as the fees for attendance at Hardwar were concerned, though not in respect of the other fees claimed. A plaintiff instituted a suit for the specific performance of a contract to reconvey a plot of land, in which he did not claim mesne-profits to which he was entitled in consequence of the defendant's delay in performing the contract; subsequently to the decree for specific performance he brought another suit for the mesne-profits; Held, that the plaintiff's suit for mesne-profits that accrued due before the institution of the suit for specific performance was barred under s. 43, Civil Procedure Code. Other similar property in Naini Tal was mentioned in the plaint, but the plaintiff said he would bring a separate suit in respect of that property. The first suit was withdrawn, but without permission being granted to bring a fresh suit. Subsequently a second suit was brought in Naini Tal respecting the property there. Where a plaintiff sued for recovery of possession of two adjacent plots of land and for declaration of his right of way over the road between them, and it appeared that the witnesses who would prove acts of dispossession of the plots of land and the closing of the right of way would be probably identical and that nothing could be gained by compelling the plaintiff to bring two suits for the redress of what really appeared to be one wrong : Held, that the High Court would not interfere under s. 622 of the Code to set aside the orders of the lower Courts allowing the plaintiff to proceed with the suit. The other claim was in respect of money alleged to have been paid by the plaintiff to I. and invested by him on her behalf. The defendants contended that there was a misjoinder of causes of action : Held per BATTY, J., following Ashabai v. *Haji Tyeb Haji Rahimtulla, I. L. the decision of the lower Court), that the first of the two causes of action above set out was not a claim by an heir as such. Ashabai v. Haji Tyeb Haji Rahimtulla, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 399, not followed. Per JENKINS, C.J. Those to whom rule (b) of s. 44 of the Code relates have the common characteristic that they owe their legal condition to the death of another. But there are others of whom this can be predicated as, for instance, legatees or next-of-kin, who are not named in rule (b)(i). Executors, administrators, and heirs have the characteristic in common, not shared by legatees and next-of-kin, namely, that not only do they acquire title from the deceased, but they may represent him. ——— s. 59—High Court Rule 162—Practice—Inspection of documents not referred to in the plaint—Right of defendant to inspect last documents before filing his written statement. S. 59 of the Civil Procedure Code requires a plaintiff to annex to his plaint a list of documents on which he intends to rely at the hearing. It has heretofore been the practice not to order inspection of documents other than those referred to in the plaint or relied on in the list annexed to the plaint till after the written statement is filed. This is not an inflexible rule in all cases, for there may be many cases where it would be imperative to order the plaintiffs to produce and give inspection to the defendant before he has filed his written statement of a document or documents, which they may not have mentioned in their plaint or enumerated in the list of documents annexed thereto. S. 80 contemplates that the persons sought to be served should be residing at the house. But service so effected was properly made in accordance with s. 74 of the Act, which contemplates service on the person having management of the business "unless the Court otherwise directs." The ground upon which the petition was based was that the appellant was not pecuniarily in a position to pay the costs of the appeal if it should be dismissed. An order was passed directing the appellant to show cause why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted. When the petition came on for hearing, no one appeared to support it or to show cause against it, and it was accordingly rejected. An application was subsequently made on behalf of the petitioner praying that the case might be restored to the register on the ground that counsel for the petitioner was absent on the occasion of the hearing for fifteen minutes only, and that, as no one on behalf of the appellant had appeared to show cause, the petition should have been granted, and the absence of petitioner's counsel was immaterial.

Held, that the matter was dealt with by s. 98 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that s. 647 of the Code, prescribing that the procedure laid down for suits should be followed as far as it could be made applicable in proceedings other than suits, made s. 99 the rule by which the Court was to be guided. Held, also, that, although no general rule could be laid down that the absence of counsel, when a case has been called on, should be treated as by itself a sufficient reason for restoring to the register either a regular suit, or an appeal, or a miscellaneous application, but each case of the kind must be dealt with according to its own particular circumstances, in the present case, taking the circumstances into consideration, an absence of counsel for fifteen minutes was not enough to preclude the Court from restoring the petition to the register. 5. ——— Dismissal for default—Party interested refused relief. S sued to establish his claim to certain property, as the next heir of its former owner, on the death of whose grandmother the property had been taken possession of by defendant, P, and obtained a decree. Upon this P appealed, and while the case was under appeal, S sold his rights to H, who on application to the Court was made a party to the suit. The case was then remanded for further enquiry to the first Court which dismissed the claim on account of default of both plaintiff and defendant. H then applied for opportunity to show that he had not been in default, but his application was rejected on the ground that he was no party to the suit. He then appealed, but the Judge also ruled that he was no party. Held, that, when the case was remanded for re-trial, some date should have been fixed for the re-hearing, which would have given the parties opportunity to appear and take measures to carry on the suit, and that the Judge's decision must be set aside, H having been in reality a party to the suit. 6. ——— Non-attendance of plaintiff. 9. ——— Identity of causes of action in two suits, notwithstanding difference of relief claimed. To a suit brought in 1883, for redemption of a mortgage made in 1853, of villages in Oudh, subsequently included in the mortgagee's talukhdari estate and sanad, the defence was that the mortgagor having brought a suit in 1864 to redeem, and not having appeared at the hearing, in person or by pleader, judgment was passed, the mortgagee having appeared to defend against the plaintiff under s. 114 of Act VIII of 1859. Held, that, although the plaintiff, who had claimed in the prior suit the under-proprietary right in virtue of a sub-settlement, claimed in the present suit the superior proprietary right, the difference in the mode of relief claimed did not affect the identity of the cause of action, which was in both cases the refusal of the right to redeem ; and that, under s. 114 of the Act, the judgment of 1864 was final. 10. ——— Dismissal of suit for default—Difference in causes of action—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 102, 103. The dismissal of a suit in terms of s. 102, Civil Procedure Code, is not intended to operate in favour of the defendant as res judicata. When read with s. 103, it precludes a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action, referring, irrespectively of the defence or the relief prayed, entirely to the grounds, or alleged media, on which the plaintiff asks the Court to decide in his favour. Brother's sons, as nearest agnates of a deceased proprietor, sued for a decree, declaring that a gift, before then made by the widow in favour of her daughter's son, of the estate of her late husband, would not operate against their right of succession on her death. A prior suit, before the date of the gift, brought by two of the plaintiffs for a declaratory decree and an injunction restraining the widow from alienating the same estate, had been dismissed under the provisions of ss. 102 and 103 (Act X of 1877), Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the causes of action in the two suits were not identical, and the fresh suit was not precluded by s. 103, the gift having afforded the new ground of claim, which also had subsequently arisen. 11. ——— Dismissal of suit for non-appearance of plaintiff—Application under s. 103 to set aside order of dismissal—Appearance, what amounts to—Ex-parte decree. When the plaintiff's suit came on for hearing, his counsel applied for a postponement. This application was refused and the plaintiff's counsel, not being further instructed, left the Court. The suit was then dismissed for want of prosecution. Subsequently the plaintiff made an application, under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), for an order to set the dismissal aside. Held, refusing the application, that the above circumstances amounted to an appearance on the part of the plaintiff. Where a suit for certain property was brought on behalf of two minors by their next friend, and owing to the gross want of care and diligence on the part of the next friend, the suit as struck off under s. 102 for default of appearance : Held, in a suit afterwards brought by the same plaintiffs on attaining their majority,

13. ——— Appearance of party—Appearance by pleader or recoginzed agent—Appearance only for purpose of applying for adjournment—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 100—Presidency Small Cause Court Act (XV of 1882), s. 38—Dismissal for default—Remedy of plaintiff. A suit and cross-suit between the same parties were on the board of a Judge of the Small Cause Court for hearing on the 23rd April 1898. On that day A, the counsel who was instructed for the defendants in the first suit and for the plaintiffs in the second, was unable to attend, and B, another counsel, held his brief and appeared on his behalf and applied for two months' adjournment of both suits. The munim of his clients was then in Court. B was unable to state what was the defence, if any, to the claim of the plaintiffs in the first suit. The adjournment was refused, and B said he withdrew from the case. Both suits were then and there disposed of, the claim of the plaintiffs in the first suit being decreed, the second suit being dismissed for non-appearance. On the 7th May following, an application was made for a re-hearing of both suits. The Court, regarding the decrees as ex-parte decrees, granted a rule for a new trial, which was made absolute. On appeal to the Full Court, the matter was referred to the High Court. Held, that under the circumstances the suits were to be considered as having been disposed of under ss. 100 and 102 of the Civil Procedure Code respectively, and that, whether or not they, or either of them, fell within the category of contested suits as defined by s. 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, the remedy under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code was open to the plaintiffs in the cross-suit. Where on the day fixed for hearing a party is present in person merely for the purpose of applying for an adjournment which is refused, he must be taken to have "appeared" within the meaning of Chap. VII of the Civil Procedure Code. The party has appeared in person. The purpose for which he appeared, or the action which he took on appearance, are immaterial. But where the party is absent and an application for adjournment is made on his behalf by a pleader who has no other instructions, and whose functions are at an end when the adjournment is refused, in that case the party has not appeared within the meaning of the Chapter. Where the pleader who applies for an adjournment is accompanied by a recognized agent of the party, but the latter neither makes any application nor does any act, the question is whether he intends to appear, and in fact does appear for the party in the exercise of his powers under s. 36 of the Civil Procedure Code. That section is merely permissive and enabling. If the recognized agent, although able to do so, does not think proper to conduct the case on behalf of his principal, his mere presence in Court is not an "appearance" in the suit. An appearance may be made by a pleader or a recognized agent, but the concurrence of the pleader or agent is essential. As soon as he ceases to intend to represent the principal the latter is unrepresented. S. 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act does not preclude a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default from applying under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code to have the order of dismissal set aside. There is no inconsistency between the two sections. A plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default has two separate remedies under different enactments. If he chooses to apply for a new trial under s. 38, he must do so within eight days. If he professes to apply for an order setting aside the dismissal under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code, he can do so within thirty days (Limitation Act, XV of 1877, Sch. II, Art. 163). 15. ——— Order dismissing a suit for default of appearance—Civil Procedure Code, s. 137—Application for restoration of suit—What constitutes an "Appearance." In construing an order alleged by one side and denied by the other to be an order under s. 102 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the order will be considered as an order under s. 102, if apart from the mere description which the Court gives of its action, and apart from the actual fact of the plaintiff's appearance or non-appearance, the real meaning and substance of the Court's action is, that it dismisses the suit on the view, whether right or wrong, that the plaintiff appears and the defendant does not appear. Where, his suit having been dismissed for default of appearance under s. 102 of the Code, the plaintiff applies for its restoration, the defendant cannot contest the application in limine as one which cannot be entertained at all under s. 103 by showing that at the time of the dismissal there was an appearance by the plaintiff in fact or in law; but as an answer to the application on the merits, the defendant can raise the contention that the plaintiff was not prevented from appearing because in fact he did appear. It is not an "appearance" within the meaning of s. 102 of the Code when the plaintiff is represented only by a pleader who is without instructions enabling him to proceed with the case, and who is merely instructed to apply for an adjournment. Shankar Dat Dube v. *Radha Krishna, I. Ss. 102 and 103, Civil Procedure Code, apply to proceedings before the Court to which a reference is made under s. 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, owing to the operation of s. 647, Civil Procedure Code, which is made applicable to such proceeding by s. 53 of the Land Acquisition Act. Persons, who were not parties in the land acquisition proceeding, were not debarred from instituting a suit for apportionment in the Civil Court. STEPHEN J. Quære: Whether persons who were before the Collector, but not before the Court to which reference was made under s. 18, Land Acquisition Act, would be debarred from instituting such a suit. MUKERJEE, J. An objection as to the measurement of the land or the amount of the compensation payable therefor must be determined exclusively by a reference to the Civil Court under s. 18, cl. (1) of the Land Acquisition Act. But a question as to the persons to whom compenstaion is payable or its apportionment among the persons interested may be determined either under a reference as contemplated by s. 18, cl. (1) of the Act or by a suit at the instance of a person lawfully entitled to it as against another, who has drawn the compensation money. When, however, a party has once availed himself of a reference to the Court under s. 18, Land Acquisition Act, he cannot again ask for an opportunity to litigate the same matter in the ordinary Court. Sri Punnabati Dai v. *Padmanund Singh, 7 C. 17. ——— Suit dismissed owing to absence of Counsel—Plaintiff present with his witnesses—Rule allowing costs of two Counsel—Junior Counsel should return brief if neither Counsel able to be present—Practice. Sections 102 and 103 of the Civil Procedure Code do not apply when the plaintiff is present in Court. Notwithstanding the non-appearance of the plaintiff's counsel the Court can under s. 117 of the Code ask the plaintiff questions relating to the suit and can examine his witnesses or suggest that he should instruct some other counsel to examine the witnesses. The rule of allowing the costs of two counsel on each side in taxation was introduced by the Judges in order to obviate the dislocation of the business which might result from cases being called on at the same time in two or more Courts in which the same counsel was engaged. This rule has always been supplemented by the unwritten rule of the Bar that one or other counsel must return his brief in good time if there is a chance of neither being able to attend when the case is called on, and that in case of dispute it is the duty of the junior to return the brief or to make arrangement for some other counsel to attend until he can come in. Believing that when the Judge took his seat in his own Court, a part-heard case would be proceeded with and would occupy some time, the plaintiff left the Court house and went to assist his employer, who had sent for him to explain some matters connected with a mercantile transaction. The plaintiff returned to the Court in about half an hour, and found that in his absence his suit had been called on for hearing and dismissed under s. 102 of the Civil Procedure Code. On application under s. 103 to set aside the order of dismissal:—Held, refusing the application, that the above circumstances did not amount to "sufficient cause" for his non-appearance when his suit was called on for hearing. He was not taken unawares. He was under no compulsion to leave the Court, nor was his absence due to any weighty cause. He accepted the risk of the case being called on in his absence. The effect of the enactments is that, if sufficient cause is shown, restoration is made obligatory on the Courts, there being no discretion in the matter; whereas in other cases the merits of the applicant's case will form an important element for consideration when the Court is asked to exercise its discretion. 23. ——— Ex parte decree—Presidency Smal Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882), s. 37—New trial—Parties, non-appearance of—Civil Procedure Code, s. 157. There is a distinction made by the Code of Civil Procedure between cases decided ex parte in the absence of one of the parties after first hearing, and cases decided in the absence of one of the parties at an adjourned hearing. Chap. VII of the Code relates to the appearance of parties and the consequence of their non-appearance at first hearings, whereas Ch. XIII, of which s. 157 forms a part, contains the procedure for the trial of a suit on an adjournment after the first hearing. Where, therefore, a defendant put in an appearance in the Small Cause Court at the first hearing, and the case was adjourned to a later date for hearing, on which date the case was heard in his absence and a decree given against him:—Held, that such a decree was not made ex parte so as to enable the defendant to obtain benefit of s. 108 of the Code, but that his only remedy was under s. 37 of Act XV of 1882. On the rehearing his suit was dismissed by both the lower Courts on the merits. Held, on a special appeal to the High Court, that, although s. 119 provides that an order for re-hearing shall be final, it is final only in the sense that it is not by itself open to appeal, and that the plaintiff was not precluded by that section from raising the objection that the order for re-hearing was made after the time limited therein, and therefore ought to be set aside as made without jurisdiction. 27. ——— Suit, adjournment of hearing of—"Appearance" of defendant—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 108, 157. A Munsif, before whom a suit was pending, fixed, by way of adjournment, a particular date for its disposal. The defendants did not appear, but there was in Court a pleader who had been instructed by the two principal defendants at the outset, and who had filed his vakalatnama. There was nothing to show that he had ever received any other instructions whatever, either as to the facts of the case or the conduct of the defence, or that the defendants had done anything beyond giving the pleader the instructions above referred to. Under these circumstances, the plaintiffs gave their evidence, and the Munsif decreed the claim. Held, that, under the circumstances stated, the defendant's pleader must be taken not to have been in Court on the date fixed for the purpose of defending the suit on behalf of the defendants, inasmuch as, upon that part of the case, he had not been instructed; that it was therefore a fair inference that the defendants did not appear, and the case was disposed of under s. 157 of the Civil Procedure Code; and that, under these circumstances, the provisions of s. 108 were applicable, and the decree was an ex parte decision, which it was open to the Munsif to reconsider. Hira Dai v. *Hira Lal, I. On the day notified in the summons, the case was called on, and, upon its being called on, a pleader presented himself in Court with a power-of-attorney, executed not by the defendant himself, but by a third person on his behalf, and stated that the defendant had no notice of the time fixed for the hearing of the case, and prayed for an adjournment to a date upon which a proper answer to the claim could be filed. The application was refused, but the case was adjourned to the day following. On that date, no one appeared for the defendant, and a decree was passed against him. Held, that there was no appearance on behalf of the defendant within the meaning of s. 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that the decree passed on the adjourned date was therefore an ex parte decree. Hira Dai v. *Hira Lal, I. This they failed to do on the day to which the hearing was adjourned, and when the suit came on for final hearing, they were still in default, and also failed to appear in person or by vakil. S. 119, Act VIII of 1859, does not contemplate the setting aside of that portion of the decree in such a case which refers to the other defendants. In the absence of good and sufficient cause for previous non-appearance, his application was rejected and an ex parte judgment given against him. After this he applied, at the instance of the Appellate Court, for a re-hearing on the ground that the summons had not been duly served upon him. This application was rejected and the order of rejection was upheld on appeal. In special appeal he contended that the case did not fall within s. 119, and that he was entitled to have the regular appeal previously preferred determined upon the record as it stood, notwithstanding his prayer had been rejected under s. 113. Held, that the mere fact of the special appellant having appeared by a vakil in the way mentioned above could not be taken as an appearance within the meaning of s. 119, and was not sufficient to prevent the Court from passing a judgment ex parte against him. 45. ——— Cause for non-appearance at adjourned hearing—Appearance at first hearing. Where a defendant was prevented by the fraud of the plaintiff from appearing on the last day of hearing, the suit was held to have been decided ex parte, notwithstanding that the defendant had been represented on the first day of hearing; and the first Court was held to have done right in restoring the case to the file under Act VIII of 1859, s. 119. 46. ——— Prevention from appearing by sufficient cause—Ex parte decree against minors. An ex parte decree having been granted in a suit against A, personally and as guardian of her infant sons, the infants subsequently applied, under s. 119 of Act VIII of 1859, to set aside the decree on the ground that the summons had not been duly served upon A, and the application was dismissed. On appeal to the High Court : Held, that, although, so far as the decrees made A personally liable, the Court had no power to interfere, yet, as the infants were not responsible for their non-appearances, it might be said that they had been prevented by "sufficient cause from appearing" and that the decrees might be set aside under s. 119 of Act VIII of 1859 (Act X of 1877, s. 108) as against them. for default of prosecution under s. 114 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and was afterwards re-admitted under s. 119. Held, that, the default not being of the nature described in s. 114, the suit was wrongly dismissed under that section, and for the same reason that the suit was improperly dismissed under that section, it was also improperly re-admitted under s. 119. Where the lower Appellate Court admitted an application under s. 119 for re-trial of a case which had been decided ex parte by the Munsif, it was held to have done right in sending for the record, in order that the case as a suit should be heard and tried by the Appellate Court; the object of the law being that a suit should assume a complete form and go to a full trial and not be divided between different Courts. On the decree-holder taking out execution, two of the defendants applied to the Subordinate Judge under Act VIII of 1859, s. 119; and their application being rejected, they applied to the District Judge, who referred them to the High Court. Held, that the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction, but the proper course for the parties was to apply to the District Judge under s. 119. defendant did not appear, and the case was adjourned to the 18th December, and, as the defendant did not then appear, a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff. A vakalatnama had been previously filed on the defendant's part, and he had also objected to an application filed by the plaintiff for attachment of the defendant's property before judgment. Held, that these acts on the defendant's part did not constitute an "appearance" by him within the meaning of s. 100 of the Civil Procedure Code, which referred to an appearance in answer to a summons to appear and answer the claim on a day specified, issued under s. 64; that the decree was therefore ex parte within the meaning of ss. 100 and 108, and an appeal consequently lay to the High Court under s. 588, cl. (9), from an order rejecting an application to set the decree aside. Zain-ul-Abdin Khan v. *Ahmad Raza Khan, I. L. R. 2 All. 67 : L. R. 5 I. 53. ——— Reversal of Judge's order by High Court—Appeal. A suit having been decreed ex parte, defendant applied for a revival thereof, under s. 119, Code of Civil Procedure. The application having been rejected, defendant appealed, and the first Court was directed to enquire whether there was sufficient cause for the non-appearance of the defendant. This was done, and the defendant was allowed to defend the suit. The plaintiff then appealed to the Judge, who reversed the last order. Both parties then went back to the Munsif, who, on 26th April 1867, recorded a proceeding that the original ex parte order was to stand. In the meantime the defendant appealed to the High Court, which reversed the Judge's order. Held, that the effect of the High Court's order was to render valid the Munsif's order admitting the defendant to defend the suit, and that no application for review was necessary on the part of the defendant. Held, that the High Court's order, being a final decision by way of appeal on a question which arose in the suit, could not be interfered with, except by the Privy Council. 56. ——— Different defendants—Ex-parte decree against two defendants—Application by one defendant only to set aside the decree—Defence peculiar to that defendant—Order of Court setting aside entire decree as against both—Validity. First defendant had executed a promissory note in plaintiff's favour. Plaintiff now sued first defendant on the note, as the maker, and he joined the first defendant's nephew as second defendant on the ground that the note was for a debt binding on the family, including second defendant. Neither defendant appeared, and the District Munsif passed a decree ex parte against both. Later, the second defendant alone applied under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure that the ex parte decree might be set aside. The Munsif accordingly set it aside in toto as against both defendants. When appealing against the final decree, plaintiff took the objection that the order was contrary to law, and claimed that the decree should not have been set aside as against first defendant, and asked to have it restored. Held, that the decree should be restored as against first defendant; whatever doubt might exist in a case in which the decree sought to be set aside under s. 108 proceeds on a ground common to the applicant and another defendant who has not applied under that section, the decree should not have been set aside in toto in a case like this, where the defence of the second defendant was peculiar to him. Mahomed Hamidula v. *Tohurenissa Bibi, I. 57. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 101—Ex-parte decree, setting aside of, when divisible—Binding effect of such decree against two sets of defendants having a separate defence—Appeal. When an ex parte decree is divisible, it is, though in form a single decree, equivalent to two decrees; and when, on an application by one set of defendants who had a separate defence, it is set aside under s. 108, Civil Procedure Code, it remains still a good and binding decree against the other set of defendants. M brought a suit for recovery of possession and declaration of raiyati title against B and dur-raiyati title against A. B and A set up separate defences. M obtained an ex parte decree, which was set aside at the instance of A, who disputed both the raiyati and dur-raiyati title. The suit, which was restored and re-heard only with reference to A, was decreed. Both B and A preferred appeals to the lower Appellate Court, which dismissed M's suit. Held, that the ex parte decree of the first Court was divisible, and the decree, though in form a single decree, was equivalent to two decrees, one against B and the other against A, and it remained a good and binding decree as against B; also that B was no party to the re-hearing, and the first Court had no jurisdiction to retry the case as against him, and the appeal as against that decree to the lower Appellate Court was not competent. 58. ——— Sufficient cause—Non-appearance of a guardian of a minor in a suit, whether a good and sufficient cause—Ex parte decree, setting aside of, against one of several defendants, effect of, as to the decree against other defendants. The simple fact that a guardian did not appear in a suit is not a good and sufficient cause, within the meaning of s. 108, Civil Procedure Code, for setting aside an ex parte decree passed against a minor. There are different considerations which bear upon the matter, the question always being whether, in what the guardian did, he acted in the best interest of his ward. Kesho Pershad v. Hirday Narain, 6 C. L. R. 69, explained. In a case where an ex-parte decree was set aside against one of the defendants, and the Subordinate Judge set aside the decree against others who did not appear and one of whom made an application to set aside the ex parte decree: Held, that this was rightly done. Mahomed Hamidulla v. *Tohurennissa, I. One of the judgment-debtors, as against whom the decree was ex parte, applied under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and got the decree set aside as against himself. Subsequently, whilst the decree against the other two mortgagors became final, the third mortgagor succeeded in proving that the amount of the mortgage-debt was only Rs. 1,556-15-0, and a decree was passed against him accordingly. On application by the decree-holder for an order absolute for sale, the Court, under these circumstances, directed that an order absolute under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) should issue, for the sale of all the mortgaged property, but that the property belonging exclusively to that judgment-debtor who had successfully objected should not be sold, unless and until the mortgaged property belonging to the others had been sold and had failed to realize a sum sufficient to satisfy the smaller decree. 60. ——— Minor defendant—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 108, 443—Guardian ad litem—Minor defendant not properly represented—Ex parte decree against minor—Application to set aside decree—How far the granting of such application should affect parties other than the applicant. A suit claiming payment of money alleged by the plaintiffs to be due on a balance of account was filed against three defendants, viz., Bhura Mal, Musammat Gayatri, the daughter-in-law, and Jamna Das, the son of Bhura Mal. The second and third defendants being minors, Bhura Mal was named as their guardian, and a notice was issued to him under Rule 128 of the Rules of Court, calling upon him to state whether he was willing to act as guardian ad litem to the minor defendants ; Bhura Mal was also duly served with a summons in the suit. Bhura Mal entered no appearance, but the Court nevertheless, though no order had been made appointing any one as guardian ad litem for the minors, fixed a date for hearing of the suit. Upon that date none of the defendants appeared, and the Court passed an ex parte decree against all three. On execution of this decree being taken out by the plaintiffs, applications were made on behalf of the minor defendants under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure to set aside the decree. Held by the Full Bench, that, there having been no appointment of Bhura Mal as guardian ad litem of the minor defendants in the manner prescribed by s. 443 of the Code of Civil Procedure (mere notice to Bhura Mal of the proposal to appoint him being quite insufficient), the minors were entitled to have the decree set aside as against them. Suresh Chunder Wum Chowdhry v. Jugut Chunder Deb, I. L. R. 14 Calc. 204, and Kesho Pershad v. Hirday Narain, 6 C. L. R. 69, referred to by AIKMAN, J. On the question whether the decree should be set aside as regards Bhura Mal also, it was held by STANLEY, C.J., that, where an order is made under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the decree set aside is primarily the whole decree, and the suit to be proceeded with is the whole suit ; though, where a decree passed against several defendants consists in reality of separate decrees against each, it may be that the decree can be set aside in part. When a decree is one and indivisible, it must be set aside in its entirety. Mahomed Hamidulla v. Tohurennissa Bibi, I. L. R. 25 Calc. 155, and Ajodhya Pershad Singh v. Sheo Pershad Sahu, 5 C. W. N. 58, referred to. Manakukom Pedru v. Sitaram Atmaram Vagh, I. L. R. 18 Bom. 142, not followed. Per BURKITT, J. On the facts of the particular case, the ex parte decree ought to be set aside as against all the defendants. Per AIKMAN, J. S. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure primarily applies so far only as the particular defendant, who seeks to get an ex parte decree against him set aside, is concerned. Huro Krishno Doss v. Motee Chand Baboo, 8 W. R. C. R. 260, referred to. Though under certain circumstances, it may be necessary in the interests of justice that the whole decree should be re-opened. Thus, when the decree is one and indivisible, it must be set aside as a whole or not at all, although the application to set aside the decree may be the application of only one of the defendants. Dookhee Khan v. *Rajessuree Ranee, 15 W. 66. ——— Setting aside ex parte decree—Power of Court—Decree to be set aside only so far as it affects applicant. On an application under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure by one of several defendants, against all of whom a decree ex parte had been passed, the Court ought not to set aside any part of the decree, which does not affect the defendant applying, but only affects those defendants, who have not applied. When a decree ex parte had been passed against three defendants personally and against devasam property of which they were alleged to be managers, and one of the defendants applied to have the ex parte decree set aside, the Court can set aside only such part of the decree as affected the applicant (i.e.,) the decree against the devasam property and the personal decree against the applicant. Per MUNRO, J. The object of s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure is that a successful applicant should be placed in exactly the same position as if no decree had been passed in the suit and the decree must be set aside so far as is necessary to achieve this object and no further. The decree ought to be set aside only in respect of matters to which the applicant could have taken objection in the suit itself. Per ABDUR RAHIM, J. S. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure primâ facie means that the decree, so far as it gives any relief to the plaintiff against the defendant, who is able to establish that he was prevented for a sufficient cause from appearing at the time of hearing, is to be set aside and not against other defendants in the suit, who have not shown good cause for not appearing. The dismissal for default of an application under s. 108, Civil Procedure Code, to set aside an ex parte preliminary decree, is no bar to the decree being questioned in an appeal preferred against the final decree. The refusal of an application under s. 108, Civil Procedure Code, is no bar to the trial in a subsequent proceeding of a question which the refusal of the application has not determined. Radha Raman v. *Pran Nath, 5 C. On issues having been framed and sent down for trial, the lower Court found that Lakshmishanker had lent the moneys referred to in his written statement and held that he was entitled to set-off the same as against the sum of Rs. 41,891-2-0 for which the Appellate Court had held him liable. The plaintiff appealed. Held, that s. 111 of the Civil Procedure Code applied and that the amount due to Lakshmishanker must be set off against the plaintiff Company's demand. Ince Hall Rolling Mills Company v. *Douglas Forge Company, 8 Q. The plaintiff refused to attend on the ground that he was a person of rank and was exempted from personal appearance in the Courts of a Native State. The first Court, considering the personal appearance of the plaintiff necessary, issued an order under s. 120 of the Civil Procedure Code that he should attend, and, on his failure to do so, passed a decree against him. On appeal, the Judge reversed the decree and remanded the case for trial. Held, confirming the order of remand, that the order and decree of the first Court were alike illegal, as the plaintiff having appeared by a pleader, the Court had no power to issue an order under s. 120, unless the pleader had refused or was unable to answer a material question. 3. ——— Admission and rejection of documents. At the stage of a suit referred to in Act VIII of 1859, ss. 128, 129, and 132, the Court ought to sort the documents tendered into two classes: those relevant and admissible, and those irrelevant and inadmissible; and to reject in limine all documents which are evidently such as cannot be used as evidence in the suit. The admission of a document at this stage does not imply that it is evidence, but merely declares that it may, if properly treated, be used as evidence in the suit, and filing it as a part of the record does not confer any authority on such document or operate to dispense with any proof of genuineness. Courts of first instance ought to specify what portions of the documentary evidence on the record they have accepted, and what portions they have refused to listen to. The second defendant denied his partnership with the first defendant and his liability to the plaintiffs, and on his application the case as against him was transferred to the list of long causes, and postponed. He then filed a supplemental written statement, in which he pleaded that the cause of action alleged in the plaint was joint; that it had become merged in the judgment recovered against the first defendant, and that further proceedings in the suit were therefore barred. 3. ——— Dismissal of suit for insufficient Court fee on plaint. The Court of first instance, being of opinion that the plaint bore an insufficient Court-fee, and the plaintiff, not making good the deficiency, dismissed the suit after recording evidence, but without entering into the merits. On appeal the lower Appellate Court held that the Court-fee was sufficient, and remanded the case for trial on the merits. Held, that s. 158 of the Civil Procedure Code was not applicable to the case. 4. ——— Adjournment for final disposal—Dismissal of suit after adjournment—Non-appearance of plaintiff. In a suit, issues having been settled, the final hearing of the suit was adjourned to a fixed date for final disposal. On that date plaintiff did not appear, and the suit was dismissed under s. 148 of Act VIII of 1859. Held, that as this was not a case which had been adjourned in favour of either party to enable him to "produce his proofs or cause the attendance of his witnesses," the order was not one which could properly be made. 5. ——— Dismissal of suit after adjournment. The first hearing of a suit took place on the 16th November, when issues were settled, and the final hearing of the suit was fixed for the 22nd January following. On the 22nd of January, the plaintiff changed her vakil, and applied by the new vakil for a summons for a witness, and on the 23rd the new vakil stating that owing to the absence of his witnesses he was not prepared to go on with the case, the Judge dismissed the suit. Held, that, under s. 148 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Judge was justified in dismissing the suit. 6. ——— The first hearing of a suit was fixed for the 10th July 1867. Neither of the parties nor their vakils appeared. Thereupon the Court dismissed the suit under s. 148 of the Civil Procedure Code, but afterwards, upon the application of the plaintiff's vakil restored it to the file for hearing under s. 119. Plaintiff obtained further adjournments to produce witnesses, the last being an adjournment to the 28th September. On that day the vakils of both parties appeared, but no witnesses, and the Court again dismissed the suit under s. 148 for failure to produce witnesses. On the 22nd of October the suit was again, under s. 119, restored to the file on the application of the plaintiff's vakil, and a decision was afterwards come to for the plaintiff upon the merits. On appeal the last-mentioned decree was reversed, and the decree passed under s. 148 (whether the first or second decree was not specified) upheld, upon the ground that, as s. 119 was inapplicable to a decree passed under s. 148, the Court of first instance had acted without jurisdiction in restoring the suit to the file. Held, on special appeal, reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court, that the first decree of dismissal being a decree which might have been made under s. 147, was one to which s. 119 might be applied. That the second decree of dismissal was one to which s. 148 alone applied, consequently one subject only to review or to an appeal, and the proceeding had in October 1867, being substantially an application for review, was one which the Court had power to grant. 7. ——— Application for Succession Certificate—Order for costs of adjournment against opposing party—Effect of non-compliance with such order. A widow applied for a succession certificate to her late husband. The application was opposed by his brother, who claimed to have been undivided from him. The matter came on for hearing, but was adjourned on his application, he being ordered to pay the costs. He failed to pay the costs, and the certificate was issued to the widow. Held, that s. 158 of the Civil Procedure Code was inapplicable to the case in the absence of a specific order making the payment of costs a condition precedent to the hearing of the evidence of the party in default. VIRABHADRAPPA CHETTI v. CHINNAMMA . . I. L. R. 21 Mad. 403

8. ——— Refusal to allow examination of defendant as a witness—Dismissal in default of other evidence. The Court of first instance refused to grant plaintiff's application to be allowed to examine second defendant as a witness on her behalf, thinking the grounds of such application insufficient for the exercise of its discretion under s. 162 of the Civil Procedure Code. On the adjourned date of hearing, plaintiff failed to produce any other witness, and the suit was dismissed under s. 148. On regular appeal, the Civil Judge considered that the Court of first instance ought not to have refused plaintiff's application, but held that the refusal was a final order not open to question in appeal. On special appeal:—Held, that the Civil Judge was wrong on the latter point; that if the plaintiff had been prevented from examining the second defendant on sufficient grounds, she had not committed default under s. 148; that the decree on the finding of the Civil Court was not maintainable without enabling plaintiff to examine second defendant; and that that finding was conclusive in the special appeal. The decrees of both the lower Courts were consequently set aside and the case remanded. LATCHMANA RAU SAIB v. ROGUNATHA RAU . 6 Mad. 299

9. ——— Dismissal of suit for non-attendance of witnesses. The plaintiff, upon whose application the Court of first instance adjourned the hearing of the suit, failed to cause the attendance of his witnesses on the day fixed for the further hearing, and the Court of first instance threw out the suit, stating that it did so under s. 110, Act VIII of 1859. Both parties to the suit were represented on that day by their pleaders. The Court of first instance subsequently entertained and rejected an application under s. 119 for a re-hearing. The lower Appellate Court admitted and allowed an appeal against the order of the Court of first instance. Both the orders of the lower Courts were reversed, it being held that the Court of first instance must be regarded as having acted under s. 148 of the Code. KASHEE PERSHAD v. DEBI DAS . 7 N. 10. ——— Adjournment for process to enforce attendance of witnesses. Where adjournments are made by a Court, in order to give effect to its processes for compelling the attendance of the witnesses, being thus made as much on its own motion at the instance of the defendant as at the instance of the plaintiff, the case cannot be said to come under Act VIII of 1859, s. 148, which contemplates a case where a party has obtained time to produce his witnesses and has failed to do so. 11. ——— Procedure—Order for plaintiff to pay the cost of preparation of a Map—Non-compliance of plaintiff with order—Dismissal of suit. A Court has no power to dismiss summarily a plaintiff's suit merely because the plaintiff has omitted to comply with an order of the Court directing him, within a certain time, to pay in a sum of money as the cost of preparing a map considered by the Court to be necessary to the decision of the suit. If an order of this kind is not complied with, it is the duty of the Court to go on and decide the suit on such materials as it has before it. SITARA BEGAM v. TULSY SINGH (1901) I. L. 6. ——— In a suit for contribution in respect of Government revenue, the defendants, co-sharers, were, on the application of the plaintiff, ordered to attend to give evidence, but they failed to appear. The Principal Sudder Ameen thereupon dismissed the suit on the ground that, as the plaintiff's case had not been established, he was not entitled to a decree simply by reason of the defendants' failure to enter appearance. Held, that the suit should not have been dismissed. In a case where a party summoned to attend as a witness refuses to attend and give evidence, and the party who requires the evidence is unable to make out his case without it, his suit should not be dismissed for want of proof, when the points on which he fails depend upon matters of fact which may reasonably be presumed to be peculiarly in the knowledge of the defaulting parties, as, for instance, in the present case, the extent of their own shares, and the amount they had paid on account of revenue. In a suit to recover the balance due on a partnership transaction, the first defendant, who was examined as a witness for the plaintiff, refused to produce certain accounts relating to the partnership which he was directed to produce by the Civil Judge. Thereupon, judgment was given against the defendant under s. 170 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On appeal, the High Court, holding that the accounts were relevant and material evidence in the suit, and that the Civil Judge was justified in requiring the first defendant to produce them, and being satisfied that the accounts were in possession or control of the first defendant, affirmed the judgment of the Civil Judge. 15. ——— Discretion in enforcing penalty under the section. In a case which Act VIII of 1859, s. 170, is provided to meet, the Court ought not to take everything for granted against the party in fault, but to require the other party to prove his case so far as he can without the desired evidence, to consider well the effect of the default or refusal with reference to the rules of evidence, and to hear what evidence the defaulting party adduces before imposing upon him the penalty of default. The non-attendance of defendant when cited as a witness to give evidence is not alone sufficient to justify the decision of the suit against him under s. 170 of the Civil Procedure Code. that plaintiff was only a benami shareholder, offered to establish his case on the deposition of the plaintiff alone. The latter not appearing on summons, the suit was decreed against him under s. 170, Code of Civil Procedure. On this he appealed, and the Judge ordered the Munsif to give him further time to appear. This was granted, and then extended again and again by the Munsif, who, on the plaintiff failing to appear again, gave a decree against him under the same law as before. The case was then appealed to the Judge, who ordered the case to be tried on its merits, remarking that the presence of the plaintiff was not necessary. Held, that, as the plaintiff's liability to appear and give evidence had been already determined by a competent Court and never denied by himself, he could not take advantage of a technical objection to show that he was not bound to come because the formalities of the law had not been observed or his evidence shown to be necessary. interference by the superior Court. Accordingly, the Subordinate Judge's order under s. 170 was set aside on the ground that he had not exercised his discretion at all, inasmuch as he had ignored the fact that plaintiff had given very substantial reasons for his inability to attend and give evidence when summoned to do so ; and as the Subordinate Judge had held substantially that there was sufficient evidence to prove plaintiff's claim, plaintiff was entitled to a decree, his failure to give evidence notwithstanding. In the course of re-trial of the case on remand, the Judge required the petitioner to attend for the purpose of examination, and, as after being warned he did not do so and assigned no good cause for his absence, upheld his former decision, and rejected the application. Held, that the Judge exercised the powers conferred by s. 170, Civil Procedure Code, and that it was a proper exercise of discretion to take the course which he did take at that stage of the proceedings. The character of the land and its use for a long series of years indicating that the plaintiff, if he had been in possession, would have used the land for cultivating it himself with ordinary food crops. Held, that mesne profits should be assessed on the basis of produce and not rent. If the defendant used the land to suit his own fancy, if he did not use it in the most advantageous way, if he took the risk of cultivating it with indigo on the chance of getting high profits by manufacturing indigo, or if he adopted the more comfortable use of the land by letting it to tenants and was satisfied with a comparatively small income, the plaintiff ought not to be a loser thereby. the basis of produce adverted to. The net and not the gross produce is the true measure of damages. The resultant net produce after taking into account the cost of production and the risks of the agriculturist differs very little from competition or rack rent. Assuming complete freedom of competition, the rent paid by a tenant-at-will would practically coincide with the whole net produce of any given peace of land. Customary rent paid by most of the raiyats in a village tends to keep down the rent of zerait lands. LACHMI NARAYAN v. MAZHAR HASSAN (1908) . . . 12 C. W. N. 650

The working of s. 197 is quite consistent with the view that, where a decree for possession is given, and an enquiry as to the amount of mesne profits is reserved, the decree for possession of the land is only a partial decree in the suit, and that there is to be a further enquiry and a further decree in respect of mesne profits. The words "for the execution of the decree" refer only to the execution of the decree for the land, and cannot refer to execution of that which has not then taken the form of a decree. 6. ——— Execution of decree—Act X of 1877 (Civil Procedure Code), s. 230. The holder of a decree applied for execution under s. 230 of Act X of 1877, and the application was granted. Within three years after the passing of Act XIV of 1882, by which Act X of 1877 was repealed, he applied, for the first time, under s. 230 of the former Act, for execution of the decree. At the time this application was made more than twelve years had elapsed from the date of the decree. Held, by STRAIGHT, BROADHURST, and TYRRELL, JJ., that the application might be granted, it being the first made under s. 230 of Act XIV of 1882, and the first made after the expiration of twelve years from the date of the decree, and not being barred by the last paragraph of s. 230 of that Act, read in conjunction with the third paragraph of s. 230 of Act X of 1877, the "law in force" mentioned in the last paragraph of s. 230 of Act XIV of 1882 referring to the law of limitation in force at the time the Act was passed, and not to the third paragraph of s. 230 of Act X of 1877. Held by STUART, C.J., and OLDFIELD, J., that the application should not be granted, the effect of the last paragraph of s. 230 of Act XIV of 1882 being to bar any proceedings to enforce a decree under that Act which would have been barred under s. 230 of Act X of 1877 if taken thereunder, on the ground that the period of twelve years had elapsed from the date specified in that section. MUSHARRAF BEGUM v. GHALIB ALI . . . . I. L. R. 6 All. 189

8. ——— Former application for execution under Act VIII of 1859. An application under Act VIII of 1859 for execution of a decree was rejected by the District Judge on the ground that the judgment-creditor had withdrawn from the former application. This order was reversed on appeal, and the case was sent back for disposal on its merits. The Judge then held that Act X of 1877, which had just come into force, applied, and, on the ground that the decree-holder had failed to get execution upon his former application, dismissed the petition. The Judge referred the case to the High Court upon the question whether he was, under the circumstances, at liberty to grant the appplication. Held, that he was. The application should have been dealt with under the law which was in force at the time execution was sought. The effect of the provisions of s. 230 of Act X of 1877, considered. 9. ——— Effect of striking off execution proceedings—Procedure. A decree was obtained on the 10th July 1858, and applications to execute it were made in June 1862 and January 1866. The last application prior to the coming into operation of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 was on the 10th January 1876. This proceeding was struck off. The decree-holder on the 13th June 1879 again applied for execution; the decree was transferred to S for execution, where, on objection that it was more than twelve years old, and therefore barred by s. 230 of Act X of 1877, the execution proceedings were again struck off on the 17th January 1880. This order was appealed against, and eventually, on the 25th April 1881, the application was re-admitted. In June 1881 an application was made to the S Court for transfer of the case for execution to D, which was granted, and the case transferred; but no steps having been taken by the decree-holder in the D Court, it was struck off by that Court on the 19th August 1881. On the 4th March 1882 (the judgment-debtor having died meanwhile), an application was made to the D Court to restore the proceedings for execution against his representative. Notices were issued, and the 2nd June was eventually fixed for the hearing. On that day no one was present on behalf of the decree-holder (whose pleader had died in the meantime), and the case was again struck off. On the 11th July 1882, application was made to restore the proceedings, notices were issued, and a day fixed for hearing, and after numerous adjournments the objections of the judgment-debtor were overruled on the 5th March 1883, and execution of the decree granted. On appeal the Judge found that the execution proceedings had been continuous throughout, and that there had been no unreasonable delay in the prosecution of the execution proceedings. Held, that execution of the decree was not barred by s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This policy is to prevent a sudden disturbance of existing rights in consequence of new legislation; but it is beyond its object and scope to revive rights or remedies which have already expired before the new Act comes into operation, and although the Legislature may revive such rights or remedies, it can only do so by express words to that effect. The transferee failed to pay the Court-fee leviable for the issue of such notice, and the Court dismissed his application. The transferee subsequently made a second application to be allowed to execute the decree. Held, that such application could not be rejected, with reference to s. 230 of Act X of 1877, on the ground that due diligence had not been used on the former application to procure complete satisfaction of the decree, because such application had not been granted; and, therefore, the question whether "on the last preceding application" due diligence was used to procure such satisfaction did not arise. 24. ——— Passing of the Act—Meaning of the expression "granted" in s. 230. Under s. 230 of Act X of 1877, an application for execution is said to be "granted" when it is made regularly and formally. The expression "granted" is equivalent to the expression "admitted" as used in s. 245. 25. ——— Meaning of "granted." Under s. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, after a decree is twelve years old, there is a prohibition against its being executed more than once,—i.e., an application for execution should not be granted if a previous application has been allowed under the provisions of that section. mere filing of a petition with the result that the application contained in it is subsequently struck off is not "granting" an application within the meaning of s. 230 of the Code; and ss. 245, 248, and 249 show that there is a broad distinction between admitting an application for the purpose of issuing notice to the other side and of hearing the objections that may be urged, and a decision of the Court as provided in s. 249. In 1865 a decree was passed for a sum of money payable by yearly instalments for a period of sixteen years. Down to March 1877, various amounts were paid on account of the decree. In that month an application was made for execution of the decree, the result being an arrangement for liquidation of the amount then due, which was confirmed by the Court. A second application for execution was made on the 9th March 1881, the decree then being more than twelve years old. All that was done with reference to this application was that notice to appear was issued to the judgment-debtor's representatives, and subsequently a petition was filed notifying that an arrangement had been effected, under which a certain sum had been paid by one of the said representatives in satisfaction of the claim against him, and that the other had agreed to pay the balance by yearly instalments. Upon this the application for execution was struck off. On the 5th March 1883, another application for execution was made, notice to appear was issued, and after this notice a petition was put in intimating that an arrangement had been come to, and praying that execution might be postponed, whereupon the application was struck off. Again, on the 31st March 1884, the decree-holder applied once more for execution of the decree. Held, that neither the previous application of the 9th March 1881 nor that of the 5th March 1883 could properly be said to have been "granted" within the meaning of s. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, and, under these circumstances, the decree, though twelve years old and upwards was not barred by that section, and the application for execution should be allowed. 26. ——— Twelve years old decree—Meaning of "granted." A decree passed in April 1872 was kept alive by various applications for execution up to 1883. In February and December of that year two such applications were made, but the proceedings on both occasions terminated in the applications being struck off without any money being realized under the decree. In November 1884, the decree-holder again applied for execution, the application being the first made after the decree had become twelve years old, and being made within three years from the passing of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. Held, that the application must be entertained in accordance with the ruling of the Full Bench in Musharraf Begum v. *Ghalib Ali, I. 27. ——— Application for execution of decree—Limitation—Subsequent application to execute the same decree—"Granted," meaning of—Civil Procedure Code, s. 235. The "subsequent application to execute the same decree" mentioned in s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure means a substantive application for execution in the form prescribed by s. 235 of the Code. Hence, where an application for execution in accordance with s. 235 of the Code has been made within the period of limitation prescribed by s. 230 and has been granted, that is, execution has been ordered in accordance with the prayer of the decree-holder's application, the right of the decree-holder to obtain execution will not necessarily be defeated if, by reason of objections on the part of the judgment-debtor or action taken by the Court or other cause for which the decree-holder is not responsible, final completion of the proceedings in execution initiated by the application under s. 235 above referred to cannot be obtained within the period limited by s. 230. Further applications of the decree-holder to the Court executing the decree to go on from the point where the execution proceedings had been arrested and complete execution of his decree would be applications merely ancillary to the substantive application under s. 235, and would not be obnoxious to the bar of s. 230. Delhi and London Bank v. *Reilly, Weekly Notes, All. 31. ——— Second application for execution of decree—Failure to satisfy decree on first application. In execution of a decree passed more than twelve years before the date of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), certain judgment-creditors applied for the attachment and sale of certain specified property belonging to their judgment-debtor, previous to the date on which the three years allowed for such execution under s. 230 would have expired. Subsequently, after the three years had elapsed, they filed a fresh application praying that certain other property of their judgment-debtor might be attached and sold in lieu of that specified in their former application, and that the latter might be released. Held, that execution of the decree was barred by limitation. Per PRINSEP, J. Under s. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, it was intended by the Legislature that a decree-holder seeking to execute a decree passed more than twelve years before should have one opportunity to execute that decree, and that if he fails to satisfy it on that application, any further application becomes barred. 32. ——— Decree—Execution—Decree more than twelve years old—Limitation. An application for execution of a decree obtained against the judgment-debtor in 1870 was presented by the applicant on the 26th January 1885. Several previous applications for execution had been made, and the last two, viz., on the 29th July 1881 and 29th June 1882, had been granted. The judgment-debtor was arrested and brought before the Court. He contended that execution of the decree was barred. Both the lower Courts were of opinion that the decree was not barred, and allowed execution to issue. On appeal by the judgment-debtor to the High Court:—Held, that the application for execution was too late. As there had been an application made and granted on the 29th July 1881 under the Code of 1877, and twelve years from the date of the decree would have elapsed before June 1885, the application in question was barred, and was not saved by the concluding clause of s. 230 of the Code (Act XIV of 1882). 34. ——— Finality of order made in execution proceedings—Decree payable by instalments. In 1868 a decree was obtained for R1,100, which provided that the amount should be paid in instalments, the first instalment being R200 to be paid at the end of the first year, and that the other instalments should be R100 at the end of each subsequent year, and that in the event of failure to carry this out, and 2½ months after the falling due of the instalment, the whole amount should be exigible in a lump sum with interest at 8 annas per cent. per mensem. In 1877 the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, asserting that R600 had been paid up to that time by five instalments, one of R200 and four of R100 each, and that default had been made in payment of the fifth instalment of R100, and he asked to recover the whole amount due on the decree. No order was passed on this application, and eventually the case was struck off. In 1880 the decree-holder again applied for execution of the decree, upon the same grounds as those upon which the previous application was based. Notice was issued and served and a warrant issued for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, but eventually the case was struck off. In 1883 the decree-holder on the same grounds made another application for execution. It was contended by the judgment-debtor that execution was barred by s. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as no instalments had been paid, and even if they had been paid, they could not be recognized, not having been certified. Held, that the proper time from which to reckon the limitation of twelve years was the fifth year from the date of the bond, the whole claim from the beginning and the order passed in 1880 having gone upon that basis, that the Court could not go behind that order, and that consequently the decree-holder was within time and might take out execution. On the 14th March 1881 the decree-holder filed a petition praying that certain properties of the debtor might be attached and sold and the proceeds applied in payment of the wasilat. Held, that, under s. 230 of Act X of 1877, the application of 14th March 1881 was not barred. The decree of 1854, so far as the wasilat was concerned, might be taken to be merely interlocutory, and did not become final until January 1881. BARODA SUNDARI DABIA v. FERGUSSON . 11 C. L. The Court made an order directing that such petition should be filed. Held, that this order did not amount to one directing payment of money to be made at a certain date, which would give a fresh period of limitation under s. 230 (b) of the Civil Procedure Code. The decree was kept alive till 13th December 1876, when the decree-holder brought a suit to set aside certain alienations made by the judgment-debtor and alleged to be fictitious and fraudulent. Having succeeded in the suit and in rendering the property alienated available for attachment under his decree, the respondent again applied for execution in 1879, but not against the property fictitiously alienated. Lastly, the respondent applied on September 28th, 1880—more than twelve years after decree—for execution against certain immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, other than the property fictitiously alienated, in the petitioner's possession. Held, that, having regard to the fraud of the judgment-debtor, the application was not barred by s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In order to obtain the benefit of the proviso in that section, it is not necessary that a judgment-creditor should prove that the fraud of the judgment-debtor continued so as to prevent execution of the decree at any time. "Fraud" or "force" on the part of a judgment-debtor gives a new starting point for the period of limitation, and an application for the execution of a decree may be granted at any time within twelve years after the date on which a judgment-debtor has by "fraud" or "force" prevented execution of a decree. Though he has a security he has no charge on the property, which remains that of the defendant available for other decree-holders. Nor does a decree following such attachment constitute a plaintiff a secured creditor, but the latter must, as any other creditor, apply for execution from which application he is not exempted by s. 490 of the Civil Procedure Code. In short, a plaintiff decree-holder, who has attached, before jugdment, has not by reason of such attachment or process incidental thereto any right to be treated preferentially to other judgment-creditors. On the 16th March 1904, D applied for execution of the decree against one of the judgment-debtors, who had erected a pucca building on the 17th and the 18th February 1904 and the only relief asked for was the demolition of the building. The lower Courts ordered, under s. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code, for the attachment of the judgment-debtor's property for one year. Held, that no notice to the judgment-debtor calling upon him to obey the decree was necessary under s. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code. The application was opposed by the judgment-debtor and was rejected, and the Court referred the transferee to a regular suit. After taking various proceedings ineffectually, he instituted a suit for the recovery of the sum to which he was entitled as costs under the decree transferred to him. Held, that the plaintiff, as the holder of the decree by assignment, could only recover the amount under it by executing the decree, and not by a separate suit ; but that he was entitled to have a decree declaring that the assignment to him of the decree-holder's rights under the decree was valid, and gave him a right to execute it, and that the Court's order under s. 232, which disallowed the execution, was an improper one, a suit for this relief being maintainable ; for, there being no appeal from orders under s. 232, there would otherwise be no remedy ; and that, looking at the plaint and the issues on which the parties were divided, and the fact that the Court which refused the plaintiff's application for execution referred him to a regular suit, this relief might properly be given in the present suit. Per MAHMOOD, J., that the suit was maintainable, inasmuch as the present plaintiff never having been accepted on the record as holder of the decree, the questions which were disposed of by the Court executing the decree, as between the plaintiff and the judgment-debtor, could not be regarded as questions within s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. 20. ——— Joint decree—Purchase of decree by creditor of one of several judgment-debtors—Probability of decree being executed against another judgment-debtor—Ground for refusing execution to purchaser. A decree for damages and costs having been obtained against P and C, A, to whom P was indebted and was about to assign property as security, in order to prevent P being adjudicated an insolvent and with a view to execute the decree against C if possible, purchased the decree. A applied, under s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for leave to execute the decree. This application was rejected by KERNAN, J., on the ground that the decree was certain to be executed against C, and not against P, under whose orders and for whose benefit C acted when he infringed the right of, and became liable in damages to, the plaintiff in the suit. Held on appeal, that the benefit likely to be gained by P by this transaction was no sufficient ground for refusing leave to A to execute the decree. 21. ——— Joint decree—Transfer of a money decree to one of several co-judgment-debtors. Certain property was mortgaged by A to B. Subsequently, this property was purchased by C at a sale held in execution of a decree obtained by a third person against A; B then brought a suit on his mortgage-bond against A and C, and obtained a decree for the sale of the mortgaged properties, and also a personal decree against A; B assigned his rights under this decree to C, who applied for execution under s. 232 of the Code. A objected to execution issuing, relying on prov. (b) to s. 232. Held, that prov. (b) to s. 232 applies only to decrees for money personally due by two or more persons; and that the decree obtained by B against A and C not being a personal decree against C (he having been made a defendant only by reason that he had purchased the mortgaged property subject to the mortgage debt), C as assignee of B was entitled to take out execution. 23. ——— Execution of a decree of the Agent for Sardars—Rights of transferee of a decree. A in 1839 obtained a decree against B, a sardar, in the Court of the Agent for Sardars. The decree was executed in the Agent's Court until B's death in 1868. B's status as a sardar under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Agent did not descend to his sons, and the decree was transferred to the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ahmednagar for execution. The case went up twice to the High Court, under whose orders the execution was for several years continued in favour of A's representatives against the estate of B's sons. In 1885, one of A's representatives assigned his interest under the decree to C and D. Thereupon the transferees C and D applied to the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ahmednagar to have their names substituted in the place of the transferor in the execution-proceedings. The Subordinate Judge rejected this application, on the ground that he could not recognize the transfer of the decree either under s. 372 or 232 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, reversing the order of the lower Court, that the assignment of the decree-holder's rights to execution in this case was one approved by the law as contained in s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The transferee of a decree gains by the transfer the rights of the transferor. VISHNU SAKHARAM NAGARKAR v. KRISHNARAO MALHAR . . . I. L. R. 11 Bom. 153

If a decree is transferred by assignment after the death of the judgment-debtor, notice of the transfer, as required by s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code, may be served on the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. 27. ——— Transfer of decree by operation of law—Representative of original decree-holder—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 244—Right to appeal against order refusing execution. R died in May 1859, leaving his property to his executors in trust for the appellant P, and he directed that the property should be assigned by them to the appellant as soon as he came of age. In August 1868, the executors filed this suit against L as manager of certain landed property belonging to the Hallai Bhattia caste, and known as Mahajan Wadi, to recover certain loans made by them as executors to him as manager of the said Wadi. On the 11th May 1870, while this suit was pending, the executors assigned all the property of their testator to the appellant P. By the deed of assignment they assigned to him (inter alia) "all moveable property, debts, claims, and things in action whatsoever vested in them as such executors." No steps were taken, subsequently to this assignment, to make the assignee, P, a party to the suit, which proceeded without amendment. On the 23rd January 1873, a decree was passed for the plaintiffs on the record for R31,272-13-5, and it was declared that the said sum should be a first charge on the rents and income of the said Wadi. Subsequently to this decree, L opened an account in the name of the appellant P, and from time to time made payments to him on account of the decree. The last of these payments was made on the 19th November 1884. None of these payments were certified to the Court. In 1885 the respondent V was appointed to the office of manager of the Hallai Bhattia caste in the place of L, the original defendant in the suit. On the 4th January 1886, his attorneys wrote to the appellant's attorneys offering to pay the appellant the balance due to him under the decree. Subsequently, however, he refused to make any payment to the appellant, whereupon the appellant applied for execution of the decree against him as manager of the said Wadi. He claimed to be a transferee of the decree under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code. His application was refused by the Judge in chambers. Held, that the appellant was a transferee of the decree within the meaning of s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code. The decree had been transferred to him "by operation of law." As such, he was entitled to sue out execution, and was to be regarded as the representative of the original decree-holder within the meaning of cl. (c) of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code and had a right of appeal against the order of the Judge in chambers refusing execution. PURMANANDAS JIWANDAS v. VALLABDAS WALLJI

28. ——— Transfer of decree—Representatives of intermediate transferee—Omission to give notice of application for substitution of names—Title of assignee. The holder of a decree for the sale of mortgaged property having transferred the same to M by registered instrument, M transferred the decree to other persons, and the co-transferees applied under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code to have their names substituted for those of the original decree-holders. The judgment-debtor opposed the application on the ground that M's name had not been substituted for the names of the original decree-holders who had transferred to him. It appeared that no notice had been issued to M under s. 232 of the Code, that he was dead, and that his legal representative had not been cited as required by law. The application was allowed by the Courts below. Held, that, even assuming that the judgment-debtor had a locus standi to raise the objection that notice had not been issued to the applicant's transferor, he had no possible interest in the question, and could not be prejudiced by the passing of the order; that it was not necessary to cite the representatives of the transferor; and that the order not being one upon which execution of the decree could issue, but merely for a transfer of names, the objection that the transferor had not been cited under s. 232 was not a substantial one. Held, that it could not be said that where a decree has been assigned by one assignor to

The will was afterwards disputed by the minor son of the testator, and probate was revoked; but while the mother was in possession of the estate as executrix, she sued and obtained a decree for rent under Bengal Act VIII of 1869. Upon the application of the minor for the execution of the decree:—Held, that the minor was in a position to execute the decree, his succession to the estate of his father being a succession or transfer by operation of law within the meaning of s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, also, that the mode in which the decree was executed under the old Rent Act, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, was, in so far as it was a right at all that belonged to the judgment-creditor, not a private right, but a mere right of procedure, and the execution was, therefore, to be governed by Act VIII of 1885. Plea by defendant that he has paid to the insolvent overruled on the ground that payment to insolvent pending insolvency cannot bind the official assignee, and decree made. Subsequently the insolvent entered into a composition with his creditors, and executed an assignment of his estate, effects, and assets in favour of B in consideration of B's becoming surety to the creditors for the payment of the composition. Accordingly, an order was made setting aside the adjudication and giving liberty to the official assignee to make over to the insolvent his estate and effects. B now applied for execution of the decree in this suit against the defendant. Held, that the order setting aside the adjudication did not have the effect of annulling the decree in any way. It operated in passing the benefit under the decree from the official assignee as representing the creditors to the present applicant, and made the latter by operation of law an assignee under s. 232, Civil Procedure Code. It directed, among other things, that C should recover R22,748 and costs from the property of A and L; that C was entitled to get back from the possession of P and S, as heirs respectively of A and L, all books of account, bonds and other papers belonging to C's father; and that "it will be decided during the execution proceedings as to how far the heir defendants are personally liable in this suit." C died after he had obtained this decree leaving P as his heir, to whom the decree was transferred by operation of law. P then applied for execution of the decree against S. The Subordinate Judge rejected the application on the ground that P was precluded by the proviso to s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code from executing the decree against his co-judgment-debtor S. Held, (i) that there was nothing in the decree which saddled P and S with any personal liability to pay money, either jointly or severally; the amount of R22,748 and costs which was recoverable under the decree was made payable not by P and S, but out of the property of A and L; (ii) that, although by reason of the direction in the decree that the question of the personal liability of P and S should be determined in execution proceedings, there might be subsequently, when that liability had been determined, a decree for money against them; until then it was a mere contingency, which would not make the decree as for money against P and S; (iii) that therefore P was entitled to execute the decree against the estate of L in the hands of S. In s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the phrase "a decree for money against several persons" means a personal decree for the payment of money by two or more defendants jointly. The interest of the decree-holders in these lands was then sold in execution of a decree, which had been passed against them, and was purchased by the present plaintiff. The present plaintiff applied for execution of the original decree and to be placed in possession of the property he had purchased. The petition was rejected, and he now sued to obtain possession of the properties he had purchased. On the question being raised whether the suit was barred by s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure:—Held, that plaintiff was entitled to relief. He was not a transferee of all that had been decreed in the original suit, inasmuch as the right to mesne profits and costs had not passed to him. If, for that reason he was not entitled to be recognised as the transferee of the decree, and to execute it as such, he was entitled to enforce his right by suit. Assuming, however, that no separate suit lay, and that he should have proceeded by way of execution, the case was one in which the plaint should be treated as an application for execution. Sutaput Roy v. *Syed Alli Hossein, 24 W. RAVI VARMA v. KOMAN I. L. R. 5 Mad. 223

7. ——— Decree obtained against father executed against his sons as his representatives. In an undivided Hindu family, although the interests of the sons in the ancestral estate are liable to satisfy the father's debt, the holder of a money-decree against the father, who has not attached the ancestral estate before the death of the father, cannot execute the decree against the ancestral property as assets in the hands of the representatives of the judgment-debtor under s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877. Zamindar of Sivagiri v. Alwar Ayyangar, I. L. R. 3 Mad. 42, followed. HANUMANTHA v. HANUMAYYA . I. L. R. 5 Mad. 232

8. ——— Decree for Maintenance obtained against father. A decree for maintenance against a Hindu directing an annual payment to be made by him to the decree-holder during her life-time can be executed after the death of the judgment-debtor against his sons to the extent of the assets of the deceased taken by them, but such assets do not include the share of the father in the family property. KARPAKAMBAL v. SUBBAYYAN . . I. L. R. 5 Mad. 234

9. ——— Liability of son for father's debt—Decree against zamindari directing sale of land—Execution against son of zamindar. A suit having been brought against the holder of an impartible zamindari upon a promissory note, a decree was passed by consent, whereby certain land was directed to be sold in the event of the debt not being paid in a certain way. After the death of the zamindar execution proceedings were taken against his son to obtain a sale of the said land. Held, that the decree could be executed against the son. ZAMINDAR OF SIVAGIRI v. TIRUVENGADA I. L. R. 7 Mad. 339

10. ——— Personal decree by one partner against another for dissolution and for a definite sum of money—Death of judgment-debtor—Right of decree-holder to execute—Joinder of undivided brother of deceased—Legality—Hindu Law. Petitioner had obtained a decree against his three partners dissolving the partnership and ordering the first defendant to pay him a definite sum of money. Before the decree was executed, first defendant died, and petitioner now sought to execute it, under s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure, against the widow and undivided brother of first defendant, who had been joined as defendants as the legal representatives of the deceased. The first defendant had not been sued in a representative capacity as managing member of his family, nor was it shown that the business was a family business. Held, that, inasmuch as the decree was purely in personam against the first defendant, and not a decree against any property represented by him, or one winding up the affairs of the partnership and providing for payment of its debts and for distributing the surplus according to the shares of the partners, petitioner was not entitled to execute it as against the brother by attaching and bringing to sale joint family property, which had come to him by survivorship, whether it was ordinary family property or property acquired for the family by the partnership trade. Held, further, that execution should proceed only against the widow, who alone was the legal representative of the first defendant, and the brother's name should be removed from the record. Execution should be granted, under s. 234, against the widow as the legal representative of the deceased first defendant. If the deceased had left any separate property, it could be attached, even in the hands of the fifth defendant just as it might be attached, if it were found in the hands of any stranger. 11. ——— "Legal Representative," meaning of—Decree against life holder—Execution against estate, when allowable—Holding a life estate with power to litigate on behalf of estate—Representation by agreement of parties and representation in law—Difference—Practice—Analogous Appeals, hearing of. J, a Hindu widow, adopted B as her son under an anumatipatra of her husband, which provided that she was to hold and manage the properties left by him during her lifetime. Disputes arose between J and B as regards her right to hold the properties after the adoption, and were ultimately settled by B executing in J's favour an ekrarnama, which provided, inter alia, that J was to possess and enjoy the estate without power of alienation during her lifetime, with liberty to carry on litigations in her own name. Held, that J did not hold a Hindu widow's estate, but an estate created by the ekrarnama. That a decree recovered by the respondents against J for possession, with mesne profits and costs, of some lands, which J had been holding as an accretion to the estate, could, after J's death, be executed against B's widow, who succeeded to the estate on J's death as B's heiress, although B was no party to the suit—J having defended the suit in the interest of the estate and under the authority of the ekrarnama, which bound B and his heirs. Execution was prayed to recover only the costs awarded by the decree. Held, that the lower Court had rightly substituted B's widow in the place of J and execution ought to proceed against her. The meaning of "legal representative" in s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure discussed. Per BRETT, J.—The term "legal representative" has been used in s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure to meet the circumstances of a certain event, viz., the passing of the property, the subject of the litigation, on the death of the deceased judgment-debtor to her successor and to include such successor either to her estate or to the property in suit. Per WOODROFFE, J.—The term "legal representative" is not limited to administrators, executors and heirs, and must, on the authorities be held to include any person, who in law represents the estate of a deceased judgment-debtor. Quære: Whether the principle of representation, which exists by law in the case of decrees against Hindu widows and co-parceners, can be extended to cases, such as the present, of agreement and conveyance between parties. Where of two analogous appeals, the preparation of the paper-book of one was delayed by the appellant till long after the other was heard and decided by a Division Bench against the appellant, and at the hearing of it before another Division Bench, the Court was asked to differ from that decision and to refer the case to a Full Bench, the Court disapproved of the course adopted by the appellant, as an attempt to introduce a very undesirable precedent. II, Art. 179.* A money decree obtained against the father of an undivided Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara law can be executed after his death against his sons to the extent of the ancestral property that has come to their hands even if the debt has been incurred for the sole purposes of the father provided that it is not tainted with immorality or illegality and if the son against whom the decree is sought to be executed as representative of his father takes the objection that the debts are tainted with immorality, he can do so under section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Umed Hathising v. Goman Bhaiji, I. L. R. 20 Bom. 385, followed. There is no substantial distinction, in regard to questions arising in execution, between the position of legal representatives added as parties to the suit before decree and legal representatives brought in after decree. All questions between them and the decree-holder relating to execution must alike be disposed of under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The last paragraph of s. 244 only applies when a question arises as to who is a 'representative' of a party for the purpose of that section and ought not to be construed as cutting down the power given to the Court which passed the decree by the express words of s. 234. There is no difficulty in reconciling ss. 234 and 248: they can be construed together and due effect given to the provisions of each. The word 'representative' in s. 244 has a much wider meaning than the words 'legal representative' in s. 234. An order under s. 234 is not made in exercise of the powers 'in executing a decree,' but as a preliminary step towards those powers being exercised by the Court to which the decree has been transferred, s. 234 contemplates the making of an order. The legislature in enacting s. 244 (c) were not distinguishing cases, where a decree had been transferred for execution, between the powers to be exercised by the Court which passed the decree and the powers to be exercised by the Court to which the decree has been transferred respectively, and effect must be given to the express provisions of s. 234. A statute ought to be construed so that, if it can be prevented, no clause, section or word shall be superfluous, void or insignificant. The Queen v. Bishop of Oxford, L. R. 4 Q. B. D. 245. Per DAVIES J.—There is a direct and irreconcilable conflict between the provision in the first paragraph of s. 234 and that in cl. (c), s. 244, read with the last paragraph of that section. By the Divisional Bench.—An application under s. 234 made to the Court to which the decree is transferred for execution cannot, when objection is taken by the other party to its being entertained, be treated as a mere irregularity under s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure. ——— ss. 234, 372—Legal Representative, execution against—Transferee, after money decree against a company, of such company's properties with liabilities cannot be proceeded against as a legal representative. B sued A & Co., the proprietors of a rice mill, for moneys due in respect of contracts connected with the said mill and obtained a money decree against A & Co. While the suit was pending A & Co. sold the business with all its assets and liabilities to another company C, of which A & Co. were managing agents and the suit was defended by A & Co. on behalf of C, but the fact was not brought to the notice of the Court. After decree A & Co. became insolvent and B sought execution against C as the legal representative of A & Co. Held, that B was not so entitled. Neither s. 234 nor s. 372 of the Civil Procedure Code (supposing the latter applicable to execution) authorised such a proceeding. Harish Chandra Tewary v. *Chandpore Company, Ltd., I. L. 1. QUESTIONS IN EXECUTION OF DECREE.

1. ——— Meaning of section. S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that there must be some question in controversy and conflict in execution, which has been brought to a final determination and conclusion, so as to be binding upon the parties to the proceedings, and which must relate in terms to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree. HULAS RAI v. PIRTHI SINGH . . I. L. R. 9 All. 500

—Suit——— Proceeding in execution Semble: That a proceeding under s. 244 is not a suit within the meaning of s. 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 12. VENKATA CHANDRAPPA NAYAVARU v. VENKATARAMA REDDI I. L. R. 22 Mad. 256

3. ——— Question raised for first time in execution. Held, that a question raised for the first time between the parties to a decree at the time of its execution, although not expressly reserved in that decree for determination at the time of its execution, may be enquired into and determined by the Court executing the decree under s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. JANOJI BANAJI v. VYANKATESH SHRINIVAS 2 Bom. 393: 2nd Ed. 371

4. ——— Decree subsequently modified, question as to execution of. Where it is contended that the decree that has been executed is not the decree that was passed between the parties, but a decree modified by a subsequent decretal order, s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, does not apply, the question not being one relating to the execution of the decree and between the parties to the suit. SANJEEVIYAH v. NANJIYAH . . . . 4 Mad. 453

6. ——— Transfer of decree for execution—Procedure of Court passing and Court executing transferred decree—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 243, 545. The provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code govern equally the procedure of the Court which passed the decree, when executing such decree, and the Court to which the decree is sent for execution. Cooke v. *Hiseeba Beebee, 6 N. 7. ——— Question after Court has executed decree and become functus officio—Review. Where a judgment-debtor pending the execution proceedings, was granted permission to examine the state of the accounts, but failed to do so, and then made a fresh application to the Court for the same purpose after the execution proceedings had been struck off, and the decree declared to be satisfied: Held, that the question must be determined with reference to the provisions of s. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the only course open to the judgment-debtor would have been to apply for a review of the order which declared the decree to be satisfied and struck off the execution proceedings. Held, also, that the words, "the following question shall be determined by order of the Court executing the decree," of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be interpreted to mean the Court executing the decree at the time when the application is made, and that they do not include the Court which has executed the decree, and has, therefore, become functus officio. FAKARUDDIN MAHOMED AHSAN v. OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL . I. L. R. 10 Calc. 538

8. ——— Suit brought under circumstances where the proper remedy was by application under s. 244—Discretion of Court to treat the plaint as an application under s. 244. Where certain judgment-debtors, whose property had been sold in execution of a decree, brought a suit to have the sale in execution set aside under circumstances in which their proper remedy in law, if any, was by means of an application under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it was held that it was not an improper exercise of the discretion of the Court in which such suit was brought to treat the plaint as an application under s. 244 of the Code. Biru Mahata v. *Shyama Churn Khawas, I. On appeal, the Court of first appeal gave them a decree against P. In execution of this decree, they attached and were paid, as belonging to P, certain money deposited in the Government Treasury in K's name. On appeal by P, the Court of second appeal reversed this decree, and restored the decree of the first Court dismissing the suit as regards P. P thereupon applied in execution of his decree for a refund of the money. The plaintiffs objected on the ground that the money belonged to K. Held, that the Court executing P's decree was not competent to decide the question whether the money belonged to P or to K, such question not being one between P and them only, but involving and raising a question of title between him and K as to their conflicting

14. ——— Suit to set aside sale—Fraud—Sale under Act X of 1859—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11. B obtained an ex parte decree for arrears of rent against S under Act X of 1859, and in execution of that decree brought the tenure to sale. At the sale the tenure was purchased by N. S then brought a suit against B and N to set aside the sale on the ground that the rent-decree and all execution-proceedings taken thereunder were fraudulent, and alleging that B was the actual purchaser in the name of N. An objection was taken that the suit would not lie, and that the questions in the suit were such as could have been determined, and were determined, by the Court executing the decree:—Held, that neither s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code nor the corresponding s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 had any application to proceedings in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859, and that the suit, being one to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud, was maintainable. Saroda Churn Chuckerbutty v. *Mahomed Isuf Meah, I. 15. ——— Question as to whether purchase-money has been paid within time—Conditional decree. The plaintiff in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption obtained a decree to the effect mentioned in s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code. On payment by him of the purchase-money into Court, the defendants objected, in the execution department, to such payment, on the ground that it had not been made within time. The Court which made the decree disallowed the objection. The defendants appealed from the order disallowing the objection: they had previously appealed from the decree. The Appellate Court heard both appeals together, and, holding that the purchase-money had not been paid into Court within time, reversed the decree and allowed the objection. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the High Court from the Appellate Court's decree, which was admitted. He also preferred an appeal from the appellate order allowing the objection, but this appeal was rejected as being beyond time, and such order became final. Held, that, inasmuch as the question whether the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money into Court within time was not one relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, but was one which should be decided in the suit itself, and therefore the proceedings in the execution department touching that question were ill-founded, such order was not a bar to the hearing of the second appeal preferred by the plaintiff. 19. ——— Liability of property for debts—Separate suit—Debts of father. Whether property seized by a judgment-creditor in the hands of his deceased judgment-creditor's son is held by the son under such circumstances as render him liable for his father's debts is a question which cannot be tried in execution proceedings, but must form the subject of an independent suit. 20. ——— Liability of son for father's debt—Suit against son to enforce decree against father—Limitation—Suit to recover money charged on land by decree. A suit for money having been brought against the holder of an impartible zamindari, a decree was passed in 1867 by consent to the effect that the zamindar undertook to pay a certain sum by yearly instalments and hypothecated certain lands as security. A memorandum of this decree was registered under s. 42 of Act XX of 1866. The last instalment fell due in February 1870. The decree was kept alive against the zamindar up to his death in 1873. Upon the death of the zamindar, proceedings in execution were taken against his son, who succeeded to the zamindari, but were set aside on appeal. In January 1882 a suit was brought against the son to recover the amount of the last instalment due by his father under the decree of 1867. Held, that the suit was neither barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure nor by limitation. 21. ——— Hindu law—Obligation of son to pay debt of deceased father—Nature of obligation. D obtained a decree against the father of A and R, Hindus, on a hypothecation-bond, whereby certain land was pledged as security for repayment of a loan. The decree declared the land liable to be sold for repayment of the debt. The judgment-debtor having died before the decree was executed, A and R were made parties to the proceedings in execution and the land was attached. A and R objected to the attachment on the ground that their shares in the land were not liable to be sold in execution of the decree, as they were not parties to the suit. This objection was allowed, and D brought a suit for a declaration that the property was liable to be sold. That suit was dismissed, on the ground that a suit for a declaration would not lie. D then sued to recover from A and R the balance due under the decree against their father after crediting the amount recovered by the sale of their father's share. It was objected that the suit was barred by s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, that the duty of a son under Hindu law to pay his father's debts out of his own share of ancestral estate is not a matter which can be decided under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The questions contemplated by s. 244 are those which relate to the enforcement of the obligation created by the decree. The obligation to pay the father's debts out of the son's share of the ancestral state is not an obligation created by a decree against the father. ARIABUDRA v. DORASAMI . I. L. R. 11 Mad. 413

22. ——— Suit against sons of a deceased judgment-debtor—Decree for money against father to be discharged by instalments—Separate suit—Liability of son for father's debt. A personal decree on a mortgage was passed against a Hindu (the mortgagor) and his two sons on 19th October 1877. The decree provided for payment of the secured debt in various instalments by May 1895. The mortgagor died in 1883, having discharged part of the debt. The decree-holder having attached certain family property in execution, the mortgagor's two younger sons, who had not been born at the date of the above decree, objected that their shares were not liable to attachment. This objection prevailed, the Court expressing the opinion that the matter in controversy should be determined in a regular suit. The other defendants in the suit of 1877 had both died in the interval, one of them leaving infant sons. The decree-holder (in whose sole name the mortgage stood) now sued the sons of the mortgagor and their infant nephews for payment out of the family property of all unpaid instalments, and objection was taken that the question whether ancestral property is liable or not for the father's debt in the present suit was one which related to the execution of the decree in the former suit, and that the order whereby the attachment was raised was an order under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and no fresh suit could be brought. Held, that the plaintiff was not precluded from maintaining the suit against the sons of the mortgagor by Civil Procedure Code, s. 244. 24. ——— Mode of redeeming mortgaged lands in execution of former decree. A mortgagee was put into possession of the mortgaged property, under a decree obtained by him against the mortgagor, to the effect that the mortgagee should remain in possession until the mortgage debt was paid. The mortgagor subsequently paid into Court the money due under the mortgage decree, and applied to be restored to the possession of the mortgaged property. Both the lower Courts granted the mortgagor's application. On special appeal: Held (following the decision of the Full Bench in Ravji Shivram Joshi v. Kaluram Malukchand, 12 Bom. 161), that such an application was not the proper mode for the mortgagor to redeem the property and to recover possession from the mortgagee, the previous decree for possession having been fully executed when the mortgagee was put into possession. 25. ——— Application for further execution by taking an account. An application to the Court passing a decree for possession in favour of the heirs of a mortgagee, for further execution thereof, by taking an account is not the proper mode for the mortgagor to redeem the mortgaged lands and to recover possession thereof. The proper course for a mortgagor who seeks for an account and redemption, or for redemption alone, is to bring an independent suit for that purpose. Janoji v. Vyankatesh, 2 Bom. 371, overruled. The mortgage debt was not paid within the time limited. The mortgagee sued on the covenant in their bond and obtained a decree for possession, declaring them entitled to remain in possession until the mortgage debt was satisfied from the usufruct. Some time after the mortgagees had got possession under this decree, the mortgagors applied, ostensibly under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for recovery of possession of the mortgaged property and for payment of a large sum of money, which they alleged the mortgagees to have collected as profits in excess of what was due under the mortgage. Held, that such an application would not lie. If the allegation of the mortgagors were true, their proper remedy was by suit for redemption, and not by application in the execution department. Ravji Shivram Joshi v. Kaluram, 12 Bom. 160, Ram Chandra Ballal v. Baba Esgonda, 12 Bom. 163, and Narsinha Manohar v. Bhagvantrav, *I. This not having been done within the period fixed, the Munsif ordered that it should be demanded from the surety, and (on his failure to produce its stipulated price) should be realized by attachment and sale of his property. Held, that, the decree having been executed, the Munsif's subsequent proceedings as to the elephant were illegal, and that the right to it was open to a suit. 47. ——— Question whether lands were included in decree—Act VIII of 1859, s. 387—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11. The father of the defendant in 1853 obtained a decree against the father of the plaintiff and other persons for partition of village lands. The decree directed that in effecting the partition certain dhara lands then occupied by the plaintiff's father were not to be included. Application for execution of that decree was made in 1861, but the execution-proceedings remained pending until 1882. On the 12th December 1882, the decree was executed, and the defendant (his father being then dead) was put into possession of the lands now in dispute as being part of the lands to which he was entitled under the decree. The plaintiff objected that these lands were not subject to partition under the decree, and he applied for an order that they should be delivered back to him. His application was rejected, and he thereupon brought the present suit to recover the lands from the defendant. The Court of first instance was of opinion that the question raised in the suit related to the execution of the decree made in 1853, and under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) could not be raised again by a separate suit. The plaintiff appealed to the Assistant Judge, who reversed the lower Court's decree. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court :—Held, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed. The question whether the dhara lands received by the defendant in execution of the decree of 1853 were included in that decree was a question relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882, which barred a separate suit. 49. ——— Suit by judgment-debtor to set aside sale—Fresh suit—Civil Procedure Code, s. 244. A judgment-debtor sued the decree-holder for recovery of possession of certain land which had been sold in execution of the decree and to set aside the sale, on the ground that the land was not liable, under s. 9 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act, to sale in execution of decree. Held, that the question at issue between the parties was clearly one relating to the execution and satisfaction of the decree, and that the suit was therefore barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. 50. ——— Retention by the Court of property not the subject-matter of a decree in the course of its execution—Dismissal of petition for delivery of possession—Appeal from order of dismissal. A decree having been passed awarding to a plaintiff in a suit a moiety of certain jewels which were stored in family boxes in the possession of the defendant, the boxes containing the jewels were taken possession of by an officer of the District Court, and a division was effected by a commissioner appointed for that purpose by that Court. After the division, certain jewels remained, which had been set aside by the commissioner as not forming part of the subject-matter of the decree, and these continued in the custody of the District Court. The defendant thereupon presented a petition to the District Court praying that the jewels so remaining undivided might be returned to him. Plaintiff resisted the application, but both parties were agreed that the said remaining jewels were not part of the subject-matter of the suit, and were not dealt with by the decree. The petition was dismissed, whereupon the petitioner appealed. On objection being taken that no appeal lay against the order of dismissal on the ground that, since the jewels in question were not part of the subject-matter of the suit and were not dealt with in the decree, the question was not one relating to the execution of a decree and was not governed by s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure :—Held, that the question as to what should be done with the boxes and their contents arose between the parties to the suit, and related to the execution of the decree ; that the order was passed under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure ; and that consequently an appeal lay. Per MICHELL, J.—The property having been interfered with in the course of the execution of a decree, the question involved was one "relating to the execution of the decree." 51. ——— Crops misappropriated while in possession under decree afterwards set aside on appeal—Separate suit for value of crops. The defendant obtained a decree in a suit brought against the plaintiff for arrears of rent and for ejectment, in execution of which he evicted the plaintiff from his holding and, after getting possession thereof, carried away certain crops which were then standing on the land. The plaintiff appealed from the decree obtained by the defendant, and on appeal it was set aside on the plaintiff depositing the rent due, and the plaintiff recovered possession of his tenure. Held, that a suit for the value of the crops carried away by the defendant, while in possession under his decree, was not barred by s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. The Appellate Court remanded the case for retrial on the merits, and a decree was passed by the Court of first instance in A's favour, which was confirmed on appeal, and he got back his property. A then brought a suit for the value of crops wrongfully appropriated by B during the period he was in possession. It was contended on second appeal that such a suit was barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the question to be decided in this suit did not relate to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the original decree within the meaning of s. 244, because it did not arise at all until that decree had ceased to exist, and such a suit was not barred by the provisions of that section. Lati Koer v. *Sobhadra Kooer, I. The defendant in 1870 obtained possession of the house by another sale made in execution of another decree against G D. The present suit was instituted by plaintiff in 1871. Held, that not only was the remedy on the cause of action, which accrued in 1854, and the decree of 1866, barred, but also that Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11, prevented the plaintiff from bringing a new suit on the fresh cause of action accruing to him under the decree of 1866, as that section "took away from the parties to the suit the right to raise by a fresh suit any question as to their rights and liabilities under the decree." Runganasary v. Shappani, 5 Mad. 375, followed. The Registrar found that the defendant was a tenant under the plaintiff at a monthly rent, and the Court decreed that defendant should remain in possession so long as he should continue to pay the rent regularly, and that in default of payment the plaintiff should be placed in possession. An attempt to obtain possession in execution of that decree in 1861 failed, and the plaintiff brought a suit to recover possession with arrears of rent. Held, that s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 precluded the plaintiff from maintaining the suit. presented an application on the 28th November 1894, paying that he should be put in management of the devasthan lands on the ground that the defendant was guilty of mismanagement and misapplication of the devasthan property. This application was rejected by the Court of first instance on the ground that the question of mismanagement did not fall within s. 244, cl. (c), of the Code of Civil Procedure. This order was confirmed on appeal on the ground that the decree was a declaratory decree, and therefore incapable of execution. Held, on second appeal, that the decree was not declaratory only, and that it could be enforced in execution under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The defendant continued to remain in actual possession and occupation of a portion of the premises, and refused to give up possession of the same to the plaintiff, who served him with a two months' notice to quit in June 1881. The plaintiff objected to the attachment, but his objection was disallowed, and the property was sold. The plaintiff did not appeal against the order disallowing his objection, but filed the present suit to establish his right. Both the lower Courts allowed the plaintiff's claim. Disputes as to rent having arisen, A and C proceeded to make deposits in Court in respect thereof, and the landlord instituted a suit against A, joining C as a party defendant to recover the amount of rent he claimed, and obtained an ex parte decree, which, inter alia, directed that it should be satisfied out of the amount so deposited in Court. That amount, according to the landlord's case proving insufficient to satisfy his demands, he proceeded to execute the decree and brought the holding to sale and purchased it himself. A and C then applied under s. 311 of the Code to have the sale set aside, alleging that the decree had been fraudulently executed, the sale-proclamation suppressed, and that the decree was incapable of execution in the manner adopted, and contending that it could only be executed against the amounts so deposited in Court, which were more than ample to satisfy the full amount justly due under it. That application was unsuccessful. A, C, D, and E then instituted a suit to have the sale set aside on the ground of fraud. Held, as regards A and C, following the decision in Mohendro Narain Chaturaj v. Gopal Mondul, *I. The plaintiffs, in a suit to have the judicial sale of a zamindari set aside, alleged that the decree-holder, in part satisfaction of his decree, had received, from them and other co-sharers, in the zamindari, their proportionate amounts of the debt decreed, and had agreed that their shares should be exempt from the execution sale about to take place ; that the sale took place, subject to that exemption ; that the decree-holder, however, with whom some of the co-sharers and the purchasers colluded, fraudulently had the sale set aside, revived the attachment, and caused a second sale, at which all the shares in the zamindari were sold. Held, that the question, besides that the charge of fraud was not sufficiently specific, was determinable, in virtue of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, only by order of the Court executing the decree. The District Munsif investigated these questions under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and directed that execution should proceed against all four parcels. The District Court on appeal reversed the order of the Munsif, on the ground that he had no power to decide these questions under s. 244, and that the proper course was for M to attach the properties and for K to make a claim. This course was adopted and K's claim was rejected, and the four parcels were sold and bought by V. K thereupon brought a suit against M and V to cancel the sales to V. Held, that, by virtue of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the suit would not lie. After the confirmation of the sale, the decree was set aside under s. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code at the instance of some of the defendants in the original suit. On an application under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code having been made by a prior purchaser of the said properties in execution of another decree, to set aside the sale held in execution of the ex parte decree, the defence was that the application could not come under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the sale could not be set aside, as it had been confirmed. Held, that the case was one under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that, the ex parte decree having been set aside, the sale could not stand, inasmuch as the decree-holder himself was the purchaser. Doyamoyi Dasi v. *Sarat Chunder Mozoomdar, I. 81. ——— Restitution of amount paid under decree—Reversal of decree—Interest—Fresh suit. In a suit for redemption of a mortgage, a decree was passed for possession by redemption on the plaintiff paying the sum of R43,625-7-0, the amount of the mortgage-debt. Prior to the institution of the suit, the defendant had taken proceedings in the Judge's Court to foreclose the mortgage, and the plaintiff paid the above-mentioned sum into that Court for the defendant, who took it. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from the decree directing him to pay R43,625-7-0 as the mortgage-debt, and obtained a decree by which the decree of the first Court was modified, and the amount payable on redemption was reduced to R22,155. The plaintiff then took out execution of the decree to recover from the defendant the difference between the two sums with interest. Held, that the effect of the Appellate Court's decree was to direct restitution of any sum paid under the first Court's decree which was disallowed by the Appellate Court's decree, and that the question was clearly one for determination by the Court executing the decree, and not by separate suit, being expressly provided for by s. 583 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, also, that the decree-holder was entitled to restitution of the amount with interest. Roger v. *Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris, L. arise after the sale are not, strictly speaking, questions relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, within the meaning of cl. 83. ——— Refund of purchase-money —Separate suit—Adjudication of judgment-debtor as bankrupt and order not to deal with property. A sale, on the 4th March 1871, of certain property sold in execution of a decree obtained by A having been confirmed on the 5th May 1878, notice was, on the 31st May, received that the judgment-debtor had been adjudicated a bankrupt in London, and an application was made to the Court to abstain from dealing with his property. All proceedings were thereupon stayed, and on the 8th of July 1878 the purchaser applied to the Court for a refund by the present plaintiffs, who were the administrators of A, of his purchase-money, and on the 19th of the same month an order was made for such refund. The amount was refunded without protest by the plaintiffs, who then sued the purchaser and the original judgment-debtor to recover the amount paid by them. Held, that the suit would not lie, but that the question was one to be determined under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code by the Court executing the decree. A decree was given in accordance with the terms of the compromise. On C's death, his widow refused to put B in possession of the lands. B sought to obtain possession of the lands with mesne profits by executing the decree under the compromise against C's widow. Held, that he ought to proceed by regular suit. On this petition being presented, the Court struck the case off its file. Held, that, upon default being made, the decree-holder's remedy was by execution of the decree, and not by suit to enforce the terms of the agreement. 86. ——— Compromise of decree —Effect of compromise—Mode of enforcing agreement of compromise—Right of suit. A decree for partition having been compromised by an agreement made by the parties, and communicated to the Court which passed the decree:—Held, that the effect of the decree was extinguished by the agreement, which could only be enforced by a fresh suit, and not by an application for execution of the former decree. 87. ——— Contract superseding decree —Separate suit. In the course of proceedings in execution of a decree, by which a simple mortgage of immoveable property was enforced, the judgment-debtor made an application to the Court executing the decree, dated in April 1877, stating that the decree had been partially satisfied by the sale of a part of the mortgaged property ; that the decree-holder had remitted a portion of the decree ; that the balance should be paid by a certain date ; and that a certain banker had given a note of hand for the payment of interest on the balance at a certain rate. The judgment-debtor then stated as follows : " So long as the petitioner does not pay the money to the decree-holder,—i.e., during the term fixed above,—the banker shall pay interest to the decree-holder ; the decree-holder shall not have power to take out execution within the said term, but after the expiry thereof he shall be at liberty to realize his money together with interest from the petitioner and his property by executing the decree : excepting the property sold, all the property mortgaged and attached under the decree shall continue so mortgaged and attached : the decree-holder's pleader has affixed his signature at the foot of this petition showing that he consents to it : the petitioner therefore prays that the case may be struck off as partially executed." The decree-holder subsequently sued the judgment-debtor to recover the balance of the decree, claiming under the arrangement set forth in the petition of April 1877, as a contract superseding the decree. Held, having regard to the terms of that petition, that no new contract superseding the decree was either intended or effected, and the suit was consequently not maintainable. Billings v. *Uncovenanted Service Bank, I. The defendant, by misrepresentation, induced the plaintiff to receive R3,900 only in full satisfaction of those decrees and to withdraw the application. The plaintiff on discovering the misrepresentation, brought this suit to recover the difference. Held, that the suit was barred by s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 (which corresponds with s. 244 of Act X of 1877), the question between the parties being a question relating to the execution of a decree. It is always competent to any Court to vacate any judgment or order, if it be proved that such judgment or order was obtained by manifest fraud; and in the case of orders made in execution, s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 excludes all other remedy. In the execution proceedings, the defendant raised an objection that the plaintiff could not have execution for a greater quantity of land than he had claimed originally, and the Court executing the decree allowed the objection. No appeal from the Court's order was made, but the plaintiff brought a suit to recover possession of the larger amount of land mentioned in the compromise. Held, that the order of the Court executing the decree was erroneous in law, and might properly be reconsidered upon an application for review; but that the present suit came within s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and therefore could not be maintained. 93. ——— Suit for money paid under decree afterwards reversed. In a suit of 1867 the present defendant obtained a decree for possession of a certain village and mesne profits for one year. Pending an appeal against that decree, execution was stayed on the present plaintiff depositing a note for R15,000 as security. The decree was affirmed on appeal, and the present defendant had the note sold in execution, and drew out of the proceeds a sum for mense profits for subsequent years; but an appeal was preferred in the execution-proceedings to the High Court, which set aside the execution so far as concerned the mesne profits for the years subsequent to that to which the original decree related. The present plaintiff thereupon attached and sold the village to recover the balance: before that amount was paid to the present plaintiff, the present defendant brought a suit against him in the District Court, and there obtained a decree for mesne profits for the subsequent years, and in execution drew the amount of the decree out of Court. In second appeal, however, the High Court, on 26th September 1881, reversed the decree of the District Court, whereupon the present plaintiff applied for restitution under Civil Procedure Code, s. 583, which application was ultimately disallowed. to which plaintiff was entitled under a decree passed in favour of himself and defendant as co-plaintiffs in a former suit. It appeared that defendant purchased the property sold in execution of the decree, and that the price for which the sale took place was sufficient to satisfy the decree. Instead of paying the purchase-money into Court, defendant, with the knowledge and assent of plaintiff, retained the whole sum upon the understanding that he should give the Court a receipt for himself and on behalf of plaintiff, and afterwards pay to plaintiff his portion of the amount decreed. Accordingly, defendant presented a petition to that effect, and obtained a certificate confirming the sale. Defendant having failed to pay plaintiff his portion, the present suit was brought. Upon these facts it was held, in special appeal, that the decree was satisfied by sale of the judgment-debtor's property, and that the execution proceedings were completely at an end, the defendant having been, by the assent of the plaintiff, made his agent for the acknowledgment of the satisfaction of the decree. No subsequent application under the decree could have been entertained by the Court which executed it. Therefore plaintiff's claim was not a matter determinable under s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. Afterwards the judgment-debt was reduced in appeal to a sum far below the amount realized in execution, and the judgment-debtor brought a suit to recover the excess moneys. Held, with reference to Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11, that the suit did not lie, but that the Court which charged with the execution of the decree had full jurisdiction to determine the question and order a refund. Subsequently, on the application of the judgment-debtor, the account was re-opened, and had been overdrawn by the decree-holders. In 1876 the judgment-debtor applied to the Court which executed the decree for an order for the repayment of the amount overdrawn. Held, that, while the application was not barred by any provisions of the Limitation Act, IX of 1871, the English doctrine of laches did not apply in this country; and, further, that the application had been presented in the proper Court, as required by s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 (corresponding with s. 244 of Act X of 1877). In a suit by K for the money paid as aforesaid:—Held, that the payments not having been made directly in adjustment of a decree, the suit was not barred within the rule laid down in Arunachella Pillai v. Appavu Pillai, 3 Mad. 188. KUNHI MOIDIN KUTTI v. RAMEN UNNI

Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 258. A decree-holder who, although he has settled with his judgment-debtor out of Court, yet nevertheless sues out execution against him, will be liable to an action for damages at the hands of the judgment-debtor. Ss. 244 and 258 of Act X of 1877 have made no change in the law in this respect. GUNI KHAN v. KOONJO BEHARY SEIN . 3 C. L. R. 414

The money was paid to the judgment-creditor, who not only did not certify satisfaction of the decree, but executed it and again collected the amount from the judgment-debtor. Held, following Viraraghava v. Subbakka, I. L. R. 5 Mad. 397, that the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877 (prior to amendment), did not debar the judgment-debtor from suing either S on his express promise or the judgment-creditor to recover the amount paid by S to the latter. The last paragraph of s. 258 means that the Court executing the decree shall not recognize an uncertified payment or adjustment out of Court. It does not prohibit a suit for money paid to a decree-holder out of Court, and the payment of which, not being certified, could not be recognized, and which the decree-holder had not returned, but had misappropriated by taking out execution of the decree a second time and securing the amount in full through the Court. His objection having been disallowed, he sued to establish his right to the property and for the removal of the attachment. He claimed on the ground, amongst others, that the decree of 1879 had been wholly adjusted. The alleged adjustment had not been certified under s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the provisions of that section did not debar the Courts trying the suit from determining, as between T and the decree-holder, whether the decree of 1879 had been adjusted or not. Sita Ram v. *Mahipal, I. 116. ——— Adjustment of decree—Suit to recover instalments due under a mortgage made in adjustment of a decree. A suit will not lie to enforce an uncertified agreement of adjustment of a decree against a judgment-debtor the consideration for which is that it shall operate in satisfaction of the decree, as there is, in that case, no consideration which the Court can recognize, and therefore no valid consideration for the judgment-debtor's agreement. The plaintiff was the assignee of a decree obtained by one O K against the defendants on the 5th May 1883. By that decree O K was declared entitled to recover R9,961-5-6, with interest at nine per cent. from the defendant; and payment was ordered to be made to him of the said sum by weekly instalments of R200. In order to secure the payment of the said instalments, the defendants were required to execute a mortgage to O K of certain property with power to him to sell the same, and to execute the decree for the whole amount, in case of default for six months. O K assigned the decree to the plaintiff in the present suit, and subsequently to the assignment (viz., on the 21st July 1883) the defendants executed to the plaintiff the mortgage on which the present suit was brought. The mortgage-deed, after reciting the above facts, stated that the defendants had agreed to satisfy the amount of the decree, and it contained a covenant by the defendants that they would pay R9,961-5-6 with interest at six per cent. by monthly instalments of R400 from the 21st August 1883. The mortgage, therefore, differed from the decree both with regard to the instalments and the rate of interest. The plaintiff sued to recover the sum of R4,207, being the amount of instalments due to him under the said mortgage. Held, that the suit would not lie, as the mortgage was an adjustment of the decree, and had not been certified to the Court, as required by s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. 18th March 1880, passed to him by the defendant in satisfaction of the said decrees and in substitution of two bonds, dated February 1879. The Subordinate Judge, being of opinion that the application could not be granted, inasmuch as the execution of the decrees was then barred by limitation, referred the case to the High Court under s. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the question could not be referred under s. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code, as the order applied for to the Subordinate Judge was appealable under s. 2 of the Code. The question raised by the application related to the satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of s. 244 of the Code. RANGJI v. BHAIJI HARJIVAN

Thereupon H S and S M brought a suit for declaration of their right of purchase and the recovery of a 10-anna share of the money in the hands of H D and R D. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the relief sought for. Held, also, that the provisions of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code did not affect the suit, which was brought, not upon the allegation that the decrees were satisfied by the plaintiffs' purchase, but, on the contrary, was founded upon the proposition that the decrees were not so satisfied. Abdul Rahiman v. Khoja Khaki Aruth, I. L. R. 11 Bom. 6, referred to. Held, further, that the claim was not within the words "relating to the execution of the decree" in s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as it did not raise any question in respect to the furtherance of, or hinderance to, or the manner of carrying out, the execution of the decrees. 120. ——— Agreement not to execute a decree—Suit to restrain execution—Agreement not to execute regarded as satisfaction of decree—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 257 (a), 258. M and A were partners, and as such were indebted to H. A died, and subsequently the debt was settled between H on one side and M and A's widow, as guardian of her minor sons, on the other. For a moiety of the debt a bond was passed by M to H and for the other moiety by the widow of A. H filed a suit against M, and got a decree, which was satisfied. H then sued the widow on her bond. The Court allowed her objection that she was not competent to give a bond binding her sons personally, and of its own accord made M a defendant and passed a decree against M and A's estate. H assigned this decree to R, who applied for execution against M. M thereupon filed this suit against H and R, praying for an injunction against the execution of the said decree and for damages against H. He alleged that during the pendency of the suit in which the said decree had been passed, H had agreed that he would not obtain a decree against him, and that, if such a decree were passed, he would not execute it. The lower Appeal Court rejected the plaint, holding that there was no cause of action against the defendant H. On appeal to the High Court, it having been urged that the question was one which could be decided in execution, and that, under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, the present suit would not lie :—Held, that the words "relating to execution" in s. 244 must be restricted to "the contents of the order made, or to how far it has been carried out," and do not, therefore, include an agreement not to execute the decree. It being further contended that the agreement raised a question as to the "satisfaction" of the decree, and was, therefore, void without the sanction of the Court: Held, that the satisfaction contemplated by s. 244 must have arisen out of some transactions between the parties subsequent to the decree. 122. ——— Separate suit—Uncertified adjustment—Agreement not to execute decree—Suit by judgment-debtor to stay execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 258. The defendant in January 1887 obtained a decree against the plaintiff, which he partially executed, and thereupon an adjustment of account took place between the plaintiff and defendant, in which a certain sum was found due by the plaintiff to the defendant, for which sum the plaintiff gave a bond to the defendant in consideration of which the defendant agreed to exonerate the plaintiff from liability for the balance due under the decree. This satisfaction of the decree was not certified to the Court. On 12th March 1890 the defendant applied for further execution of the decree. In a suit for a declaration that the defendant had no right to execute the decree, and for an injunction to restrain him from executing it, it was contended that the suit was barred by s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held by PIGOT and MACPHERSON, JJ. (BANERJEE, J., dissenting), that s. 244 is not limited by s. 258, and that the suit was not maintainable. Where a decree is satisfied by an agreement out of Court, and such satisfaction is not certified to the Court, a subsequent suit on the agreement is not maintainable if the object of the suit is to restrain the decree-holder from executing his decree in contravention of the agreement. Per PIGOT, J.—S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code does not absolutely bar a suit, but prohibits in a separate suit between the same parties to a decree any relief being granted which interferes with the conduct of the execution-proceedings by the Court executing the decree. Per BANERJEE, J.—A suit on the agreement was maintainable. S. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, having enacted that an uncertified adjustment cannot be recognized as an adjustment of the decree by any Court executing the decree, implies that it may be recognized as such by a Court trying the matter as a regular suit. subsequently having got the decree transferred to himself, instead of entering up satisfaction of the decree, fraudulently applied for execution. Satisfaction had not been entered up under s. 258, Civil Procedure Code. Held, that there must be an inquiry into the truth of the judgment-debtor's allegations, and, if proved, the petition for execution must be dismissed, and, further, that s. 258, Civil Procedure Code, was inapplicable to the present case, since that section applies only to the case of parties who stand in the relation of judgment-debtor and judgment-creditor at the date of the transaction. Subsequently, by a registered ekrarnamah, the decree-holder having received from the judgment-debtors (the plaintiffs) the amount due on account of mesne profits, and also a further consideration of R166, relinquished an 8-anna share of the jote in favour of them. The remaining 8-anna share of the jote was also sold by the decree-holder by a registered kobala to the judgment-debtor. The heirs of the decree-holder on his death applied for execution of the decree, but, notwithstanding the judgment-debtor's objection that the decree could not be executed, it having been satisfied by virtue of the aforesaid ekrarnamah and kobala, they obtained possession of the jote; the adjustment, not having been certified, was not taken into account by the Court executing the decree. On a regular suit by the judgment-debtors for a declaration of title to, as well as for the recovery of, possession of the jote, the defence mainly was that under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, no separate suit would lie. Held, that such a suit was maintainable, and that s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure was no bar to it. Azizan v. *Matuk Lall Sahu, I. In execution of a decree on a mortgage, certain property was sold, which the plaintiff in this suit claimed as his own under sale to himself by the sons of the judgment-debtor. He applied to the Court to have the sale set aside, but, failing in his application, he sued both the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser for a declaration of his title to the property in question. The Assistant Judge held, on appeal, that the suit was not maintainable, on the ground that, the greater part of the property being included in the decree, the question of title ought to have been settled in execution-proceedings under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and not by a separate suit. Held, reversing the decision of the Assistant Judge that s. 244 did not bar the present suit. It could not apply, except as regards property affected by the decree, and a part of the property claimed by the plaintiff was not included in the decree. Moreover, the question in the present suit did not arise between the parties to the former suit, or their representatives. SHIVRAM CHINTAMAN v. JIVU

The objection was disallowed, and the land was sold. She then sued the execution-purchaser to set aside the Court-sale, and obtained a decree, against which no appeal was preferred. After the settlement of issues, but before the suit was finally disposed of, I died, and his brother J was made defendant as his legal representative. J consented to the suit being tried on the defence raised by I and upon issues already settled. The suit was decreed, it being held that G was the purchaser. In execution of this decree, under which G sought to obtain possession, J objected that he was entitled to a half share of some, and to the entire sixteen annas of the other, properties, and that his brother I had no right whatever in the same. This objection was disallowed by the Court executing the decree on the ground that it had not been

The purchaser was the decree-holder. The application having been refused by the Courts of first instance and first appeal, the applicant appealed to the High Court. Held, that the appeal was maintainable, the question being one between the appellant and the purchaser (also a party to the suit), and the appellant was entitled to the relief sought. Held* by the Full Bench :—An objection taken by a person who has become the representative of the judgment-debtor in the course of the execution of a decree to the effect that the property attached in satisfaction thereof is his own property, and not held by him as such representative, is a matter cognizable only under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and is not the proper subject-matter of a separate suit by a party against whom an adverse order may have been passed under ss. 280 and 281 as provided by s. 283. Held, by the majority of the Full Bench (PRINSEP, O'KINEALY, and GHOSE, JJ.), that ss. 278 to 283 of the Civil Procedure Code do not cover the case of any contest between parties to the suit or their representatives on the record of the suit in regard to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of a decree. The effect of the decision between such parties is that the right to enforce or oppose execution is determined under s. 244, subject to the result of such appeal as is allowed by law. Per PRINSEP and O'KINEALY, JJ.—S. 244 should be liberally construed to prevent litigation. of deceased judgment-debtor—Jus tertii—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 234, 278, 283. Held by the Full Bench (TYRRELL, J., dissenting), that where a judgment-debtor dies after the passing of the decree, and his legal representatives are brought on the record in execution proceedings to represent him in respect of the decree, questions which they raise as to property which they say does not belong to his assets in their hands, and as such is not capable of being taken in execution, are questions which under s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code must be determined in the execution department, and not by separate suit. There is no distinction in this respect between the position of legal representatives added to the suit before, and those added after, the decree. Under the last paragraph of s. 234, the Court executing the decree may try and determine the question whether property in the legal representative's hands formed part of the deceased judgment-debtor's estate, and finds this fact for the purpose of bringing the property to sale in execution and giving the auction-purchaser a good title under the sale; and the Court's order is subject to appeal, but not a separate suit under s. 283. Where the legal representative asserts that the property is his own, and has not come to him from the deceased judgment-debtor, he cannot set up a jus tertii, so as to come in under s. 278 and the following sections of the Code. He can only do so where he opposes execution against any particular property on the ground that, although it is vested in him, it is vested in him not beneficially by reason of his being the representative of the judgment-debtor, but as trustee or executor of someone else. In that case either party may have the question of jus tertii determined in a separate suit. Rajrup Singh v. Ramgolam Roy, I. L. R. 16 Calc. 1, approved. Abdul Rahman v. *Muhammad Yar, I. L. The property had been attached in execution, but the defendant, who was G's successor in office, had obtained the removal of the attachment on the ground that the property belonged to the math and not to G personally, and was not, therefore, liable to satisfy the decree. The plaintiffs thereupon brought this suit. The lower Appellate Court passed a decree for the plaintiffs and granted the declaration. On second appeal it was contended that under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code the question ought to have been decided in execution of the decree in suit No. 591 of 1888, and that a separate suit would not lie. Held on the merits, that the decree of the lower Appeal Court should be reversed and the suit dismissed. Per RANADE, J.—Where the representative of a judgment-debtor puts forward a personal claim to property which is attached as assets of the judgment-debtor in his hands, the investigation of the claim must be made in execution under the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But where he asserts that he holds the property in trust for, or on behalf of, or as manager of some third person or body of persons, or of a religious charity or institution, the claim must be investigated under the provisions of ss. 278 to 283, and the order passed therein cannot be challenged by an appeal, but must form the subject of a separate suit. Per PARSONS, J.—Ss. 278 to 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure have no reference to any claim preferred or objection made by any person who is on the record as a party to the suit. Whenever a question arises between the representative of a judgment-debtor on the record (whether originally sued as such or added before or after decree) and the decree-holder as to whether property in the hands of the representative was of the assets of the deceased or not, that question must be determined by order of the Court executing the decree under the provisions of s. 244. The brother's widow brought a suit for maintenance against the representatives of the first and second defendants' branches of the family, plaintiff's mother being joined as third defendant. A decree was passed against the two first-mentioned defendants, but plaintiff's mother was exonerated on the ground that, being a female, she was not liable. In execution of the decree, certain lands were brought to sale and purchased by the brother's widow, who transferred them to another person. At the death of plaintiff's mother, which occurred subsequently, the said lands would have vested in the plaintiff, who now brought this suit claiming that the sales referred to were not binding on her (plaintiff), inasmuch as her mother had not been a party to the decree under which they had taken place. Held, that, where a party defendant in a

While the plaintiff's suit was pending, and before he took out execution under the said decree, partition proceedings took place. By the partition-proceedings the defendant's interest in the estate No. 831 was converted into a smaller estate, No. 2218, in lieu of their share of the whole estate. The plaintiff then brought a separate suit to have it declared that the defendants' interest in estate No. 831 had passed to estate No. 2218. Held, that the suit was not barred by s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. The required transformation of the defendants' interest could not be effected without altering the decree which was given in the former suit. The question that arose in the suit, although it was one between the same parties as those in the former suit, could not be regarded as a question relating to the execution of the decree in the former suit, and therefore the Court in execution proceedings had no authority to make the necessary alteration in the decree. execution by attachment of the mortgaged properties, and in the same year an order for attachment was made. The mortgagee died in April 1892, and on the 20th August 1894, the plaintiff (his widow and administratrix) applied to the High Court for an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged properties under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act. On the 5th January 1895, the application was refused on the ground that the mortgaged properties were outside the territorial jurisdiction of the High Court. The plaintiff then instituted the present suit, in which she sought (inter alia) administration of the estate of the mortgagor (who had died before the mortgage suit was filed), and asked for the sale of such properties as might be found subject to such mortgage. Held (affirming the decision of SALE, J.), that the suit was not maintainable by reason of the provisions of ss. 230 and 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, the questions arising in the suit being such as should have been determined in execution of the decree, and not by a separate suit. The decree directed that the Pandara should name a Tambiran of his adhinam for the office, whom, after inquiry as to his fitness, the subordinate Court should appoint. If that Court found him unfit, it was to appoint a Tambiran of that adhinam upon its own selection. In execution the Pandara named a Tambiran for the office, but died before the inquiry as to his fitness. His successor, as head of the adhinam, petitioned to withdraw the nomination, naming another Tambiran. The subordinate Court made an order disallowing the withdrawal, and, after inquiry as to the fitness of the first named Tambiran, appointed him to the office. The High Court, on the Pandara's appeal, decided the first nomination had been competently withdrawn, and directed an inquiry as to the fitness of the person secondly named, finding on the evidence that the first-named was not fit. Held, on the appeal of the Tambiran first-named, that the question as to his right was one that had arisen between the parties to the suit, and related to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s. 244, sub-s. 1. QUESTIONS IN EXECUTION OF DECREE —contd.

158. ——— Decree incapable of execution by reason of events subsequent to decree—Decree giving an option to the parties. A partition suit brought by a son against his father was referred to arbitration. On the 9th January 1890, the award was published, and, on the 27th March 1890, the defendants moved for and obtained a decree in terms of the award. By this decree it was ordered that, in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, the defendant should pay to him R1,05,000 in the manner therein stated, viz., R40,000 to be paid forthwith, and the balance of R65,000 to be paid "upon the plaintiff delivering to the defendant certain specified property, which included two vessels or buglows, called respectively the Nasri and Sambuk." In no event was defendant to be required to pay the R65,000 before the 15th November 1890. At the date of the decree the vessel Sambuk was at sea on a voyage, and, on the 18th June 1890, while still on the voyage she was lost. On the 15th November 1890, the plaintiff's attorneys demanded payment of the balance of R65,000. They offered to deliver the other properties specified in the decree, but stated that the vessel Sambuk had been lost. They offered to pay its value, which they estimated at R1,000. The defendants, however, demanded the delivery of the buglow, which they stated to be worth a very large sum. The defendant having, under the circumstances, refused to pay the R65,000 the plaintiff applied for execution of the decree, which was refused. He then obtained a rule calling on the defendant to show cause why the decree of the 27th March should not be amended or rectified by stating therein the amount of money to be paid to the defendant as an alternative, if delivery of the vessel Sambuk could not be made, such delivery having become impossible. That rule was discharged. The plaintiffs then took out a summons calling on the defendant to show cause why an order should be made, under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, directing the plaintiffs to pay to the first defendant, in lieu of the delivery of the vessel Sambuk, such sum of money as might be fixed by the Court as the value of or compensation for the loss of the vessel Sambuk in the decree mentioned, and why an order should not be made that on payment of such sum and delivery of the other properties mentioned in the decree which the plaintiffs were to deliver under the decree to the first defendant on payment by the latter to them of R65,000 the first defendant should pay to the plaintiffs R65,000 and interest thereon from the 15th day of November 1890, mentioned in the said decree, and, in the event on its being held that the first defendant was not bound to pay the said sum of R65,000, then why an order should not be made that the property mentioned in the decree which the plaintiffs were to hand over to the first defendant on payment of R65,000 should not be retained, used, and appropriated, absolutely by the plaintiffs for their own use and benefit, freed and discharged of all claims on the part of the first defendant, and why the first defendant should not be directed to withdraw the claim made by him to a debt of R22,000, or thereabouts, mentioned in an affidavit of one Ahmed bin Essa Khaliffa, and why such further or other order as to the Court might seem fit and the justice of the case may require should not be made in the premises and in relation to the properties mentioned in the decree which were to be delivered over by the plaintiffs to the first defendant on receiving from him R65,000, and why in the alternative this suit should not be restored and placed on the board for trial. It was contended by the plaintiff that the questions raised in the summons were questions arising in execution to be dealt with by a Judge in chambers under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that a fresh suit was not necessary. Held, dismissing the summons, that the application was not one in execution of a decree, nor was the question one arising in the course of execution, but that the decree having become incapable of execution, the summons asked the Judge to decide what were the rights of the parties in consequence of its non-execution. Held, also (as to the part of the summons asking for restoration of the suit), that the matters in issue in the suit had been fully heard and determined, and the rights of all parties had been settled by the decree, and consequently there was nothing further to be tried. The Court could not in this suit, after passing a decree, proceed to ascertain the rights of the parties under a state of facts quite different from those which appeared in the pleadings and arising subsequently to the decree. An objection to the sale was raised by the judgment-debtor ; and, while such objection was pending, the judgment-debtor's son is said to have entered into a compromise, whereby it was agreed that the decree-holders should take the village in full satisfaction of their decree, though it had, in fact, been sold for only about three-quarters of the decretal amount, and that the sale should be confirmed on those terms. The judgment-debtor subsequently filed a suit against the decree-holders, asking for a declaration that the said compromise and the confirmation of sale were collusive and invalid, and were null and void, and ineffectual as against the plaintiff. Held, that such a suit was barred by the operation of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Prosunno Coomar Sanyal v. *Kasi Das Sanyal, L. Questions under s. 244, cl. 164. ——— Auction-purchaser. When a judgment-debtor applies to have an execution-sale set aside, alleging fraud on the part of the auction-purchaser, who happens to be his agent, and such application is opposed by the decree-holder, the question to be determined must be investigated under s. 244, Civil Procedure Code, although no fraud may be alleged as against the decree-holder himself. The fact that the judgment-debtor may be entitled to equitable relief against the auction-purchaser, by a regular suit for reconveyance of the property acquired by fraud, does not oust the jurisdiction of the Court to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud under s. 244, Civil Procedure Code. In determining whether an application to set aside a sale comes within the scope of s. 244, Civil Procedure Code, or not, the point to be considered is, whether there is a contest regarding the validity of the sale between the parties to the suit. Prosunno Kumar Sanyal v. *Kali Das Sanyal, I. 170. ——— Mortgage—Purchase of mortgaged property by mortgagee—Application by purchaser to recover possession as against defendants who held possession under prior sale based on prior mortgage—Question raised whether purchaser could recover possession without first paying to defendants amount of prior mortgage—"Execution and enforcement of decree"—Appeal. A mortgagee obtained a decree directing the sale of property in the possession of certain defendants, subject to a prior charge thereon. At the sale in execution of that decree, the mortgagee purchased the property. He now sought to recover possession of it from the defendants, the question raised being whether, under the terms of the decree, he was entitled to be put into possession without paying the amount of the prior charge, the defendants so dispossessed being at liberty to bring a separate suit to enforce the charge. Held, that the question thus raised between the decree-holder (purchaser) and the defendants related, within the meaning of s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, to the execution or enforcement of the decree against these defendants, and an appeal lay from an order passed thereon. Per MOORE, J.—Even if the purchaser had not been also the decree-holder, he would have been a representative of a judgment-debtor. Per BHASHYAM AYYANGAR, J.—The order was not the less an order under s. 244, because it was also passed under ss. 318 and 334 of the Code. 173. ——— Parties—Execution of decree—Party to suit in which the decree was passed—Party against whom no decree was passed not precluded from bringing a suit. S. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure presupposes a decree enforceable by the decree-holder against the person between whom and the decree-holder the question referred to therein arises. It has no application to questions arising between the decree-holder and persons against whom there is no decree to be executed. Where, therefore, certain persons had intervened in a suit as defendants, and the suit was disposed of without any decision of the claim set up by them, and without any decree being passed affecting them, it was held that they (or their assignee) were not precluded from bringing a suit to have released from attachment the property claimed by them in the former suit, but as to their title, to which there had been no adjudication. Chowdhry Wahed Ali v. *Jumaee, 11 B. He applied, under s. 318 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for delivery of the property purchased, but his application was rejected as being barred by limitation. He now brought the present suit to recover possession of the land from the present defendant, who was the judgment-debtor in the previous suit. On the objection being taken that the suit was barred by s. 244:—Held, that proceedings taken by the purchaser to obtain possession of the property purchased related to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, within the meaning of s. 244, and that the suit must be dismissed. Objection was then raised by defendants that the property was not liable under the decree, and the property was ordered to be released. When such a claim was investigated summarily as a proceeding under s. 278 and the lower Appellate Court held that no appeal lay: Held, that the proceedings of the first Court under s. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code were null and void and without jurisdiction, and the first Court was directed to conduct the proceedings in the manner directed by s. 244. Panchanan Banerjee v. *Rabia Bibi, I. —Objection by judgment-debtor under the attached decree—Objection disallowed—Appeal. Mewa Lal and another held a money decree against Ram Singh. In execution thereof they attached a mortgage decree held by Ram Singh against one Ishri Dat. They next applied for the sale of the mortgage decree, which they had attached in execution of their own money decree. To this Ishri Dat objected that the decree had been already satisfied. His objection was disallowed, and on appeal by Ishri Dat from the order disallowing the objection, it was held that no appeal would lie. ISHRI DAT v. MEWA LAL (1904)

Afterwards an administratrix appointed in the place of the administrator, having brought a suit to set aside the decree and the subsequent sale in execution on the ground that under s. 282 of the Succession Act (X of 1865) the decree-holder was entitled only to a rateable distribution among the creditors of the estate. Held, that in the absence of fraud or collusion the decree and the subsequent sale in execution could not be set aside. Held, further, that according to ss. 244 and 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the decree having been executed the execution bound the parties and all persons claiming through them, and that the question was, therefore, res judicata. Per CHANDAVARKAR, J.—"The position of an executor or administrator, as the case may be, of a deceased person, as such person's legal representative, in whom all the property of the deceased vests as such by virtue of s. 179 of the Succession Act, may be said to be similar to that of the sebait of an idol." Prosunno v. *Golab, L. Where the landord of an occupancy holding obtains a decree for rent against his registered tenant, an unregistered transferee of the tenant, into whose hands a portion of the holding has previously passed is bound by the decree and is therefore a representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Principle of Full Bench case, Ishan Chandra Sarkar v. Beni Madhab Sarkar, I. L. R. 24 Calc. 62, applied. Kalu Shaha v. Bhagabati Debya, 6 C. W. N. 127; and Sarala Dasee v. Sarada Prosad Bose, Mis. Ap. 398 of 1903 (unreported), not followed. Such a transferee can apply to set aside a sale held in execution of the decree as a "person whose immoveable property has been sold" within the meaning of s. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code. He can also apply under s. 173 of the Bengal Tenancy Act to set aside the sale on the ground that the holding has been purchased by the judgment-debtor in the name of the auction-purchaser. 186. ——— Application in execution—Person entitled to represent estate—Representative of party to decree—Purchaser from judgment-debtor. Plaintiffs in a suit obtained a decree for the sale of mortgaged lands, which had belonged to S, deceased. The defendants to that suit were a person whom S was alleged to have adopted, and the two widows of S's father, who would represent the estate, if the adoption failed. One widow died after suit. After her death part of the mortgaged property was put up for sale and purchased by plaintiffs, who applied for an order for delivery of possession. D, the nearest reversioner to S, objected, and claimed to be in possession in his own right. He contended that S had been adopted only in conjunction with the widow, who had died, and that in consequence his reversionary interest had fallen into possession at her death, the surviving widow having no rights. In the alternative he claimed also as a purchaser from the surviving widow under a release deed executed by her after the mortgage decree and before the sale. The Subordinate Judge refused to make an order for delivery of possession, and the plaintiffs appealed to the High Court, when a preliminary objection was raised that no appeal lay: Held, that an appeal lay. If the inheritance passed to D on the widow's death, he would be the person entitled to represent the estate, and the present question related to execution and should be dealt with under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. If D relied on the release from the surviving widow, he was a representative of one of the parties to the decree and the same result followed. Kasinatha Ayyar v. *Uthumansa Rowthan, I. L. 187. ——— Execution of decree—Decree passed ex parte against father and son on promissory note signed by father alone—Application in execution for arrest of son—Objection to arrest on ground that decree was wrongly passed against son—Maintainability. A judgment-creditor sued a Hindu father and his son on a promissory note signed only by the father. Neither defendant appeared nor defended the suit and a decree was passed against both. The father died and the judgment-debtor made the present application in execution and asked for the arrest and imprisonment of the son. The latter asked the Court to direct that he was not liable to arrest under the decree: Held, that the decree had not been passed without jurisdiction and the judgment-debtor was precluded, in execution proceedings, from impeaching the decree, which had been passed without opposition, and which had not been set aside. If a decree is passed by a Civil Court which had absolutely no jurisdiction to pass it, even a party to the proceeding may impeach it as a nullity, though it has not been set aside in appeal or otherwise. This was not such a case as the District Munsif was competent to pass a personal decree against the present judgment-debtor, if the evidence required to establish the personal liability had been then produced. The fact that a decree had been passed in the absence of such evidence would not make it a decree passed without jurisdiction. Sardarmal v. *Aranvayal Sabhapathy, I. L. made an application for delivery of possession, which was dismissed. His heirs, after his death, made further applications, which were also dismissed. The heirs then sold the land to the present plaintiffs, who thereupon brought the present suit to recover possession of the land: Held, (i) that the right of the plaintiffs to recover possession of the land was a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree; (ii) that the question arose between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed or their representatives; and (iii) that the suit was not maintainable, having regard to s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A decree was passed and an order was made for its execution against the present plaintiff, and that order was not appealed against. Prior to execution plaintiff brought the present suit against the decree-holders in the previous suit, for a declaration that they were not entitled to execute a portion of their decree as against him: Held, that the suit did not lie, the matter being one to be litigated only in execution proceedings. The surety should be treated as a party to the suit, and as the question raised was one relating to the execution of a decree, s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure applied and the suit was barred. 190. ——— Alteration of decree after execution—Application for refund of money realized in execution—Limitation—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 178. A decree for sale under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, as drawn up, allowed a very high rate of interest to the decree-holder, and the amount due under this decree as it stood was realized by sale of the mortgaged property. Subsequently, on the judgment-debtor's application, the decree was amended so as greatly to reduce the rate of interest and thereby a refund became due to the judgment-debtors. Held, that the judgment-debtors' application for a refund was not an application in execution, but an application under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that the limitation applicable was that prescribed by Art. 178 of the second Schedule to the Limitation Act, 1877, and began to run from the date of the amendment of the decree. On appeal, however, the order setting aside the sale was reversed and the sale confirmed in favour of the original purchaser. The purchaser, however, did not pay the sale price, and the decree-holder accordingly sued him for its recovery. Held, that the suit did not lie, but the matter was one governed by s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Gulzari Mal v. *Madho Ram, I. 192. ——— Execution of decree—Questions in execution—Mortgage by conditional sale—Decree for foreclosure—Payment by puisne mortgagee defendant in prior mortgagee's suit for foreclosure—Application by such puisne mortgagee for decree absolute for foreclosure—Transfer of Property Act, ss. 74 and 86—Form of decree. In a suit brought by the respondent as prior mortgagee for foreclosure of a mortgage by conditional sale, in which the appellant, a second mortgagee of the same property, was a defendant, a decree was passed for foreclosure and allowing six months for redemption, and a similar decree was made in a suit brought by the respondent and the appellant as second mortgagees. Eventually, as the mortgagors (the other defendants) made no payment to secure redemption, and in order to prevent a decree absolute for foreclosure against himself, the appellant paid into Court the sum due under the decree in the first suit, and it was drawn out by the prior mortgagee. The appellant then made an application to the Court in that suit that, as he had by his payment become, under s. 74 of the Transfer of Property Act, the representative of the prior mortgagee, a decree absolute for foreclosure might be passed in his favour. The Court held that he was entitled to bring a suit for foreclosure, but that "he had not acquired the status of a decree-holder" and that "while he was a defendant he could not execute the decree as a decree-holder" and the application was dismissed. Held by the Judicial Committee (reversing the decision of the High Court), that a subsequent suit brought by the appellant for foreclosure was not barred by s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, the questions between the parties not being such as could have been determined by the Court in execution of the decree in the former suits. That decree (which appeared to be a transcript of the form of order given in s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act) did not provide for the exercise by the puisne incumbrancer of their

194. ——— Mortgage—Satisfaction by mortgagor of decree for sale on a prior mortgage with money borrowed on the security of a subsequent mortgage of the same property—Rights of subsequent mortgagee. A decree for sale and an order absolute for sale had been passed against a mortgagor. The mortgagor then borrowed more money on a mortgage of several villages, including those previously mortgaged, and applied a portion of such money in satisfying the previous decree for sale. The subsequent mortgagee then brought a suit upon her mortgage, in which she sought to bring to sale the villages, which were the subject of the previous mortgage and decree. Held, that she could do so. S. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not apply, and there was no reason why the plaintiff should be driven to recover part of her loan by executing the previous decree and the remainder by suit on her mortgage. Bansi Dhar v. *Gaya Prasad, I. An application was subsequently made for the appointment of a commissioner to effect an actual division of the property, but the Subordinate Judge dismissed it on the ground that the right to claim futher relief in the matter had become barred by limitation. This order was reversed on appeal and the case was remanded by the District Judge for disposal according to law. An appeal was then preferred to the High Court against the order of remand, when it was contended that no appeal lay to the District Judge against the order of the Subordinate Judge: Held, that an appeal lay. The order of the Subordinate Judge on the face of it purported to decide a question to be dealt with under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure and was therefore a decree within the meaning of that term in the Code, and that the party against whom it was passed was entitled to appeal therefrom. Even if there was no decree to be executed, and the Subordinate Judge erroneously supposed the matter to be one in execution and held the application to be barred, such usurpation of jurisdiction could not make the order passed in consequence thereof less appealable than would have been the case had the order been passed in execution proceedings under a decree duly passed. Hurris Chunder Chowdry v. *Kali Sundari Debia, L. Subsequently the judgment-debtor applied to the executing Court, asking that the decree-holder should be ordered to demolish certain structures, which he had erected beyond the limits prescribed by the decree, and obtained an order as prayed. Held, that no appeal would lie from such an order. Held, also, that the High Court is competent, of its own motion, to call for the record of a civil case and pass such orders as it thinks fit, and the exercise of its powers of revision on the civil side will not invariably (though such is ordinarily the case) be confined to matters in respect of which no other remedy is opened to the party aggrieved. Mahomed Foyez Chowdhry v. Goluck Dass, *7 C. taxing officer was to certify the amount of Court-fees that would have been payable by the plaintiff, had she not sued in formâ pauperis, and to tax the plaintiff's other costs of suit. It was also ordered and decreed that the defendants should pay the amount of Court-fees to be certified by the Government Solicitor, which should form a first charge on the property conveyed. Thereafter the plaintiff applied for attachment of other premises belonging to the defendants and obtained an order for sale. The sale-proceeds were ordered to be paid into Court, which amounted to R999-1-8. The plaintiff's attorney then without notice to the Government Solicitor or defendants, made an application for payment to him of the amounts realised in execution from the defendants. The Government Solicitor then presented a petition asking that the amount of Court-fees certified as due and payable by the defendant to the Government Solicitor in terms of the decree be paid in the first instance and in precedence to all claims. Held, that Court-fees form a Crown debt and under ordinary circumstances the principle would apply that the Crown would be entitled to precedence in payment of this debt over all creditors. The Secretary of State v. *The Bombay Landing and Shipping Company, Ld., 5 Bom. 3. ——— Transfer of decree by operation of law—Representative of original decree-holder—Right to appeal against order refusing execution. R died in May 1859, leaving his property to his executors in trust for the appellant P, and he directed that the property should be assigned by them to the appellant as soon as he came of age. In August 1868, the executors filed this suit against L as manager of certain landed property belonging to the Hallai Bhattia caste, and known as Mahajan Wadi to recover certain loans made by them as executors to him as manager of the said Wadi. On the 11th May 1870, while this suit was pending, the executors assigned all the property of their testator to the appellant P. By the deed of assignment they assigned to him, inter alia, "all moveable property, debts, claims, and things in action whatsoever vested in them as such executors." No steps were taken, subsequently to this assignment, to make the assignee P a party to the suit, which proceeded without amendment. On the 23rd January 1873, a decree was passed for the plaintiffs on the record for R31,272-13-5, and it was declared that the said sum should be a first charge on the rents and income of the said Wadi. Subsequently to this decree, L opened an account in the name of the appellant P, and from time to time made payments to him on account of the decree. The last of these payments was made on the 19th November 1884. None of these payments were certified to the Court. In 1885 the respondent V. was appointed to the office of manager of the Hallai Bhattia caste in the place of L, the original defendant in the suit. On the 4th January 1886, his attorneys wrote to the appellant's attorneys offering to pay the appellant the balance due to him under the decree. Subsequently, however, he refused to make any payment to the appellant, whereupon the appellant applied for execution of the decree against him as manager of the said Wadi. He claimed to be a transferee of the decree under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). His application was refused by the Judge in chambers. Held, that the appellant was a transferee of the decree within the meaning of s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code. The decree had been transferred to him "by operation of law." Subsequently, M transferred the decree to other persons, and the co-transferors applied under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code to have their names substituted for those of the original decree-holders. The judgment-debtor opposed the application on the grounds that his name had not been substituted for those of the original decree-holders, who had transferred to him, and that the transfers to M were inoperative, as the instruments of transfer had not been registered at the place where the substantial portion of the mortgaged property was situate, in accordance with s. 20 of the Registration Act of 1877. It appeared that no notice had been issued to M under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code, that he was dead, and that his legal representatives had not been cited as required by law. The application was allowed by the Courts below. Held, that the matter involved questions arising between the parties to the decree, or their representatives, within the meaning of s. 244 (c) of the Code, and that the order allowing the application was therefore a decree within the definition of s. 2, and was appealable as such. and business. In a suit which was brought against K, and which was unsuccessfully defended by him on behalf of himself and the joint family, a decree for costs was passed against him. K died after decree, and the decree-holder in execution had K's sons put on the record as his representatives. Certain property was attached in execution, and the sons objected that the property in question had come to them as the self-acquired property of their uncle M, who had died after K, and that they had inherited no property from their father K. Their objection was followed by the Court executing the decree, and the property was ordered to be released from attachment. In a suit brought by the assignee of the decree-holder against the sons of K to establish his right to proceed against the property in question in execution of the decree against K: Held, that the question of the liability of the property to be taken in execution in the hands of the defendant was a "question arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed or their representatives, and relating to the execution, etc., of the decree" within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the suit was consequently not maintainable. perty on permanent tenancy. Their objection was allowed, and the Court made an order, directing the property to be sold, subject to the defendants' rights. He then sued to eject the defendants. The defendants pleaded that the plaintiff had purchased, subject to their rights as permanent tenants. Both the lower Courts rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground that he was bound by the order in the miscellaneous inquiry, which had become conclusive by reason of his having omitted to sue within one year from the date of the order. Held, reversing the lower Court's decision, that the order in the miscellaneous inquiry was not binding on the plaintiff as an auction-purchaser. 9. ——— Purchaser of rights of Hindu widow—Representative. After the death of a childless Hindu widow, a lessee from her of property which had belonged to her husband obtained against her vendees of part of the same property a decree for damages for wrongfully keeping him out of possession. The effect of the decision was to decree the claim against the estate of the widow, and to exempt from liability the judgment-debtors personally and the property which they had purchased. In execution of the decree, the said property was sold, and was purchased by the decree-holder; one of the judgment-debtors had died during the execution proceedings, and her son was duly impleaded as her representative, and he raised no objection to the attachment and sale. Subsequently this son sold his rights and interests in the property; and his vendee sued the decree-holder to recover possession on the ground that, the decree being limited to the estate of the childless Hindu widow, the defendant as purchaser could not acquire by the sale any rights superior to those of the widow; that those rights had expired upon her death, and left nothing to be sold, and that on her death the property devolved upon the plaintiff's vendor, and had thence passed to the plaintiff. Held, that the plaintiff's vendor was a party to the suit within the meaning of s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, and that he not having objected to the sale in execution of the decree, neither he nor the plaintiff could go behind that sale or claim the property upon any title which he might have asserted in the execution proceedings; and that the suit was barred by s. 244. Ram Ghulam v. *Hazaru Kuar, I. A Court upon the application of such a transferee for execution of a decree may wrongly decide that he is not a transferee within the meaning of s. 232, or that, although he is a transferee within the meaning of that section, he is not a representative of a party to the suit, or that by reason of limitation he is not entitled to obtain execution of the decree, and if the Court has so decided, it has determined a question or questions mentioned or referred to in s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, but not specified in s. 588, and an appeal lies under s. 540 of that Act. Purmanandas Jiwandas v. Vallabji Wallji, I. (c)—Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888)—Application by transferee from legal representative of decree-holder—Question—Legal representative—Meaning of the terms "transferee" and "representative"—Administrator of estate. Any person who at the time of the execution of a decree is a transferee within the meaning of s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure is a representative of the decree-holder within the meaning of s. 244, cl. (c), of the Code; and the term representatives in that section includes subsequent transferees as well as those who purchased directly from the person who obtained the decree. Dwar Buksh Sirkar v. *Fatik Jali, I. 13. ——— Party unnecessarily added to suit—Separate suit. S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code alludes to parties to the decree or their representatives, but it is not on that account open to a plaintiff to evade the section by adding an unnecessary party to the suit. 14. ——— Purchaser of decree—Rights of purchaser. The words "party to a suit" in s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, include the heirs, assignees, and representatives of such party, and consequently give the purchaser of a decree all the rights of appeal, etc., which his vendor had. 15. ——— Petitioner, position of when petition struck off—Stranger. In a suit brought by M against K and others, certain lands belonging to G were included, and G was made a defendant; these lands, however, were released from the claim and K excluded from the decree obtained by plaintiff against the other defendants. In execution, however, M had them measured as a part of the decreed lands; and G's petition of objection under s. 230 of Act VIII of 1859 having been struck off the file, G brought a suit to have his title established. Held, that, though as a "party to the suit" brought by M, G would have been bound by s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, to seek his remedy in the execution department, yet, as he was released from the operation of the decree, he must be considered a stranger and permitted to bring his present action. 16. ——— Party on record though wrongly—Rights of appeal. A party who has been put upon the record, whether rightly or wrongly, is so far a party to the suit that he has a right of appeal under Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11. BHUGGOBUTTY KOWAR v. MONEY

17. ——— Applicability of section to application made by judgment-debtor as well as to those by decree-holder. The provision in s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure that questions arising between the parties to the suit and relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of a decree shall be determined by order of the Court executing the decree, relates not only to proceedings initiated by the decree-holder, but also to applications made by the judgment-debtor. 18. ——— Person obstructing the decree-holder at the instigation of the judgment-debtor—Suit by the person so obstructing. Held, that a person who, at the instigation of the judgment-debtor, obstructed the decree-holder in obtaining possession of property is not a party to the suit within the meaning of s. 244; so orders passed against him under ss. 329 and 332 do not bar a suit. Mohendro Narain Chatturaj v. *Gopal Mondul, I. 19. ——— Claimant in execution Proceedings—Separate suit—Suit for Damages for Tort—Party to suit. A sold to B certain logs of timber, and 95 logs were delivered to B in part performance of the contract. C brought a suit against A and B, claiming the logs under another title. Pending this suit, C entered into an agreement with D, selling him the logs in the event of being successful in his suit. The judgment of the Court of first instance was in C's favour, and under such judgment D obtained possession of the logs in suit. This judgment was on appeal reversed. B then brought a suit in the nature of an action of trover against C and D for the logs and damages. The Court, without entering into the merits, dismissed the suit on the ground that it was not maintainable, as the same relief would have been obtained under the provisions of s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. Held by the Judicial Committee, reversing such judgment, that there had been a miscarriage, as that section did not apply, the suit by B against C and D being to recover damages for a tort alleged to have been committed by C and D, and that the latter was not a party to the original suit or bound by the judgment in that suit. 21. ——— Representative of deceased person—Execution of decree—Party— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 201, 209—Representative. In a former suit for possession of immoveable property against J and her father, and subsequently revived against J as the representative of her father, possession and mesne profits were decreed against J in her representative capacity, while as against her in her individual capacity the suit was dismissed. The decree-holder, after obtaining possession, attached and sold, in satisfaction of his decree for mesne profits, J's private property, notwithstanding her objections, and himself became the purchaser, but never obtained possession. This sale, ordered on the 8th October 1863, was confirmed by the Judge on 15th March 1864. The present suit was brought by J for confirmation of her possession of her private property by cancellation of the execution sale. Held (MACPHERSON and GLOVER, JJ., dissenting), that such suit was maintainable, and that J in her individual capacity was not a party to the suit in which execution issued within the meaning of s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. In the same case on appeal the decree of the High Court was affirmed under the circumstances of the case, but held (contrary to the opinion of the majority of the Full Bench),—Where a decree against a person in a representative capacity has been properly passed, and proceedings have been taken under it to obtain execution against the party in his representative character, he is a party to the suit with respect to any question which may arise between him and the other parties relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11. 22. ——— Representative—Assignee of auction-purchaser. The expression "representative of a party" in the last paragraph of s. 244, Civil Procedure Code, does not mean the representative of a party to the execution proceedings, but it means the representative of a party to the suit. An application by the assignee of an auction-purchaser to be placed on the record cannot be dealt with under s. 244, Civil Procedure Code, and no appeal or second appeal lies from an order refusing such application. 23. ——— Assignee of decree—Indirect assignment. A, a decree-holder, applied for execution of his decree, but was opposed by B, the judgment-debtor, on the ground that A had sold his decree to a third party, from whom it had passed to B's son. Held, that this was a question arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution of the decree, and might be determined by the Court executing the decree, under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861. 24. ——— ——— Separate suit—Questions for Court executing decree. Three out of six decree-holders sold their share in the decree to A who thereafter made an application to the Court under s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This application was dismissed on the ground that A's purchase was made benami for some of the judgment-debtors. In a subsequent suit brought by A and the persons who were said to be the real purchasers, it was contended that a separate suit was barred under the provisions of s. 244, cl. (c), of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, that A was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed, nor the representative of any such party, and that the suit was not barred. (c), of the Civil Procedure Code, as the question raised was not one arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, or their representatives, but one that arose between two parties, each of whom claimed to be the representative of one of the parties to the suit, viz., B, the party in whose favour the decree was passed. The representatives of one of the defendants only appealed, and the decree was reversed as regarded them. The decree was executed as against the other defendants by the attachment and sale of their shares of the land, and the plaintiff became the purchaser. T's* predecessor in interest had a mortgage on certain land and was made a party to a partition-suit, in which a share in the land was allotted to a member of the family, subject to a proportionate share of T's mortgage and also subject to a proportionate share of a certain decree debt. The then plaintiff got his share of the property made over to him. After the date of the decree, i.e., the decree in the partition suit, T purchased the equity of redemption in the mortgaged property from certain members of the family. In a subsequent execution of the partition decree, part of the land was sold for money due as costs and mesne profits by T's vendors of the equity of redemption, and T was ejected. T objected under s. 332 of the Code, but the Court refused to order redelivery. In a suit brought by T for possession: Held, that T was not a judgment-debtor within the meaning of ss. 244, 332, and 335, Civil Procedure Code, and that the suit was not barred by the provisions of s. 244. Nagamuthu v. *Savarimuthu, I. His claim was rejected. Pending an application to the High Court under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure to set aside this order, the share claimed by S was detained in Court at his request. The High Court rejected the application of S, and R took out execution for the costs incurred therein and for interest on the sum detained in Court at the request of S. Held, that the interest could not be awarded to R in execution of the decree for costs, S and R being rival creditors and S not being a party to the suit. 32. ——— Co-defendants—Separate suit —Order to refund purchase-money. A judgment-debtor, alleging that his right as occupancy tenant of certain land had been sold in execution of the decree, sued the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser to set aside the sale as illegal under s. 9 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act. The Court of first instance decreed the claim, and ordered the defendant decree-holder to refund the purchase-money. Held, that, as between the defendant decree-holder and the plaintiff, the question at issue was one arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed and relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree and was, therefore, under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, to be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by separate suit. Janki Singh v. *Ablakh Singh, I. 33. ——— Claimant to attached property—Suit to set aside sale in execution. A decree-holder took out execution against A and B. When B's property was attached his widow, C, came forward and laid claim to it on the part of her minor son, urging that, as B was not liable under the decree, his property could not be sold. The objection was disallowed and the property was sold. Held, that s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, did not prevent C from suing to set aside that sale and recover B's property on the ground that B was not liable under the decree. 34. ——— Attaching creditors—Suit for refund of money wrongly paid to him. A suit will lie by a prior attaching creditor to compel a decree-holder, whose attachment is subsequent in date, to refund money obtained by him under an order of the Judge of a subordinate Court, in contravention of the provisions of s. 270, Code of Civil Procedure; but it must be a suit to set aside the Judge's order. 35. ——— Party wrongly appearing on record—Suit for money paid in execution of decree—Parties appearing on decree not parties to suit. S sued K for possession of certain land, and H, claiming to be owner of the property, asked leave to come in and defend the suit; but his application was refused. The suit was dismissed, and S appealed, naming H as a respondent, and a notice in the usual form was served on H. He, however, did not appear, and the decree of the first Court being reversed, a decree, in which H was included, was given for possession. H subsequently brought a suit to have his title to the property declared making S a defendant, and obtained a decree declaring his title. Pending H's suit, S took proceedings in execution of the decree to recover a sum awarded her either as costs or mense profits, whereupon H, to prevent a sale of the property, deposited the amount in Court, and S received it on account of her decree. In a suit brought by H against S to recover the amount so paid: Held, the plaintiff was entitled to recover. The judgment in the first suit having been set aside by the proceedings in the second suit, there was no bar to the suit by reason of the money having been paid in execution of the process of the Court. H was not a party to the first suit so as to make the question one between the parties, and relating to the execution of the decree. 36. ——— Party alleged to have been wrongly substituted in execution proceedings—Estoppel. A, executrix to the estate of her husband, executed a mortgage-bond, partly for money due on bonds executed by her husband in his life-time and partly for payment of Government revenue due from the estate. She then adopted a son, B, under authority granted by the will of her husband. After the adoption, a suit was brought on the mortgage-bond against A, and a decree was passed in terms of a compromise for payment by instalments, the mortgaged property remaining hypothecated as before. Default was made in payment of the instalments, and the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree from time to time and obtained partial satisfaction. In the meantime, the Court of Wards took the management of the estate from A, and in the course of execution proceedings the original decree-holder died, and on an application for execution in August 1888, N, then a minor, was substituted as decree-holder, and B was substituted as judgment-debtor in the place of A. The present application for execution was made in July 1893, the minor N being represented by a sub-manager under the Court of Wards. It was decided against N, and N then appealed. An objection was raised that, assuming the liability of the estate of B, such liability could not be enforced in execution of this decree, as the order for substitution was unauthorized by law and a mere nullity, and B being neither a party, nor representative of a party, to the suit, the present appeal would not lie under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the Court had power to make a substitution of this kind, and that B had been rightly substituted. Hari Saran Moitra v. Bhubaneswari Debi, *I. Pending the appeal, however, C took out execution of the decree for costs, and brought to sale a house belonging to G, of which H became the purchaser, paid the purchase money and got possession. Subsequently the decision dismissing the suit was reversed on appeal, and the defendants in that suit were ordered to pay a certain sum to G with costs. G then applied for restitution of her house which had been sold under the decree reversed, and eventually obtained an unconditional order for possession, H being left to any remedy open to him in respect of the purchase money. G having obtained possession of the house, H brought a suit against her to recover the purchase-money. Held, that, notwithstanding s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, he was entitled in this suit to recover the purchase money, as money received to his use, the consideration for it having failed. H was not, in his character as an auction-purchaser, a party to the execution proceedings, and for the purpose of the suit was to be treated as a third person. decreed to be sold to sale and purchased it himself and obtained possession. A usufructuary mortgagee of the property who had been a party to the suit, and in whose favour the decree was, in so far that it declared his right to continue in possession, applied to be restored to possession, and obtained an order in his favour. Thereupon the assignee auction-purchaser, applied in revision to have the order restoring the usufructuary mortgagee to possession set aside. Held, that the auction-purchaser, though he happened also to be the assignee of the decree, was not a representative of a party to the suit within the meaning of s. 244. The Court of first instance rejected the application, and refused to set aside the sale. On appeal to the Subordinate Judge, he reversed the decision of the first Court. On a second appeal to the High Court by the auction-purchaser an objection was taken that no second appeal lay at his instance. Held, that, inasmuch as the application was under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, a second appeal would lie. 44. ——— Purchaser from some of the judgment-debtors of property not affected by decree—Representative of judgment-debtor. Certain persons, claiming by right of inheritance to C, sued B, N, A, K, and others for possession of certain immoveable property, and obtained a decree dated in August 1876 for possession of the same. In the course of the litigation which ended in that decree, Z purchased certain immoveable property from B, N, A, and K. Z was subsequently dispossessed of such property in execution of the decree of August 1876. He thereupon sued the holders of that decree for possession of the same, alleging that his vendors had inherited the same from D, that it was not affected by that decree, and that he had been improperly dispossessed of it in execution of that decree. Held, by the Court that the plaintiff not being the representative of any of the parties to the suit in which that decree was passed in the sense of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, but being, if his allegations were true, a purchaser from certain of the judgment-debtors of property not affected by that decree, the suit was not barred by the provisions of that section. Partab Singh v. *Beni Ram, I. 45. ——— Party to suit in representative character. In 1875 a decree was passed against N as representative of L, who died pending the suit, declaring N liable to the extent of the assets of L which might have come to the hands of N. In 1879 the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, and, without proof that any of the assets of L had come to the hands of N, obtained an order and attached lands belonging to N. N objected to the attachment, but the Munsif without investigation, rejected his claim and directed N to bring a regular suit. The land was sold and purchased by A B. N, after an abortive attempt to obtain a review of the Munsif's order from his successor, brought a suit in 1880 against the decree-holder and A B to recover the land. Held, that, as N was a party to the former suit of 1875 within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1877, the suit would not lie. 46. ——— Sale of Property in execution of decree obtained by second mortgagee for sale of property—Holder of prior decree enforcing first mortgage—Execution of decree—Fresh suit—Meaning of "representative" of judgment-debtor. A decree enforcing a first mortgage of certain property not being satisfied, the property was sold in execution of a decree of a later date enforcing a second mortgage of the property. Per STUART, C.J., that the decree enforcing the first mortgage could not be executed against the property, but the holder of such decree was bound to bring a fresh suit against the purchaser of the property to enforce his decree. Per STRAIGHT, BRODHURST, and TYRRELL, JJ., that a fresh suit was the most convenient and expeditious remedy. Per OLDFIELD, J., that the purchaser not being the "representative" of the judgment-debtor, within the meaning of s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, the holder of such decree must bring a fresh suit to enforce it. 47. ——— Transfer of Interest pending suit—Lis pendens—Application to bring transferee upon the record. A decree of the High Court, giving possession of certain shares in a bank to the plaintiff, R, was reversed on appeal by the Privy Council. The defendant then applied to the Court of first instance to order restitution of the shares, which had been realized by the plaintiff. Upon being ordered to produce the shares, R made an application to the Court, professedly under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, in which he alleged that, pending the appeal to the Privy Council, he had transferred the shares to G, his counsel in the case, who had failed to restore them, and he prayed "that the said person might be brought upon the record, and that execution for recovery of the said shares might be given against him." The Court passed an order upon this application, calling on G to show cause why he should not be called upon to restore the shares made over to him by R, and he thereupon filed an answer denying that he was the custodian of the shares and alleging that he was their purchaser for value. The Court passed an order directing that G's name should be placed on the record, so that the decree might be executed against him. Held, that the question being one between two judgment-debtors inter se, and not between the parties arrayed against each other as decree-holders of the one part and judgment-debtors or their representatives on the other, the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code were not applicable to the case; that G could not be regarded as a "representative" of R within the meaning of that section. RAYNOR v. MUSSOORIE BANK . . . . I. L. R. 7 All. 681

49. ——— Party to suit—Representative. Where, certain property having been attached in execution of a decree, the representative of the judgment-debtor objected that the property had been acquired by himself and not inherited from the judgment-debtor, and was therefore not liable in execution: Held, that the question was one which must be decided in the execution department, under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Ram Ghulam v. Hazaru Koer, *I. 50. ——— Official Assignee—Attachment of property—Judgment-debtor declared an insolvent—Claim by Official Assignee to attached property—Appeal from order disallowing claim—Stat. 11 & 12 Vic., c. 21, ss. 7, 49—"Representative" of judgment-debtor. A decree-holder, having attached the property of his judgment-debtors in execution of the decree, obtained an order for sale of the attached property. Prior to sale, the judgment-debtors made an application to be declared insolvents, and obtained an order under Stat. 11 & 12 Vic., c. 21, s. 7, by which their property was vested in the Official Assignee. An application was then made by the Official Assignee to the Court in which the execution of the decree was pending for the release of the property from attachment, and that the property might be made over to him. The Court dismissed the application. On appeal, the District Judge reversed the first Court's order. Held, that the matter did not come before the Court of first instance under s. 49 of Stat. 11 & 12 Vic., c. 21, inasmuch as that section refers to cases where the insolvent's schedule has been filed, and to debt or demands admitted therein, and, in the present case, no schedule had been filed at the time of the Official Assignee's application; and the Court could therefore only entertain the application under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to the execution of decrees. Held, that the Official Assignee could not be held to be a representative of the judgment-debtors within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and his application was not one relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree. Held, that the Court of first instance had only jurisdiction in the matter under s. 278 of the Code, and disposed of it under that section, and that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. 51. ——— Execution of decree—"Representative" of judgment-debtor. The word "representative" as used in cl. (c), s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, means any person who succeeds to the right of any of the parties to the suit after the decree is passed. A Hindu widow mortgaged certain properties, and afterwards by an ikrarnamah made them over to B, the next heir. The ikrarnamah contained a condition that B was to be liable for the widow's debts. Subsequently the mortgagee brought a suit against the widow on the mortgage and joined B as a party on the ground that he was in possession of the mortgaged properties. That suit resulted in a money decree being passed on appeal by the High Court against the widow personally, the property in the hands of B being held not to be liable. The case was taken on appeal to the Privy Council, and pending the hearing of that appeal, the widow died, and B was brought on the record as her legal representative. The decree of the High Court was ultimately confirmed by the Privy Council. In execution of the decree, it was sought to make B liable to satisfy the amount out of the properties which he had obtained under the ikrarnamah, the mortgagee not having been aware of the conditions of that document before the decree of the High Court. Held, that, so far as these properties were concerned, he was not the legal representative of the widow, as he inherited them as heir-at-law of her husband, and that his title to them under the ikrarnamah was not that of a " representative " within the meaning of cl. (c) of s. 244. Held, further, that the question of B's liability under the ikrarnamah did not fall within the scope of the provisions of cl. (c) of s. 244, as being a question to be decided between the " parties " to the suit, as, although B was a party to the suit, the only claim against him was that the property in his hands was liable as having been previously hypothecated; and as the suit was dismissed, so far as that claim was concerned, it was not a question relating to the execution of the decree. 54. ——— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 278-283—Question of Court executing decree—Separate suit—" Representative " of judgment-debtor. The decree-holder under a decree for enforcement of lien against the zamindari rights and interests of K applied for execution by attachment and sale of certain shares, one of which was recorded in the khewat in the name of K, and two others in the name of B, his brother's widow. The shares having been attached, the judgment-debtor died, and J, his brother, and L, his son, were substituted as his representatives. In execution of the decree, only the share which had stood recorded in the name of the deceased judgment-debtor, and which was in possession of J and L as his representatives, was sold; and the decree-holder then applied for sale of the other shares which had been attached. To this B objected under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, claiming to be owner of the shares in question. Before the hearing of her objection she died, and L applied to have his name brought upon the record in her place for the purpose of supporting the objections. An order having been passed disallowing the objections which had been filed by B, L. applied to the High Court. A preliminary objection was taken on behalf of the decree-holder to the hearing of the appeal on the ground that, as the first Court's order related to L's claim as the heir of B to have the shares entered in her name released from attachment, it must be regarded as passed under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, and as conclusive, subject to L's bringing a suit to establish his right. On the other side it was contended that, L being the representative of the deceased judgment-debtor K, the first Court's order must be regarded as passed under s. 244 of the Code, and the appeal would therefore lie. Held, that the preliminary objection must prevail, and the first Court's order must be regarded as passed under s. 281, and not under s. 244 of the Code, inasmuch as L's claim, which was rejected by it, was nothing more than to come in as B's representative for the purpose of supporting her objections; and it was in right of a third person, whose interest he asserted to have passed to him, that he prayed admission to the proceedings, and his character was wholly distinct from that he filled as the legal representative of his deceased father. Because L happened, for the purpose of the execution proceeding, to be his father's legal representative, and to be liable to satisfy the decree to the extent of any assets which might have come to his hands, it did not follow that any rights claimed by him through a third person must be dealt with, and could only be dealt with, between him and the decree-holder in the execution proceedings. Wahed Ali v. *Jumaee, 11 B. The judgment-debtors objected to the attachment and proposed sale on the ground that the house was their own private property and not the property of the debtor within the meaning of the decree, having been validly transferred to them during the debtor's life-time. The objection was disallowed by the court of first instance. Held, that s. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application, that the case fell within s. 244, and that an appeal could lie from the first Court's order. Ram Ghulam v. *Hazaru Kuar, I. He subsequently withdrew his defence, but remained a party on the record, and a decree was made in his presence. At an execution proceeding taken against the minor son of the alleged adopted son of the last full owner without any notice to the present plaintiff, some of the mortgaged properties were sold. In a suit by him (the plaintiff) for recovery of possession of the said properties, the defence was that the suit was not maintainable by virtue of the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that, inasmuch as the plaintiff was a party to the suit in which the decree was passed, his remedy if he could object to the sale, was by an application under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and not by a separate suit. 62. ——— Deceased judgment-debtor—Execution against a person not the legal representative. The defendants, along with one N and C, had brought a suit against one A in the Civil Court at Peshawar in the Punjab, and obtained a decree, on the 23rd July 1878 for R3,05,545-12-0. In 1881 application for transfer of the decree to the Court at Moradabad for execution was made, and it was granted, but no steps were taken thereupon. On the 12th June 1883 A died. On the 30th April 1884, the defendants again applied to the Court at Peshawar, treating their judgment-debtor as being then alive, for a fresh certificate to execute their decree in the Moradabad district, and obtained it. On the 20th August 1885, they made an application to the District Judge of Moradabad for execution of their decree, and in it it was stated that the application was "for execution against Adjudhia Prasad and after his death against Angan Lal, the own brother, and Durga Kuar, widow, and Lachman Prasad and others, sons of Ajudhia Prasad, residents of Kundarki, and the said Angan Lal, at present residing at Umballa and employed in the Commissariat-Transport Department, judgment-debtors." It was further stated that "the judgment-debtor was dead, and his heirs are living and in possession of his estate, and Angan Lal himself has realized R9,637-4-9 due to the deceased judgment-debtor from the Commissariat Department of Calcutta and appropriated the same; therefore to that extent the person of the said Angan Lal was liable." Notification of this application was issued to Angan Lal as also to the other persons named therein. Angan Lal objected to the application as against him, stating that, although he was the brother of A, deceased, yet he always lived separate and carried on business separately; and that there was no connection or partnership between him and the deceased judgment-debtor, and that he had no property of the deceased in his possession. Further, that as A left issue, it was wrong to call him an heir to A, and take out execution process against him. In reply to these objections, the judgment-creditors (defendants) did not contend that Angan Lal was the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, but treated him as a person in possession of a sum of money belonging to the deceased, and, therefore, liable to the extent of the sum so received by him. The Subordinate Judge, holding that Angan Lal was the brother of the deceased and had realized the amount of the Commissariat Office, which he failed to prove that he paid to the deceased, ordered execution to proceed against him. Angan Lal then instituted this suit to set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge. It was contended that the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge were held under s. 244 of the Code, and therefore, no separate suit would lie. Held, that the contention must fail, as the Subordinate Judge never treated the proceedings in execution against Angan Lal upon the footing that he was the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. Mahomed Aga Ali Khan v. *Balmukund, L. Some of the judgment-debtors, including Dawan Rai appealed to the Sadr Diwani Adalat, but before the decree of the Sadr Diwani Adalat was passed, Dawan Rai died. No application was made to put any representative of Dawan Rai on the record; but in 1881 (the amount of the mesne profits payable under the decree having been finally determined in 1877), certain persons were made parties, as representatives of Dawan Rai, to various proceedings in execution of the decree for mesne profits, which ended in the sale of certain property which had been of Dawan Rai in his life-time. Subsequently the said representatives of Dawan Rai brought a suit to recover the property sold as above described on the ground that they were no parties to the decree under execution. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to bring such a suit, and it was not barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. he had obtained in 1871 against defendant No. 3, and put up for sale the mehal Olipore, which was purchased by the father of the plaintiff A, who eventually obtained possession of it through the Court. The plaintiff B purchased privately the mehal Ekdhala from the mortgagors and from M, some time after the date of the decree on the mortgage. That decree was in course of execution when the mortgagee died, and his estate came into the hands of the Administrator-General, who, on 13th August 1878, sold the decree to G, defendant No. 1. After this sale, several applications were made to have the name of G substituted for that of the original decree-holder, but in none of these applications was any further step taken towards execution of the decree, or any order made for substitution of the name of G, until 18th July 1885, when, after notice to the defendants under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code, G's name was substituted as decree-holder, and execution was taken out against the mortgaged property including Olipore and Ekdhala. The plaintiffs each claimed the mehal they had respectively purchased, but their claims were disallowed. In suits brought by the plaintiffs for a declaration of their right to hold the properties free of the mortgage, the Court found that G was only a benamidar so far as his purchase of the mortgage-decree was concerned. Held, that plaintiff A, being the purchaser at a public sale in execution of a decree, was not the representative of the judgment-debtors, the mortgagors, within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code; but the case was different with respect to plaintiff B, who claimed by private purchase, and must be considered the representative of the judgment-debtors within the meaning of that section. Dinendronath Sannyal v. *Raj Coomar Ghose, L. with reference to the judgment-debtor, does not mean only his legal representative, that is, his heir, executor, or administrator, but it means his representative in interest, and includes a purchaser of his interest, who, so far as such interest is concerned, is bound by the decree. There is no reason for excluding from its signification an execution-purchaser of the judgment-debtor's interest. Held, therefore, by the Full Bench, that the cases of Gour Sundar Lahiri v. *Hem Chunder Chowdhury, I. payment to him of the surplus sale-proceeds and obtained an order for the payment. The plaintiff, as purchaser of the equity of redemption of S P, brought the present suit to set aside the aforesaid order and to recover the surplus sale-proceeds from defendant No. 2. The Subordinate Judge held that defendant No. 2 was a benamidar for defendant No. 1, that the plaintiff made good his title to the surplus sale-proceeds and gave him a decree. On appeal by defendant No. 2: Held, that the order under s. 295 in favour of defendant No. 2 was one coming under s. 244, cl. 73. ——— Money paid into Court by Pre-emptor—Suit for pre-emption dismissed on appeal—Suit for refund of money paid into Court. A suit for pre-emption was decreed conditionally on the plaintiff paying R1,595, which the Court determined was the amount of the sale-consideration. He paid the amount to the vendees, and the payment was certified under s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Subsequently the decree was modified on appeal by increasing the amount of sale-consideration to R1,995, which the plaintiff was required to pay as the condition of pre-emption. He never paid the difference between the amount fixed by the first Court and the sum fixed as the true price by the Appellate Court, and the suit consequently stood dismissed. He then assigned to the plaintiff in the suit his right to recover the amount, R1,595, from the vendees, who, after unsuccessful application made to the Court of first instance, under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, to recover the amount, instituted this suit. Held, that the assignee was a representative of the plaintiff in the pre-emption suit within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the suit was therefore barred under the provisions of that section. The judgment-debtor filed a petition under s. 293 to recover from the decree-holder the loss by resale; the petition was rejected. party—Attachment of other property in possession of third party as that of the mortgagor—Claim by third party to ownership of such property—Suit by decree-holder to establish mortgagor's right to property. In a suit upon a hypothecation bond a third party was made defendant, as she claimed the hypothecated property. The mortgagee obtained a decree for recovery of the amount of the bond, and for enforcement of the mortgage. In execution of the decree, the debt not being satisfied by sale of the mortgaged property, the decree-holder caused certain other immoveable property in the possession of the third party to be attached. She objected to the attachment on the ground that this property was her own, and was not liable to sale in execution of the decree. The objection was allowed, and the decree-holder then sued for a declaration that the property belonged to the mortgagor, judgment-debtor, and was liable to attachment and sale in execution of the decree. Held, that, as no claim in the former suit was made against the objector personally, or in a representative character, but, as regards her, the only claim was virtually for a declaration that she was not entitled to the hypothecated property, the decree affected her only so far as it negatived her alleged interest in that property, and, so far as it was sought to be enforced against other property, she was a stranger to that suit, and her objection must be taken to have been decided under ss. 278 and 280 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the present suit was rightly brought under s. 283 and was not barred by s. 244. Kameshwar Pershad v. *Run Bahadur Singh, I. While the attachment was subsisting, the next friend died, and his son was thereupon brought upon the record. An application for an order for sale of the property of the son, as the legal representative of his father, having been dismissed, the Collector appealed against the order of dismissal. Held, that the Collector was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed within the meaning of s. 244 (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that he had, therefore, no right of appeal; also, that in proceedings relating to the enforcement of an order under s. 412 against a next friend, the next friend cannot be considered to be a party to the suit, and that, in consequence, there is no appeal under s. 244 (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure from an order passed in such proceedings. Defendant thereupon brought several persons on the record by an application to the Court under s. 368 of the Code of Civil Procedure, alleging them to be the representatives of the plaintiff. The appeal was unsuccessful, and some of the persons who had been brought on the record by defendant, as representatives of plaintiff, made an application in execution, in which the other representatives, similarly brought on, were not joined, on the ground that they were not, in fact, representatives. Those other representatives, however, claimed to be entitled to join in the execution proceedings. The Munsif stayed the application under the last clause of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and directed the parties to decide their rights by separate suit. This order was appealed against, when the District Judge set it aside and directed the Munsif to determine the question and then proceed with the execution. Held, that the order was wrong. The Munsif had no jurisdiction in execution to re-open the question as to whether certain persons brought on the record as representatives of the deceased plaintiff, and as such made respondents in the appeal, had been properly joined as parties or not. Where contrary to the provisions of s. 457 of the Code a minor had been represented throughout certain litigation by a married woman, her sister and guardian of her person, who was appointed her guardian ad litem : Held, that the minor had not been properly represented in the litigation, and that a suit by her to set aside decrees and sales which had taken place in execution of them, and as to which she alleged fraud and breach of trust, was not barred by s. 244. S. 53 of the Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890) does not give a married woman who is guardian of the person of a minor a preference to the appointment of guardian ad litem of such minor. That section leaves s. 457 of the Civil Procedure Code untouched, the effect of the two sections read together being that a proper guardian of the person of the minor may, if properly qualified, be preferred as the guardian ad litem. RASHID-UNNISA v. MUHAMMAD ISMAIL KHAN (1909) I. ss. 244, 294—Confirmation of Sale no bar to set aside sale in contravention of s. 294—Plaint or written statement in Court executing decree may be treated as application under s. 244—Burden of proof in suit to set aside sale. The holder of a mortgage decree brought the mortgaged property to sale in execution. He applied to the Court for permission to bid at the sale, and the Court granted him permission, fixing an amount as the minimum at which he was to bid. The decree-holder purchased the property at sale by Court in the name of a third party for a sum far less than the minimum fixed by the Court and less than the principal amount secured by the mortgage. The sale was confirmed and possession delivered to the purchaser, but actual possession remained with certain parties who had purchased the property from the original mortgagor. In a suit brought by the decree-holder and auction-purchaser, as plaintiffs in the Court which executed the decree, against the original mortgagor, and the purchasers from them as defendants, the defendants who discovered the fraud of plaintiffs subsequent to the confirmation of sale, contended that the sale to plaintiffs was fraudulent and contrary to the provisions of s. 294 of the Code of Civil Procedure :—Held, (1) that the confirmation of the sale was no bar to enforcing the right of defendants to set aside the sale, the fraud having been discovered only after such confirmation. Held, also, per MILLER and SANKARAN-NAIR, JJ. (ABDUR RAHIM, J., dissenting), that it was open to the defendants to have the sale set aside in the suit by way of answer to the plaintiff's claim. Per ABDUR RAHIM, J.—The sale cannot be set aside except on an application by defendants under ss. 294 and 244, Civil Procedure Code, to the Court executing the decree. Per SANKARAN-NAIR, J.—A plaint in a suit, in the Court executing the decree may be treated as an application under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. So also a written statement, containing an answer to the plaintiff's claim may be treated as an application under s. 244. Where a decree-holder purchases property in contravention of s. 294, the judgment-debtor, seeking to set aside the sale, need not prove or allege fraud or that the property was sold at an undervalue. In such a case, and especially where the purchase money is less than the amount advanced on the land, it is for the decree-holder to

A week later, but within the month allowed, he again applied to the Court to set aside the sale under s. 310A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), depositing the amount as required by the section. The Subordinate Judge rejected the second application on the ground that it did not lie as the judgment-debtor had already applied to set aside the sale on the ground of irregularity under s. 311 of the Code. This order was on appeal reversed by the District Judge. On appeal to the High Court, it was contended, first, that the order passed by the Subordinate Judge was not appealable; and, second, that the second application could not be granted because the judgment-debtor had already applied to set aside the sale under s. 311 of the Code. Held, (i) that the order passed by the Subordinate Judge was appealable. Pita v. Chunilal, 31 Bom. 207, followed; (ii) that the allegation in the first application being that the sale had been brought about by the fraud of the residents of the village where the lands were situate and where the decree-holder resided, the application must be regarded as an application under s. 244 and not under s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882. 3. ——— Sale in execution of a decree—Possession given to purchaser who was the decree-holder—Setting aside sale for irregularity—Satisfaction of decree and restoration of property to mortgagor—Remedy for recovery of mesne profits and interest—Application in execution proceedings—Separate suit—Right of purchaser to interest on purchase money. Under a mortgage decree obtained by the appellant against the respondents the mortgaged property was, in February 1901, put up for sale in default of payment and purchased by the decree-holder who had obtained leave to bid. The purchase money was not paid but was set off by the appellant against the amount due under the decree, which gave no future interest. Possession was given to the appellant in December 1901. In September 1903 the sale was set aside for irregularity and in March 1904 the respondents paid to the appellant the amount due under the decree and possession of the property was restored to them. Held (affirming the decisions of the Courts in India), that the respondents were entitled by ss. 583 and 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure to recover mesne profits and interest thereon in the execution proceedings, and were not obliged to have recourse to a separate suit for the purpose, the delay and expense of which their Lordships would not at this stage of the proceedings have been disposed to permit. Held, also, that the appellant was not entitled to interest on his purchase money which had not been actually paid, but was set off against what was due on the decree. The sale was set aside for his fault and it was out of the question that he should be allowed to make a profit at the expense of the respondents out of his own error, and so in effect recover interest not allowed him by the decree. 1. Decree—Execution—Surety—Notice to the surety—Court executing the decree can give the notice. The intention of s. 253 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) is that, when a person has made himself liable as a surety for the performance of a decree passed against another, he must have notice in writing that the decree is going to be executed against him. When the void part of an agreement can be properly separated from the rest, the latter does not become invalid; but where the parties themselves treat debts—void as well as valid—as a lump sum, the Court will regard the contract as an integral one and wholly void, upon which neither the principal nor the sureties can be sued. 10. ——— Settlement of decree without sanction by giving promissory note payable on demand—Note renewed from time to time—Suit on note. On the 4th December 1889, the plaintiffs obtained a decree against the defendants for R941. The decree was made payable in eight days, i.e., on or before the 12th December 1889. On the 9th December 1889, i.e., before the decree was capable of execution, it was settled by the defendants' paying R600 in cash and passing a promissory note for R341 payable on demand and carrying interest at 3 per cent. per mensem. The decree was satisfied and handed over to defendants, and plaintiffs also endorsed the summons to that effect. That compromise was not sanctioned by the Court. On the 9th November 1892, and again on the 4th November 1895, the plaintiffs made up their account with defendants and obtained new promissory notes from them for the amount found due in renewal of the note passed in 1889. The present suit was brought on the note passed on the 4th November 1895, which was for R815, and carried interest at 3 per cent. per mensem. Held, that the note sued on fell within the purview of s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, and was void and unenforceable under the provisions of that section. The consideration for the note given in 1889 was the agreement of the plaintiffs to accept it in satisfaction of the decretal balance due to them. If that agreement was void, the note given for the void consideration was void also. The note was not in fact the agreement, but was given in performance of the agreement. 11. ——— Havala or undertaking by a third party to pay decreed debt for the judgment-debtor—Agreement incorporating the havala in substitution of the decree, capable of execution at the date of the agreement—Suit on such agreement. The plaintiff obtained a money-decree against the defendant H P, and, in execution thereof, attached his property. Thereupon, at H P's request, five persons gave a havala or oral undertaking to pay the amount of the decree, and the attachment was removed. It appeared that some payment was made under the havala. Subsequently H P and the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 executed a bond to the plaintiff reciting the havala, the payment thereunder, and agreeing to pay the amount of the decree with interest. Neither the havala nor the bond was brought to the notice of the Court for sanction, and the decree, which was capable of execution, was then destroyed. The plaintiff now sued to recover the debt due under the bond. The District Judge was of opinion that the part of the bond which contained a promise to pay interest was void, but that in respect of the principal amount of the decree it was not void. On reference to the High Court:—Held, that the whole bond was void. The havala was an agreement such as is contemplated in para. 1 of s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, and was void for want of the sanction of the Court under that section. The bond, regarded as one in consideration of the havala, or as an agreement for satisfaction of the decree, was also void under para. 2 of the same sections for a similar reason. The decree was subsequently modified by substituting R91-2-6 for R30-7-0. On the 3rd October 1885, the parties entered into an agreement whereby (inter alia) the time to pay the decreed debt was extended to five years from that date, but no sanction of the Court was obtained. On the 18th February 1888, the parties applied to the Court to sanction the agreement of 1885. On reference to the High Court:—Held, that the agreement in question required the Court's sanction under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, for want of which it was void, so far as it related to the judgment-debt, and that the sanction could not be given at the date it was applied for. 13. ——— Agreement for or to give, time for satisfaction of judgment-debt—Agreement without sanction of Court—Illegal contract—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Consideration. The plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant, under which the judgment-debtor was liable to pay the amount by instalments with interest at 4 per cent. Eventually, the defendant failing to pay, the plaintiff accepted a bond executed jointly by the defendant and T, his father, by which they both became liable for the amount of the decree with interest at 18¾ per cent. In a suit on the bond it was contended that the bond was void under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, as being an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt made for no consideration, and without the sanction of the Court, and also, without such sanction providing for payment of a sum in excess of the amount due under the decree; that it was void within the meaning of s. 23 of the Contract Act as being forbidden by, or of a nature to, defeat the provisions of s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code; and that, consequently, the suit on it was not maintainable. Held, that s. 257A of the Code was not applicable. That section was framed to prohibit the enforcement of an agreement of the kind mentioned therein if made without the sanction of the Court in execution of the decree, but was not intended to take away the right of parties of entering into a fresh contract, either for payment of the judgment-debt, to give time for such payment, or for the payment of a larger sum than may be covered by the decree if it be for a proper consideration. In this case the consideration for the bond was a lawful consideration; it could not be said that because satisfaction of the decree was not certified to the Court, there was no consideration. Held, also, that the bond was not void under s. 23 of the Contract Act. Semble: The words "any law" in that section refer to some substantive law, and not to an adjective law, such as the Procedure Code is. On the next day K paid S R200 in part satisfaction of the decree, and induced K to accept a bond by which he (S) gave up the costs, and by which K was to pay the balance of the decree with interest at the end of eight months. S sued upon the bond. K contended that the bond was void under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the suit would not lie. Held, that the suit would lie. Since the amendment made in s. 258 by Act VII of 1888 such payments or adjustments may be recognized by a Civil Court, except when executing the decree, and, therefore, a suit based upon such a payment or adjustment should be admitted. The concluding clause of s. 258 has no direct bearing on s. 257A, as it relates to a different subject-matter. Quære: Whether s. 257A relates exclusively to agreements to extend the time for enforcing decrees by execution, as ruled by the Calcutta High Court, or is applicable to all agreements according to the view taken by the Bombay High Court ? Jhabar Mahomed v. *Modan Sonahar, I. It only prevents such agreements being enforced in a Court of Law. Where such an agreement to give time, never sanctioned by the Court as required by s. 257A, formed part of the consideration for a bond, and had actually been enjoyed by the obligee of the bond :—Held, that such consideration, not being in its nature illegal, and not having as a fact failed, there was no reason why the obligor should not enforce the terms of the bond. representing the share of the deceased plaintiff should be given to the defendant. This agreement was not certified to the Court, and the decree was executed at the instance of the surviving plaintiff who subsequently refused to give effect to the arrangement. 23. ——— Agreement for satisfaction of judgment-debt. A money-decree was passed against a zamindar by the High Court in 1883, and it was transferred to the District Court for execution. The decree-holder attached and prepared to bring to sale certain villages of the judgment-debtor. These villages were included in a mortgage subsequently executed by the judgment-debtor in favour of third parties. Both before and after the mortgage the decree-holder received from the zamindar certain sums in consideration of his agreeing to postponements of the sale; also it was agreed between them at a date subsequent to the mortgage that interest should be computed at a higher rate than that provided by the decree. Subsequently the decree-holder sought to bring the land to sale, and in computing the amount then due gave credit for none of the sums so received and calculated interest at the enhanced rate. The mortgagee objected that the computation was erroneous in both these respects, and the District Judge upheld his objection. The judgment-debtor took no part in the contest. Held, that the District Court, not being the Court which passed the decree, had no power to sanction the agreements under s. 257A, and that the decision was right. The judgment-debtor gave the hundi, but the sanction of the Court was not obtained to the transaction. In a suit by the decree-holders to recover the money secured by the hundi given under the circumstances mentioned above, it was held that the transaction was one contemplated by s. 257A of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that, as it had not been made with the sanction of the Court, it could not be enforced, and the suit should be dismissed. Hukum Chand Oswal v. *Taharunnessa Bibi, I. and does not destroy the rights of execution consequent on a decree. Where a mortgage-bond was given for an amount which included a sum due under a decree, and made the whole amount payable in instalments, it was contended, under s. 257A of Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), that the bond was void to the extent of the sum due under the decree, being an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt, and that in respect of that sum no suit would lie. Held, that the suit was maintainable. The mortgage-bond did not suspend the right to execute the decree, but it put an end to the remedy on the decree and substituted the mortgage-bond. It was the actual and present satisfaction of the judgment, and therefore was not an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt, and did not fall within s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code. 30. ——— Agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt. The test as to whether s. 257A of the Code of Civil Procedure operates to render an agreement void is whether the parties agree that the judgment-debt, qua judgment-debt, shall be put an end to. If so, the section does not render the agreement void. If not, it does. After a decree had been passed in favour of a plaintiff in a suit, the defendant gave plaintiff a bond by which he undertook to pay plaintiff, by instalments, the amount still due to him under the decree, after giving credit for a payment which had already been made on account. The bond gave plaintiff a twofold remedy in case of default,—first, a right to sue for the balance, and secondly, a right to recover the balance by executing the decree. The sanction of the Court was not obtained. Plaintiff received instalments, in pursuance of the terms of the bond, for some time, but defendant subsequently ceased to make any further payments. Plaintiff thereupon brought this suit on the bond to recover the balance which still remained unpaid, when it was pleaded in defence that the bond was void under s. 257A of the Code of Civil Procedure: Held, that the effect of the bond was to keep alive the relation of judgment-creditor and judgment-debtor by the express agreement of the parties, the debt being enforceable as a judgment-debt. Held, also, that, on its true construction, the bond was an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt, and, as the sanction of the Court had not been obtained, was void. And that the agreement was none the less void because one of the parties to it (the legal representative of one of the judgment-debtors) had not been one of the parties to the suit in which the decree was obtained. Juji Kamti v. Annai Bhatta, *I. 31. ——— Unsanctioned mortgage —Decree—Satisfaction of decree by a mortgage without sanction of Court—Mortgage bond void. The plaintiff was the holder of a decree against the defendant for R2,370. On the 28th November 1895, the plaintiff advanced to the defendant R59, and, in consideration of this advance and of the amount already due by the defendant to the plaintiff under the decree, the defendant mortgaged certain property to the plaintiff. The mortgage bond provided for payment of interest on the mortgage debt at the rate of 10½ per cent. per annum. The plaintiff subsequently sued on the mortgage to recover the principal and interest. Held (dismissing the plaintiff's suit), that the mortgage was void under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), no sanction having been obtained. Heera Nema v. Pestonji Dossabhoy, *I. 32 ——— Decree—Satisfaction—Sanction of Court—Agreement to pay less than decretal amount—Void condition in a bond. On the 4th October 1897 plaintiff obtained a money decree against defendant for R529-10-0. In full satisfaction of this decree, defendant, on the 3rd June 1898, executed a mortgage-bond, agreeing to pay R500 within three months from the date of the bond, and in case the sum were not so paid then to pay interest at R1½ per cent. per mensem, until payment. Held, that, so far as the bond provided for the payment of R500, it was valid, as it was for the payment of a sum less than the decretal amount, and therefore did not fall within the meaning of paragraph 2 of s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held, further, that the agreement to pay interest was void under paragraph 2 of s. 257A of the Code. Held, also, that, as the agreement to pay interest after the expiration of three months was a separate agreement, it did not affect the right to sue for recovery of the R500. In satisfaction of this decree, N and his son A, who were living as members of a joint Hindu family, passed two bonds, the one for R251 and the other for R99. Both the bonds provided for the payment of interest and no sanction of the Court was obtained to this arrangement. Held, (i) that the whole agreement was void, as the provision regarding interest carried the sum beyond the decretal amount. The consideration for each bond was the payment of principal with interest, and it existed from the very commencement and formed the basis of the whole contract; (ii) that the bonds were void against N, as well as against A, since N and his son A being members of a joint Hindu family, the son was as much liable as his father under the decree. Per CURIAM: "The true test, it appears to us, of the application of s. 257A is—is it a judgment-debt as to the person executing the agreement, in the sense that it is binding upon him, as if he were bound by the decree. Under Hindu law, the pious obligation of a son to pay his father's debts exists, whether the father is living or dead. The mere fact that a father is alive, when the decree against him is sought to be executed, does not absolve the son from his liability and entitle him to say that satisfaction of the decree shall not be obtained by selling his interest in the family property. When, however, the decretal debt is tainted by illegality or immorality, the son can contend that the decree is not binding upon him and establish the contention in a separate suit." GOVIND v. 34. ——— Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Execution of decree—Agreement—Khata—Decision on a point not raised by the defendant. It is not open to a Judge to decide a case in defendant's favour on a point not raised by him with the result that, if the decision be upheld, it will cast upon the defendant a far higher liability than if he had made the order, which the plaintiff had asked for. In an execution proceeding the parties arrived at an agreement in satisfaction of the decree. The agreement was in the form of a khata. Subsequently the plaintiff brought a suit on the khata and claimed interest on the amount in suit. A question having arisen in the suit as to whether the khata sued on was enforceable: Held, allowing the claim for the principal amount only, that if there was an agreement to pay interest, then either it was a part of the agreement embodied in the khata, or was a separable agreement. If it was a part of the agreement to be embodied in the khata, then under s. 92 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) evidence of it was not admissible. If it was a separate agreement, then it would not vitiate the agreement embodied in the khata, which apart from the separate oral agreement could not be open to objection under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Bhagchand v. Radhakisan, *I. 35. ——— Agreement to give time on condition of payment of higher rate of interest—Sanction of Court not accorded—Non-execution of judgment-debt—Separate suit to recover enhanced interest, maintainability of. It is only when the judgment-debt is extinguished and a new contract made that an agreement giving time for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt, not sanctioned by the Court, can be enforced. Where, therefore, the judgment-debtors filed an application before the Court executing the decree for a postponement of the sale, as they had agreed to pay interest at a rate higher than the decretal rate, but the sanction of the Court was not accorded to such payment. Held, that, as the agreement contained in the petition did not put an end to the plaintiff's claim on their previous decree and substitute something else in its place, it was void under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, and that no separate suit would lie to recover the enhanced interest under the agreement. Hurkissen Dass Serowjee v. Nibaran Chander Banerjee, *6 C. The consideration for the mortgage consisted, inter alia, of an amount due under a decree. The decree did not provide for interest, whereas interest was chargeable on the decretal amount included in the mortgage. The lower Appellate Court held that as the agreement had not been sanctioned under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the whole mortgage bond was void. Held, reversing the decree of the lower Court, that though the provision in the mortgage bond regarding the decretal amount could not be enforced, the remaining provisions were good and enforceable at law. 12. ——— Adjustment out of Court—Decree-holder becoming purchaser. A decree-holder, who was not barred by lapse of time in seeking to execute his decree, was opposed by the judgment-debtor, on the ground that the decree had been seized and sold by the Deputy Collector in execution of the decree of that functionary's Court, and that he himself (the judgment-debtor) had become the purchaser thereof. Held, that these proceedings amounted to an adjustment out of Court, which, under s. 206, Act VIII of 1859, could not be recognized by the Court, unless certified to by the judgment-creditor himself. 14. ——— Adjustment out of Court—Duty of execution-creditor—Presumption. K, an execution-creditor of C, applied to the Court by which the decree was passed, and caused C to be imprisoned under it. C then entered into a compromise upon certain terms with K for the adjustment of the decree, and K, thereupon, but without certifying the terms of such adjustment to the Court, petitioned for the release of C who was accordingly released. Subsequently K again applied to the Court to compel satisfaction of the whole amount of the decree against C. This application was opposed by C on the ground that an adjustment of the decree had taken place between him and K. The Judge, however, refused to enter into the question of the adjustment, as the terms of it had not been certified to the Court under s.206 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the Judge was in error; that it was the duty of K, on applying for the release of C, to certify the adjustment to the Court; that it would be unjust to allow him to take advantage of his own omission to do so; and that, not having done so, the presumption against him was that the decree had been satisfied in full; but that, under the circumstances, it would be the most equitable course to direct the Judge to enquire into the terms of the adjustment. The terms of this compromise were not certified to the Court under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that this compromise, having been effected after the decree in favour of B had been reversed, did not come within the meaning of s. 206, and was, therefore, a good defence to the suit of H. 16. ——— Adjustment made out of Court—Payment into Court. Under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 206, a debtor under a money decree can at any time bring the amount of his debt into Court to be paid to the judgment-creditor; and by analogy any other person against whom a decree is made for the delivery of moveable or immoveable property has an equal right to relieve himself from further vexation by making satisfaction with the knowledge of the Court in such mode as the circumstances of the special case admit of. The first instalment was made payable on 30th Cheyt 1295 (26th April 1888), and the other six instalments on the 30th of the months of Magh and Bysack in the three following years. In an application made on 9th February 1892, for execution of the decree, the decree-holder stated that only the first instalment had been paid, and asked for execution for the amount remaining due under the decree, and the judgment-debtors denied having paid any of the instalments. Payment, even if made, had not been certified to the Court. Held, that, although under the provisions of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, the payment in question, if made, could not be recognized as a payment or adjustment of the decree, yet it was competent to the decree-holder to prove such payment for the purpose of showing that the execution of the decree was not barred. between the same parties a petition was presented by them to the Munsif's Court, stating an arrangement between them for the payment of the amount decreed by instalments with a provision that in default of payment, " the Court may, on the application of the plaintiff issue a warrant and collect the amount, with costs of the petition, from the produce of my share of the agraharam lands . . . . . which are held liable by the razinama decree of this suit, from the said lands from my other property and from myself, and pay the same to plaintiff." A considerable remission was allowed to the judgment-debtor, and some reduction was made in the amount of interest payable. The kistbundi contained an express proviso that in default of payment of three consecutive kists the whole amount due under the bond was to become at once realizable ; and it also provided that in case of default the amounts due were to be recovered by execution, to which the judgment-debtor was to make no objection. Certain instalments having fallen due, the judgment-creditor sought to enforce the kistbundi by execution. Held, that he was entitled to do so ; that he was not bound to bring regular suit ; and that a provision in the bond by which payment might be enforced against property which could not have been attached and sold in execution of the decree did not prevent the decree-holder from proceeding by execution so long as he did not seek to enforce that provision. 38. ——— Agreement to pay by Instalments—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 258. A decree passed against the defendant in a suit, dated 13th March 1877, directed " that the plaintiff should recover the decree-money by instalments, agreeably to the term of the deed of compromise, and he, in case of default, should recover in a lump sum." The compromise mentioned in the decree provided that the amount in dispute should be paid in ten instalments, from 1284 to 1294 Fusli, the first to be paid on the 27th May 1877 (1284 Fusli), and the remaining nine instalments on Jaith Purnamashi of each succeeding Fusli year. On the 1st September 1883, the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, alleging that the first four instalments had been paid, but not any of the succeeding instalments, and they claimed to recover under the terms of the decree, the fifth and all the remaining instalments in a lump sum. The judgment-debtors contended that the application was barred by limitation, as they had not paid a single instalment, and more than three years had elapsed from the date of the first default ; and that, even if the first four instalments had been paid, such payments could not be recognized by the Court as they had not been certified. Held, that recognition of such instalments was not barred by the terms of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Sham Lal v. *Kanhia Lal, I. The deed recited that the decree was under execution, and that a mortgage bond, dated the 1st December 1873, in favour of the judgment-debtor by a third party, had been attached and advertised for sale, and that the decree-holder and judgment-debtor had arranged the following method of satisfying the decree : that the judgment-debtor should make over the said bond to the decree-holder, in order that he might bring a suit thereon at his own expense against the obligor, and realize the amount secured by the bond, and out of the amount realized satisfy the decree under execution with costs and future interest, together with all costs of the suit to be brought against the obligor, and together with a sum due by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder under a note of hand for R250 with interest; and other details which need not be stated. On the same day that this deed was executed, the decree-holder filed a petition in the Court, to the effect that under the agreement an arrangement had been made for payment of the judgment-debt, by which the judgment-debtor made over to him the bond advertised for sale in order that the petitioner should file a suit under it at his own cost against the obligor, and realize the debt due under the decree in execution with interest and costs; and he prayed that the sale to be held that day might be postponed, and the application for execution struck off for the present, and the previous attachment maintained, and stating that after realization of the amount entered in the bond advertised for sale, an application for execution would be duly filed. On this the order was that the execution case be struck off the file and the attachment maintained. On the 24th December 1883, the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, alleging that the judgment-debtor had failed to make over the bond to him according to the agreement. The judgment-debtor objected that the decree was no longer capable of execution, having been superseded by the agreement of the 11th January 1881, and that the application was barred by limitation, the previous application being dated the 9th November 1880. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That the agreement of the 11th January 1881 did not contemplate, and had not the effect of, cancelling the decree and substituting for it a new contract, inasmuch as the deed contained nothing to the effect that the decree was superseded, and all it did was to provide means by which the decree, together with another small sum due by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder, might be satisfied without having recourse to the sale of the bond attached, and the effect would be that, on realization satisfaction would be certified in whole or in part to the Court executing the decree. Further, if the arrangement was to be regarded as within the meaning of an adjustment of the decree under s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, it could only be recognized by the Court when certified by the decree-holder or judgment-debtor; and in this case the only certification which was made was by the decree-holder, by his petition of the 11th January 1881, which was in respect of a temporary arrangement under which the decree remained in force. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the agreement of the 11th January 1881 was intended by the parties as a performance of the obligation created by the decree, by substituting a fresh obligation founded upon contract, but that the deed could not be regarded as such an adjustment of the decree as satisfied the requirements of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, because the creditors, whilst admitting the creation of a separate contract, took care to say that the decree was to be kept alive, and the attachment thereunder was to subsist; and that, therefore, the certification of the adjustment was inadequate and could not be recognized in executing the decree. 47. ——— Act XII of 1879, s. 36—Suit to recover money paid out of Court in satisfaction of decree. The provisions of s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859) only prevent the Court executing the decree from recognizing a payment made out of Court, and do not bar a suit for the refund of such payment. G held a decree against D, who satisfied it out of Court, and obtained a receipt from G to the effect that it was satisfied. Notwithstanding this, G executed the decree and recovered the amount of it through the Court, although D pleaded satisfaction in the execution proceedings and produced the receipt. In a suit brought by D against G for refund of the money received by G out of Court, the defendant contended that the suit was not maintainable. Held, that it was maintainable according to the law as it stood before the passing of Act XII of 1879. Gunamani Dasi v. *Prankishori Dasi, 5 B. The words "any Court" in that clause have no application to a Criminal Court investigating a charge of fraudulently executing a decree under s. 210 of the Penal Code. Those words do not bar any criminal remedy which an injured judgment-debtor may have against a fraudulent decree-holder, whether by a prosecution under ss. 193, 210, 406, or any other section of the Penal Code. 58. ——— Suit to recover instalments due under a mortgage made in adjustment of a decree. Under s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, no Court can recognize an uncertified adjustment of a decree for any judicial purpose whatever. Pattankar v. Devji, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 146, overruled. A suit will not lie to enforce an uncertified agreement of adjustment of a decree against a judgment-debtor, the consideration for which is, that it shall operate in satisfaction of the decree; as there is, in that case, no consideration which the Court can recognize, and therefore no valid consideration for the judgment-debtor's agreement. The plaintiff was the assignee of a decree obtained by one O K against the defendants on the 5th May 1883. By that decree, O K was declared entitled to recover R9,961-5-6, with interest at nine per cent. from the defendants; and payment was ordered to be made to him of the said sum by weekly instalments of R200. In order to secure the payment of the said instalments, the defendants were required to execute a mortgage to O K of certain property, with power to him to sell the same and to execute the decree for the whole amount, in case of default, for six months. O K assigned the decree to the plaintiff in the present suit, and subsequently to the assignment (viz., on the 21st July 1883) the defendants executed to the plaintiff the mortgage on which the present suit was brought. The mortgage-deed, after reciting the above facts, stated that the defendants had agreed to satisfy the amount of the decree, and it contained a covenant by the defendants that they would pay R9,961-5-6, with interest at six per cent. by monthly instalments of R400 from the 21st August 1883. The mortgage, therefore, differed from the decree, both with regard to the instalments and the rate of interest. The plaintiff sued to recover the sum of R4,207, being the amount of instalments due to him under the said mortgage. Held, that the suit would not lie, as the mortgage was an adjustment of the decree, and had not been certified to the Court as required by s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Shortly afterwards the defendant sent R70 to the plaintiff's vakil, intimating by a letter that the remittance was in part payment of the decree, and that an arrangement would be made to pay the balance. The plaintiff did not take out execution of the decree, but the part payment was not certified to the Court. On appeal the decree was reversed, and the defendant applied for the refund of the amount which he had paid to the plaintiff. The Court of first instance granted the application. The plaintiff appealed and the Appellate Court reversed the order, holding that, under the provisions of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, the payment made by the defendant, not having been certified, could not be recovered. Held by the High Court, that the defendant was entitled to recover the amount paid

Thereupon H S and S M brought a suit for declaration of their right of purchase and the recovery of a 10-anna share of the money in the hands of H D and R D. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the relief sought for. Held, also, that the provisions of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code did not affect the suit, which was brought, not upon the allegation that the decrees were satisfied by the plaintiff's purchase, but, on the contrary, was founded upon the proposition that the decrees were not so satisfied. Abdul Rahiman v. Khoja Khaki Aruth, *I. The defendants pleaded that it had been paid, and the plaintiff rejoined that, even if it had been paid, the Court could not recognize the payment, as it had not been certified under s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that, under the circumstances, the rent, when paid, was to be deemed as paid under the mirasi tenure and not under the decree, and, therefore, s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply, and payment need not be certified. ——— ss. 276 and 305—Execution of decree—Attachment—Private sale pending attachment—Suit by vendee for recovery of possession.

A judgment-debtor having executed a sale-deed of his house pending attachment in execution of a decree and the vendee having subsequently brought a suit to recover possession of the house, the lower Court dismissed the suit holding that s. 305 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) furnished an answer to the suit. Held, reversing the decree, that the sale was a private alienation and it operated to convey to the plaintiff the interest of the vendor in the property the deed purported to pass. But to prevent frauds on decree-holders, it is provided by s. 276 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) that "when an attachment has been made by actual seizure or by written order duly intimated and made known in the manner aforesaid, any private alienation of the property attached, whether by sale, gift, mortgage or otherwise . . . . during the continuance of the attachment shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment". The sale, if made during the continuance of the attachment, would be void to the extent indicated in the section. S. 305 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) is an enabling section and qualifies the prohibition contained in s. 276; but on compliance with the conditions of that section a private alienation, notwithstanding s. 276, becomes absolute even against all claims enforceable under the attachment. If it did not become absolute under s. 305, then it would not be operative against claims enforceable under the attachment, but to that extent would be defeasible. 1. ——— Execution of decree—Decree for sale on a mortgage—Prior mortgagee not entitled to intervene in execution proceedings. In a suit for sale on a mortgage, the plaintiff obtained a decree and an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged property. A person who had not been a party to the suit intervened, alleging himself to be a prior mortgagee and objected to the sale and the sale was stopped. Held, that the prior mortgagee, if he were one, was not entitled to intervene in these execution proceedings and that the order allowing his objection was passed without jurisdiction and was a proper subject for revision. Where the order of the lower Appellate Court was passed without jurisdiction, the High Court declined to interfere under the extraordinary jurisdiction (s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882) on the ground that the plaintiff, to whom relief was granted by the lower Appellate Court, would, if the application were allowed, be obliged to bring a suit to establish the right which he claimed to the property in dispute after the expiry of the period of limitation within which he was entitled to bring that suit. At the auction-sale the plaintiffs themselves purchased the property with the leave of the Court subject to the mortgage. Before the sale was confirmed and the decree was satisfied the plaintiffs having brought a suit for a declaration that the mortgage was fraudulent and without consideration it was contended that the plaintiffs were no longer judgment-creditors but purchasers and that what was attached and sold was equity of redemption, therefore, the purchasers could not claim more than they bought. Held, that, as the suit was brought before the confirmation of the sale and the satisfaction of the decree, the plaintiffs were judgment-creditors and not purchasers. Held, further, that the plaintiffs under their purchase were not purchasers of merely the equity of redemption and were not bound by estoppels which would have bound the judgment-debtor. There is nothing to prevent such a purchaser from benefiting by the clearance of any claim upon the property even if he has himself to sue to procure it. 1. ——— Relief "in respect of the same matter"—Joinder of causes of action and parties—Suit against purchasers of different items at invalid sale. Where the validity of a sale of land for arrears of rent is in question, it is for the landlord, who seeks to avail himself of the special procedure by way of distressed provided for by the Act, to show that the requirements of the Act have been complied with. Insufficient notice of sale is not a mere irregularity curable under ss. 36 and 40 of the Rent Recovery Act. The provisions of s. 36 cannot be imported into s. 40 so as to make the former applicable to a sale of land distrained for arrears of rent. S. 36 introduces an exception to the general rule that, primâ facie, non-compliance with the requirements of the Act will vitiate a sale; and this exception is expressly limited to the case of moveable property. The provision in s. 18 as to the length of notice is that in fixing the day of sale not less than seven days must be allowed. If a notice be published on the 16th announcing that a sale will take place on the 22nd, the sale will be bad, even though it may take place, in fact, on the 23rd. A suit against a number of purchasers of different items of land distrained and subsequently sold under the Rent Recovery Act for a declaration that the sale was invalid for want of proper notice is not bad for misjoinder of parties and of causes of action. Though, in a sense, every item sold constitutes a separate sale, the "matter" is the same, the sale being of distrained property, under the same notification and in respect of the same arrears. The proceedings, in which the various items are sold are one and the ground, on which the validity of the sale is impugned, is the same in each case. The same defect vitiates the whole proceedings and is the common ground of attack. The cause of action, namely, the wrongful sale, is the same as against all the defendants. When a suit is brought under s. 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the attachment (and not the making of the order) constitutes the cause of action; and different purchasers of the attached property may be properly joined as defendants in the same suit. The judgment-debtor's wife objected under s. 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure that the property was hers. This objection prevailed, and the property was released from attachment. The decree-holder then filed a regular suit against the objector and the judgment-debtor to have it declared that the property was liable to attachment and sale in execution of her decree. Held, that the proper valuation of such suit for the purposes of jurisdiction was the amount of the decree under execution and not the value of the property attached. Dwarka Das v. Kameshar Prasad, *I. Appellate Court, whether an application in continuation of application to execute the decree of the lower court. A judgment-debtor has the right to have as nearly as may reasonably be a just and true valuation placed upon his property before it is sold; he has also the right to have the property to be sold described in the sale-proclamation with reasonable accuracy. Saadatmand Khan v. Phul Kuar, L. R. 25 I. A. 146, and Aruna Chellam Chetti v. Aruna Chellam Chetti, L. R. 15 I. A. 171, replied upon. An appeal lies against an order refusing an application made by a judgment-debt or objecting that the valuation of the properties contained in the sale-proclamation was incorrect and in many instances grossly inadequate and that the properties were misdescribed in such a manner as to render their identification by intending purchasers extremely difficult. Where the sale-proclamation was published on the 14th November and the judgment-debtors made an application on the following day for transfer of the execution proceedings to another district: Held, that the fact that he did not object to the statement in the sale-proclamation as to the value of the property advertised for sale when he made his application on the 15th, did not disentitle him to raise the said objection which he subsequently raised on the 3rd December. Pending the hearing of an appeal, the decree-holder took out execution of a mortgage decree; the judgment-debtor made an objection to the validity of the sale-proclamation on the ground that the statement therein as to the value of the property was incorrect and the Court overruled the objection. The Appellate Court altered the decree and extended the period of redemption; the decree-holder then made an application to execute the decree of the Appellate Court. Held, that the application to execute the decree of the Appellate Court was not a continuation of the former application and the lower Court was in error in declining to enter into the question as to the value of the property as stated in the sale-proclamation. Execution of decree—Decree-holder bidding for property with permission—Right to set-off amount due to decree-holder against purchase money. The first paragraph of s. 294 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) requires the permission of the Court to enable the holder of a decree to bid for property. If he gets that permission and gets it without qualification, then the amount due on the mortgage may, if he so desires, be set off. But it may be one of the terms on which the permission to bid is granted that there should not be this right of set-off. In such a case no set-off can be directed. HAZARIMAL v. NAMDEV (1908)

1. ——— Rateable distribution—Realization of Assets—Interpretation. A certain sum of money, which was deposited in a Bank in the joint names of the Collector and a judgment-debtor, and which belonged to the judgment-debtor, was sent by the Collector in the form of a cheque to the Court at the request of the Court to which the judgment-creditor had applied for the payment of his decretal amount out of the said money. After the cheque was received by the Court and converted into cash, the judgment-creditor contended that the money was not liable to rateable distribution under s. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), between certain other judgment-creditors of the judgment-debtor, because the money did not fall within the description of assets dealt with in that section, that is, it could not be said that those assets had been realized, and if they had been realized they had not been realized in execution of a decree inasmuch as the money had not been attached in the Bank. Held, that s. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) applied, and that the money was liable to rateable distribution between the several judgment-creditors. S. 295 provides that whenever assets are realized by sale or otherwise in execution ss. 295, 490, 648—Right to Rateable Distribution of creditor attaching before judgment—"Realization" of assets—Attachment before judgment, if property outside jurisdiction. Under s. 490 of the Code of Civil Procedure read with s. 273, the property of a judgment-debtor attached before judgment is brought into Court by stress of the attachment, and, where a decree follows the judgment, the creditor will be entitled, without a fresh attachment, to rateable distribution out of the proceeds of sale of such property under s. 295. The fact that, subsequent to realisation, he applies for attachment of the amount, will not affect his right, as no such attachment was necessary. The operation of s. 295 is not confined to cases where the property actually sold and realised belongs to the judgment-debtor. It is also applicable where the attached property is a decree in favour of the judgment-debtor against others, and the money is realised in execution of such decree by the sale of property belonging to such others. Semble: Under s. 648 of the Code of Civil Procedure, property outside the jurisdiction of a Court, in which a suit is pending, can be attached by such Court in anticipation of its judgment. Ram Pertab Jhowar v. *Madho Rai, 7 C. The High Court will however interfere, where the right of the party is clear and where the result of non-interference will be only to multiply proceedings by driving the party to a suit, in which there can be no defence. A Court, which has found that a party is entitled to rateable distribution under s. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, has no discretionary power to refuse such relief; and in refusing to grant it such Court declines a jurisdiction vested in it by law. The decrees were consolidated and one sale was held on account of both of them. The judgment-debtor applied to the Assistant Collector, offering to pay in the sum decreed under s. 310A of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. The application was rejected by the Assistant Collector, and the auction-purchaser obtained formal possession over the house sold. On appeal by the judgment-debtor, the Collector set aside the order of the Assistant Collector and extended the time for payment. The money was paid in and the sale set aside. The Board of Revenue rejected the application for revision made by the auction-purchaser, who thereupon brought a suit for confirmation of the sale in the Civil Court. Held, that whether the sale was held under Act No. III of 1901 in which case appeals from orders passed in execution would lie to the Collector, Commissioner and the Board of Revenue under ss. 210 and 211, or the order passed on the application under s. 310A was one passed under Act No. II of 1901, the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to entertain any question relating to it. ——— ss. 310A and 622——Execution of decree—Application to set aside sale—Who have a right to apply—Revision. A mortgagee sued for sale on his mortgage impleading besides the mortgagee two persons, who claimed a title to the mortgaged property adverse to the mortgagee. In that suit it was decided that the property, the subject of the mortgage in suit, belonged to the mortgagor and not to the other defendants. The plaintiff mortgagee obtained a decree for sale and caused the mortgaged property to be sold by auction. The defendants, other than the mortgagor, applied to have this sale set aside under s. 310A of the Code of Civil Procedure, but their application was rejected and they then sought in revision to get this order reversed. Held, by BANERJI, J.—That the defendants applicants were not entitled to make an application under s. 310A of the Code, they not being judgment-debtors, whose property had been sold. Per RICHARDS, J.—Whether or not applicants were entitled to make the application which they did make (and they possibly were so entitled), the Court below did not fail to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law nor did it act in the exercise of that jurisdiction illegally. Such statements are made without much consideration and it is well known that purchasers do not take serious notice of any statement in the sale proclamation as to the value of the property to be sold. S. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code does not require that the sale proclamation should be served in each of the villages comprised in the property to be sold. The word "property" in that section evidently refers to each

Though it is a sound rule to follow, viz., to serve a separate proclamation in each of the villages embraced in the same process, when they are at such a distance from one another that there is no moral certainty of communication to a person interested in the one of what is publicly done in the other, the fact that the processes were not served in each does not necessarily constitute an infringement of the provisions of s. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code. Tripura Sundari v. *Durga Churn Pal, I. He applied to the Court seeking to have the sale set aside on the ground that no notice had been issued to the applicant under s. 248 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, and that in consequence the property was sold at an undervalue. The Court of first instance dismissed the application; and the dismissal was upheld by the lower Appellate Court. On second appeal, a preliminary objection was taken that the order dismissing the application fell under s. 312 of the Code and was not appealable. Held, that the application did not fall under s. 311 and the order dismissing the same did not come within s. 312 of the Code. Held, further, that the order fell under s. 244 (c) of the Code and was appealable as a decree. The question involved was "a question relating to the satisfaction of the decree" within the meaning of the clause. The non-issue of a notice to a party concerned is not a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sales, within the meaning of s. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). It is rather an irregularity in proceedings which are anterior to the publishing or the conduct of the sale. The words "publishing or conducting" in s. 311 of the Code refer respectively to the proclamation of sale under s. 287 and to the action of the officer by whom the sale was held. The sale took place eight years after the decree. Held, that, as no notice was issued to the appellant, the order of both the lower Courts must be reversed and the sale set aside. Execution of decree—Property to be sold ancestral in part only—Transfer of decree to Collector—Notification (Local Government) No. 671, dated August 31st, 1880. Held, that where the Civil Court is satisfied that the land which is ordered to be sold or any portion of it is ancestral, it should transfer the decree for execution to the Collector so far as regards ancestral land only. Thereupon the judgment-debtor applied to the Court for the setting aside of the sale under s. 310A of the Code. The Court refused to set aside the sale on the ground that there was another decree-holder who had taken action under s. 295 of the Code, and that it was incumbent on the judgment-debtor to pay into Court a sum sufficient to answer his claim. On appeal by the judgment-debtor, the Judge dismissed the appeal on the ground that no appeal lay. Held, on second appeal by the judgment-debtor, that the order was appealable. An appeal lies from an order under s. 310A of the Code where the case falls under s. 244 (c). Murlidhar v. Anandrao, I. L. R. 25 Bom. 418, qualified. A question under s. 310A of the Code may be one relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree or to the stay of execution thereof. "When a question has arisen as to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of a decree between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, the fact that the purchaser, who is no party to the suit, is interested in the result, has never been held a bar to the application of the section, i.e., s. 244." Prosunno Coomar Sanyal v. Kasi Das Sanyal, L. R. 19 I. A. 166, applied. S. 310A of the Code applies even if the execution proceedings be referred to the Collector, who has no power to set aside a sale under the provisions of the Code. There is nothing in the section which precludes the Court from setting aside the sale merely because it had been confirmed. As s. 310A prescribes that the Court shall pass an order setting aside the sale whenever its provisions are complied with, the order refusing to set aside the sale reversed. ——— ss. 325A, 326—Execution of decree—Limitation—Execution as to immoveable property of judgment-debtor stayed by reason of such property being in charge of the Collector. The plaintiffs obtained in 1874 a decree for money against the defendant. In 1879, by an order under s. 326 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the immoveable property of the judgment-debtor was placed under the management of the Collector. Before this order was made, and during the period when the judgment-debtor's property was in charge of the Collector, various applications for execution were made by the decree-holders. Finally, in 1896, about ten years after the last preceding application, the decree-holders applied for execution of their decree shortly after the property had been released by the Collector. Held, that, as regards the immoveable property of the judgment-debtors, against which execution was sought, the application was not barred by limitation, inasmuch as the decree-holders had no remedy by execution against that property until the Collector's management had ceased. The arrangement proposed by the Collector was not one which could be proposed or accepted under the terms of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. MUTTRA PERSHAD v. RAMPERSHAD . . . . 6 N. W. 39

H—Decree for possession—Execution of decree—Obstruction—Application for removal of obstruction numbered and registered as suit—Adverse possession—Limitation. On the 1st June 1889 defendant's husband Vishnu sold certain land to Vithal and passed to him a rent-note the period of which expired on the 20th March 1890. Subsequent to the expiry of that period, Vishnu, and after his death his widow, the defendant, continued in possession. Afterwards the plaintiffs, to whom the land had been sold, having obtained a decree for possession against the sons of Vishnu, Vishnu's widow, Kashibai, caused obstruction to delivery of possession in execution of the decree. The plaintiffs, thereupon, on the 22nd January 1902, applied for the removal of the obstruction and the Court, on the 26th July 1902, ordered that their application be numbered and registered as a suit between the decree-holders as plaintiffs and the claimant as defendant under s. 331 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), Chapter XIX, prov. H. Held, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the suit was not time-barred. The claimant was not entitled as against the decree-holders to count the time up to the 26th of July 1902, when the application was numbered as a suit, as the period of his adverse possession; for it had ended prior to the 20th March 1890, by reason of the proceedings under prov. H of Chapter XIX of the Code of Civil Procedure, initiated on the 22nd of January, 1902. KRISHNAJI v. KASHIBAI (1906) . I. L. R. 30 Bom. 115

Where an application under s. 328, Civil Procedure Code, was resisted and the opposite party put in a written statement and the application was ultimately dismissed on the preliminary ground of limitation : Held, that the order cannot be considered merely as an order refusing to register a plaint but has the same force as a decree and is subject to the same conditions as to appeal or otherwise as a decree, and an order by the District Judge on appeal reversing the order of the first Court on the preliminary point and remanding the application for trial on the merits is an order under s. 562, Civil Procedure Code, and an appeal lies to the High Court against such an order. II, Art. 11—Suit by person against whom order relating to possession is passed.* The order contemplated by s. 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure (when a purchaser has been resisted by any person other than the judgment-debtor) is one which will become final and conclusive, unless the party, against whom it is passed, institutes a suit (within a year, under Art. 11 of Sch. 2. ——— Execution—Possession by receipt of rent—Tenant—Sale—Decree—Objection to sale—Dispossession of third party in execution—Claimant to possession by receipt of rent from judgment-debtor—High Court. An application under s. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code, so far as it may purport to be made on behalf of the judgment-debtor, cannot be entertained. The term ' possession ' in s. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code is not restricted merely to tangible or physical possession, but includes constructive possession or possession in law by receipt of rent or otherwise ; a person alleging that he was in possession through his tenant, who had been ousted from the land by the delivery of possession to the purchaser, is entitled to make an application under that section. Kisori Lal Gossami v. Lala Shib Lal, 1 C. W. N. 343, and Ibrahim Mullick v. Ramjadu Rakshit, I. L. R. 30 Calc. 710, discussed. But a person alleging that he was in possession by receipt of rent from the judgment-debtor cannot get any relief under s. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code. When a Court, upon an erroneous view of the scope of a section of the Code, applies it to a case to which it has no application, it acts without jurisdiction. Shivanathaji v. Joma Kashinath, I. L. II, Art. 11. An application under s. 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure was dismissed for default, on the petitioner applying to withdraw his petition for want of evidence, the opposite party being present. In a suit by the petitioner for possession of the property, the subject of the above application, the defendants pleaded limitation under Art. 11 of Sch. II to the Limitation Act. Held, that there was no enquiry within the meaning of s. 335, and that consequently the order made was not conclusive and the suit was not barred by the special limitation of one year. It is a condition precedent to passing an order under s. 335, so as to make it conclusive unless a suit is brought within one year, that the Court shall enquire into the matters of resistance, etc. SARAT CHANDRA BISU v. TARINI PRASAD PAL CHOWDHRY I. II, Art. 11—Purchasers at Court-sale—Obstruction to delivery of possession—Obstructor manager of joint family consisting of minors—Partition between obstructor and minors—Allotment of the property to the share of minors—Withdrawal of the obstructor by default without notice to minors—Design on the part of the obstructor—Order awarding possession to purchasers—Suit by minors to recover possession—Limitation.* Certain purchasers of lands at a Court-sale applied to be put in possession of the property, but the delivery of possession was obstructed by one V who was the manager of a joint family consisting of himself and his two minor step-brothers. While the obstruction proceedings were pending a farkhat or settlement on partition had been arrived at between the obstructor and his two minor step-brothers and the lands had fallen to the share of the minors. V thereupon designedly withdrew from the obstruction-proceedings by allowing them to be dismissed for default, without giving notice of his abandonment to the minors, and an order was passed awarding possession to the purchasers in the absence of any appearance by V. The order was passed on the 6th August 1898. The farkhat or settlement on partition, which for its validity required the sanction of the Court, had never received that sanction and it was subsequently set aside at the instance of the plaintiffs. In the year 1903 the plaintiffs, that is, the step-brothers of V, to whom the lands had been allotted, brought a suit to recover possession of the lands. Both the lower Courts held the suit to be barred under Art. 11, Sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held, on second appeal by plaintiff, that the suit was not time-barred under Art. 11, Sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) as the minors were not "efficiently represented."

After notice to his creditors amongst whom was the present petitioner, the holder of a decree against S, the District Munsif passed an order declaring S insolvent. A receiver was appointed to take charge of the insolvent's properties and he was put in possession of all of them excepting two items, one of which was not included in the schedule. The receiver realised assets and made distributions among the creditors entitled, but no order was passed by the Court either discharging or refusing to discharge the insolvent. The present petitioner then applied to the Court for the arrest of the insolvent in execution of his decree : Held, that in the circumstances the insolvent could not be arrested. If an insolvent prevents the receiver from obtaining possession of his properties or if it subsequently transpires that he has committed some act of bad faith, then the Court may refuse his discharge, under s. 355 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Semble: That in such a case it might be open to creditors to apply to execute their decrees. The defendants pleaded misjoinder of parties and of causes of action. On the 14th November 1901, the High Court on appeal gave effect to this plea of the defendants, but under s. 373 of the Civil Procedure Code gave leave to one of the plaintiffs, whose name was struck out, to file, if so advised, a fresh suit in respect of his own cause of action. The plaintiff, whose name was so struck out, filed this suit on the 13th February 1902. Held, that the second suit was barred by limitation, for when a suit is withdrawn under s. 373 of the Civil Procedure Code, with permission to bring a fresh suit, the effect of s. 374 of the Code is that limitation is to apply to the second suit as if it was the first. Held, also, that s. 14 of the Limitation Act did not apply to such a case. Krishnaji Lakshman v. Vital Ravji, *I. The plaintiff appealed and subsequently purported to withdraw from the suit. The Judge in appeal passed a decree dismissing the appeal, but determining that the effect of the withdrawal was to set aside the decree passed by the first Court. Some of the defendants preferred a second appeal. Held, that when in a partition suit defendants have by concession of the plaintiff acquired rights which otherwise could not have existed, it is not open to the plaintiff, who has made that concession, afterwards to annul its effect by withdrawing from the suit in the Appellate Court. A question having arisen as to whether or not the decree of the lower Appellate Court was appealable under ss. 373 and 582 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882): Held, that ss. 373 and 582 of the Civil Procedure Code do not support the conclusion that rights actually vested by the decree of the first Court can afterwards be annulled by the plaintiff withdrawing of his own free will and without permission of the Court. The result of the adjudication was that there was a formal expression of an adjudication by the lower Appellate Court upon a right claimed by the defendants (appellants in second appeal) and thus there was a decree within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code from which an appeal would lie. were framed the plaintiffs applied for withdrawal of the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit on the grounds that the different High Courts held different views as to the admissibility or otherwise of oral evidence and that s. 10A of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879) was not applicable. The Court passed an order for the withdrawal of the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. Held, that the Court acted with material irregularity in passing the order. The Court should not allow a suit to be withdrawn after the parties are ready for trial if such withdrawal may operate to the prejudice of the defendant. A plaintiff cannot be allowed to withdraw a suit in order that he may wait and see if the law is not altered at some future date in such a way as to enable him to obtain a decree against the defendant who is ready for trial and prepared to resist the claim and certain of success on the law in force. 2. ——— Consent Decree—Status of landlord and tenant—Forfeiture clause—Suit to enforce forfeiture—Relief against forfeiture. When a plaintiff is seeking to enforce by original suit a right to forfeiture contained in a consent decree (passed under s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code in accordance with a lawful agreement recorded under that section), whereby the status of landlord and tenant is established between the plaintiff and defendant, the Court in the exercise of its equitable jurisdiction is not precluded from granting such relief against forfeiture as it might have granted, had the status arisen from contract or custom. Per JENKINS, C.J.—As under s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the decree was to be in accordance with the agreement, it cannot have altered the relations of the parties as they existed under the agreement. And as it was an incident of those relations that the right of forfeiture was subject to relief, that incident must still apply when those relations are established by a decree passed in accordance with the agreement. Per BEAMAN, J.—The difference between a consent decree declaring the agreement of parties, and the agreement of parties themselves, when the one or the other is sought to be afterwards enforced, goes no further than this, that in the former case it would not be open to a party to question the accuracy of the decree, as expressing what at the time was the contract which had been made. Shirekuli Timapa Hegda v. *Mahablya, I. 3. ——— "Lawful Agreement or Compromise"—"Relates to the suit"—Compromise in a suit for money by which the agreed amount is charged on property is lawful and the relief by way of charge "relates to the suit." The language of s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure is wide and general and does not preclude parties from setting their disputes on such lawful terms as they might agree to without being restricted to such relief as one only of the parties had chosen to claim in the plaint. In a suit for money, where the plaint prays for a simple money decree, an agreement, by which the parties agree that the amount decreed according to the compromise should be a charge on certain properties, is "lawful" and "relates to the suit" so as to be embodied in the decree. Act (IV of 1882), ss. 58, 100. In a suit for recovery of money due on bahi-khata accounts a decree was made upon a petition of compromise for the payment by the defendants of a certain sum by instalments. The decree further declared that certain immoveable properties specified in the petition of compromise "shall be hypothecated for the realisation of the money and that the defendants shall not be able to create any incumbrance on the same." Held, that having regard to cl. (1) of s. 17 of the Registration Act the latter clause, even if it amounted to the mortgage, would not require registration. Bindesri Naik v. Ganga Saran Sahu, 2 C. W. N. 129; s. c. L. R. 25 I. B. D. 239; Burlinsan v. Hall, 12 Q. B. D. 347, relied on. The question whether any particular term of a petition of compromise incorporated in a compromise decree relates to the suit or is covered by its subject matter must be decided from the frame of the suit, the relief claimed and the relief allowed by the decree on adjustment by lawful agreement. The mutual connection of the different parts of the relief granted by a consent decree is an important element for consideration in each case in deciding whether any portion of the relief is within the scope of the suit. No hard and fast rule can be laid down and each case must be governed by its own facts. GOBINDA CHANDRA PAUL v. DWARKA NATH PAUL (1908) . . . I. L. R. 35 Calc. 867

5. ——— Compromise—Allegation of compromise by one party denied by the other—Court if must receive proof of same—Agreement, if may be verbal—Court-fee. Where, in the course of a suit, one party alleges that the dispute has been compromised and prays for a decree on the basis of such compromise, whilst the other party denies that there has been a completed agreement to compromise, the proper course for the Court is to take evidence as to whether a compromise was really made between the parties or not. There is nothing in s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), which requires the agreement or compromise mentioned therein to be written. It may be written or verbal. 6. ——— Suit for Administration—Reference to Commissioner—Parties agreeing orally to submit to Commissioner's decision—Commissioner's award—Adjustment of suits, what is—Written submission necessary. The parties to an arbitration suit consented to it being referred to the Commissioner to take the usual accounts and to determine their respective shares. In the usual course, the matter came before the Assistant Commissioner for taking accounts, and a large mass of accounts, objections and surcharges were filed by the various parties. On appearing before the Assistant Commissioner the parties came to an understanding that the matter in dispute should be left to be decided by the Assistant Commissioner in a summary manner without going into formal evidence beyond the accounts, objections and surcharges filed before him. The 1st and 6th defendants with their attorney were present at this meeting and after their attorney had agreed to the above course suggested by the Assistant Commissioner, the Assistant Commissioner himself explained to the 1st and 6th defendants in turn his proposal and told them that whatever award he made would be binding on them. To this they agreed, the 1st defendant even saying he would take one rupee if that was the sum awarded to him. It was also agreed that the Assistant Commissioner should draw up his findings in the form of a consent decree to be taken by the parties as that would save the parties a large sum in costs. At another meeting before the Assistant Commissioner the latter recorded his findings and then proceeded to draw up the consent decree embodying these findings therein but the defendants 1 and 6 refused to be bound by his decision. Upon application being made by the plaintiff that an adjustment of the suit might be recorded under s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code on the basis of the Assistant Commissioner's decision: Held, that there had been no adjustment of the suit. There had been no written submission to arbitration as provided by s. 4 of the Indian Arbitration Act, and, consequently, there had been no legal and valid reference to arbitration and the Assistant Commissioner's award (for it really was an award and nothing else) had no legal foundation, and could therefore have no legal consequences. As there had been no reference to arbitration and no award, there could be attached certain gold and silver articles. The respondent, the present head of the mutt, who had been made a party to the execution proceedings as the representative of the deceased, contended that the attached articles were not liable to be sold in execution of the decree as they were not assets of the deceased, but property belonging to the mutt. The appellants thereupon applied to the Subordinate Judge to summon the respondent as a witness for the appellants. The respondent, who resided within the jurisdiction of the Court, then applied to the Subordinate Judge to take his evidence on commission stating that he was unable, of his own personal knowledge, to give any evidence material to the questions at issue, and alleging that the appellants were insisting on his appearance in Court to put pressure upon him to relinquish or compromise his claim, as it was considered derogatory to a person in his position to appear in a Court as a witness. The Subordinate Judge refused to issue a commission. On a revision petition being filed, a single Judge of the High Court set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge and ordered the respondent to be examined on commission. On an appeal being preferred under Art. 15 of the Letters Patent: Held, that an appeal lay. Held, also, that the issue of commissions for the examination of witnesses by the Courts of this country is governed solely by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, and s. 386 is exhaustive, and provides for all the cases in which the Legislature intended that it should be competent to a Court to issue a commission for the examination of witnesses resident within its jurisdiction. Held, further, that a litigant's privilege of taking out summonses to witnesses is subject to the control of the tribunal, which is called upon to enforce their attendance, though such control will be exercised sparingly and only in exceptional cases. This control is an instance of the authority of every Court of competent jurisdiction to prevent abuse of its process. In the present case, the appellant's application was not bonâ fide, and the respondent's attendance in Court was required not for the purpose of obtaining material evidence but from other motives, and the order for the issue of a commission was therefore rightly made. 1. ——— s. 411—Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), s. 309—Suit in formâ pauperis—Successful petitioner—Charge of Government for Court-fees—Crown-debt, priority of. S. 411 of the Civil Procedure Code is an enabling section. Though it indicates the manner in which the Crown may proceed to realise Court-fees of a successful pauper plaintiff, which form a Crown-debt, it does not preclude the Crown or its representative from urging its prerogative and insisting on its right to precedence over all other creditors. A successful pauper plaintiff attached and sold for her costs certain property, other than the property in suit, belonging to the judgment-creditor. The sale-proceeds were paid into Court. The plaintiff's solicitor applied to have his costs paid out of the sale-proceeds. The Government Solicitor also applied to have his certified Court-fees paid to him out of the fund in Court: Held, that the Government Solicitor was entitled to precedence and that it was not necessary for him to attach the fund before getting payment. Secretary of State v. *The Bombay Landing and Shipping Co., Ld., 5 Bom. 1. ——— Suit against public officer—Notice of action, form of. In a suit against the Deputy Magistrate of A and the Deputy Magistrate of B for damages for having in bad faith and maliciously caused the plaintiff to be confined in hajut, the plaintiff served a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code on the defendants, to the effect that the Deputy Magistrate, acting in concert with the intention of oppressing the plaintiff, had wilfully, improperly, and illegally kept him in hajut and thereby caused him injury: Held, that the notice sufficiently stated the cause of action within the terms of s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, it not being necessary that a notice under that section should be read with the strictness with which a plaint should be read in regard to the statement of the cause of action. 3. ——— Suit against public officer in respect of acts done by him in his official capacity—Notice of suit—Suit for damages against a Public Officer—Trespass—Misjoinder of causes of action—Amendment of plaint. The plaintiff sued the defendant, a public officer, to recover damages for two distinct acts (viz., wrongful arrest and trespass) alleged to have been illegally and maliciously done by the defendant on two different occasions, and claimed one lump sum as damages for both the acts; no permission to amend the plaint was asked for in the lower Court. On the 21st of October 1895, the plaintiff instituted this suit, having on the 18th of September 1895 served the defendant with a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held, that the former act (viz., the plaintiff's arrest) was an act done by the defendant in his official capacity and was clearly of the kind contemplated by s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code under which two months' notice to the defendant would be necessary previous to the institution of the suit; and that the suit was rightly dismissed by the lower Court for want of such notice. Shahunshah Begum v. Fergusson, I. L. R. 7 Calc. 499, distinguished. Quære: Whether the latter act (viz., the trespass into the plaintiff's house), on the allegations in the plaint, was an act done by the Magistrate in his official capacity, and whether a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code would be necessary previous to suing for damages for such an act. Held, further, that as the two acts were mixed up together in the plaint and one lump sum claimed as damages for both, and as no permission to amend the plaint was asked for in the lower Court so as to convert the suit into one for damages with reference to the trespass only, the plaint ought not to be allowed to be amended on appeal to the High Court. 4. ——— Suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council—Notice—Public Demands Recovery Act (Bengal Act VII of 1880), ss. 8, 9, 20—Sale for default in payment of costs of realizing Government Revenue. S. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code provides that "No suit shall be instituted against the Secretary of State in Council, or against a public officer in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been, in the case of the Secretary of State in Council, delivered to, or left at the office of, a Secretary to the Local Government or the Collector of the District," etc. The plaintiff had instituted a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council to set aside a certain sale of the plaintiff's property (possession of which had been given to the purchaser), but had not given him the notice prescribed by s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code. The first Court (AMEER ALI, J.) gave the plaintiff a decree. Held on appeal (reversing the decision of AMEER ALI, J.), that whether or not the works "in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity" relate only to a public officer and not to the Secretary of State, no suit whatever is maintainable against the Secretary of State, unless the notice prescribed by s. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure has been given; and that therefore the present suit could not be maintained. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v RAJLUCKI DEBI I. L. R. 25 Calc. 239

5. ——— Suit against Secretary of State and others—Notice previous to suing Secretary of State for India in Council or Public Officer—Notice by two out of three joint owners of land—"Cause of action." Three joint owners of land sued to recover a sum of money paid as water-rates, which they alleged had been illegally levied from them by the Government in respect of faslis 1302 and 1303. Notice of suit had been given by only two of the plaintiffs, and that notice omitted to state the imposition of the rate for fasli 1303 as a cause of action, as at the date of its being given the rate for fasli 1303 had not been levied. On its being contended that the notice was invalid and that the suit founded thereon was unsustainable: Held, that the notice was not invalid on the ground that it proceeded from only two out of three of the joint owners. The object of the notice required by s. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to give the defendant an opportunity for settling the claim, if so advised, without litigation; and that object had been fully attained by two out of three plaintiffs giving the notice. Held, also, that the notice was not invalid by reason of the fact that the collection of rate for fasli 1303 had not been stated as a cause of action. The collection of a further sum for a subsequent fasli, after notice of the suit had been given, was not a fresh cause of action requiring a further notice under s. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The term "cause of action," in s. 424, should not be construed in a narrow sense, the object of the section being merely to inform the defendant substantially of the ground of complaint. 6. ——— Suit against Secretary of State in Council—Notice—Death of intending plaintiff before institution of suit—Notice already served not available to representatives of original intending plaintiff—Rejection of plaint—Civil Procedure Code, s. 54. Where a person, apparently intending to institute a suit against the Secretary of State in Council, served a notice, in the manner prescribed by s. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure, of his intention to institute such a suit, but died before the suit was instituted, it was held that the notice served under s. 424 did not enure for the benefit of the representatives of the person who had served it and entitle them to institute a suit without giving fresh notice. Held, also, that the language of s. 424 is imperative, and absolutely debars a Court from entertaining a suit instituted without compliance with the provisions of the section. A Court cannot under such circumstances stay proceedings and allow time to the plaintiff to serve the requisite notice, but its only course is to reject the plaint under s. 54 (c) of the Code. Rendal v. *Blair, L. 7. ——— Plaint, amendment of—Damages, suit for. S. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code relates to the institution of a suit against the Secretary of State. There is nothing in the law to show that in case of any amendment, necessitated by alleged discovery of facts previously unknown to the plaintiff, the Secretary of State should have a further notice of two months. No notice of action is required against the Sub-Collector, who is joined in the action with the Secretary of State, inasmuch as he is not sued for any act done by him independently of the Government. 8. ——— Suit against Administrator-General, if notice necessary—Administrator-General, if public officer—Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874 and V of 1902). All estates in the hands of the Administrator-General are held by him as Administrator-General, i.e., as a public officer, and in any suit instituted against him in respect of any act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity he is entitled to notice under s. 424 of the the Civil Procedure Code. The phrase "cause of action" in s. 424, Civil Procedure Code, should not be too narrowly construed, the object of the section being merely to inform the defendant of the ground of complaint. Secretary of State v. Perumal Pillai, I. L. R. 24 Mad. 279, and Bachhu Singh v. Secretary of State, I. L. R. 25 All. 187, 191, followed. The portion of s. 424, Civil Procedure Code, relating to the notice containing a statement that such notice has been left and delivered in the manner prescribed by the section, is separable from the earlier portion, which deals with the delivery of the notice two months before suit. It is only when notice is not given that the suit is liable to be dismissed. The suit, however, may be proceeded with, if notice has been given in the manner prescribed, and subsequently the plaint is amended in order to state that fact. It was found that the Sub-Inspector did not purport to act in good faith in pursuance of the law, but that he took advantage of his position as a Police officer to commit illegal and tortious acts maliciously and without cause. Held, that under these circumstances the defendant was not entitled to receive notice of suit either under s. 42 of the Police Act, 1861, or under s. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the plaintiff's suit was not liable to dismissal for lack of such notice. Shahebzadee Shahunshah Begum v. *Fergusson, I. If, therefore, the power exists, it must be under Hindu Law as distinct from statute. The fact that the minor was so described, and as appearing by a guardian, and that the compromise was before the Court, are not sufficient. 1. ———— Execution of decree—Temporary Injunction—"Wrongfully sold." In execution of a simple money decree against one Mohan Lal, the decree-holder, Rai Krishn Chand, attached certain property as belonging to his judgment-debtor. To this attachment one Musammat Chando Bibi objected and her objection was sustained. The decree-holder thereupon brought a suit, as provided by s. 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, against the judgment-debtor and Musammat Chando Bibi, and in this suit obtained a decree from the Court of first instance. Musammat Chando Bibi appealed to the High Court and, pending the appeal, applied for an injunction against Rai Krishn Chand under s. 492 of the Code. Held, that such an injunction could not under the circumstances be granted, inasmuch as it was impossible to say that the attached property was in danger of being "wrongfully" sold in execution of a decree within the meaning of s. 492. Kirpa Dayal v. *Rani Kishori, I. ——— s. 502—Application for Money to be delivered to party to suit—Money deposited in another Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction in another suit—Jurisdiction of Court to make order. A suit was instituted in the Subordinate Court of Masulipatam by the Medur Ranee to recover the Medur estate. The Ranee was the natural mother of N, who died. The defendant claimed to have adopted N. Money was, in pursuance of an order of the High Court, paid into the Subordinate Court of Masulipatam to the credit of the suit. The plaintiff died, and A and B were brought on the record as plaintiffs. The suit was subsequently heard and dismissed and an appeal was lodged. The defendant then died, and C was made respondent in the appeal (which was still pending when the present judgment was delivered). The contention of C, as respondent in that appeal, was that he was entitled to the Medur estate jointly with A and B (the appellants). C then instituted a suit in the District Court of Gódávari against A and B for partition of the Medur estate (and also of the Nidadavole estate). The contention of C in this suit was also that he was entitled jointly with A and B. At a subsequent date, the District Court of Godavari made an order, on the application of A, in the suit pending in that Court, for payment to A (on security being furnished) of one-third of the money, which had been paid into the Subordinate Court of Masulipatam as aforesaid to the credit of the suit in that Court. Held (SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, J., dissenting), that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to make the order. Though C was at the most, according to his own case, only entitled to one-third of the properties in question and though it was part of his case that A was entitled to one-third and the parties to the suit were the same, such a state of things did not give jurisdiction to the District Court of Godavari to deal with money, which had been paid into another Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction, in another suit, under the orders of the High Court. S. 502 of the Code of Civil Procedure would seem to apply only when the party making the admission holds the property or other thing, which the party in whose favour the order is made seeks to have delivered to him. But even if that section was intended to apply to a case where the property is not so held by the party making the admission, it would not cover a case where the money was held by another Court to the credit of another suit. Per SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, J.—(i) The District Court had power to direct the payment notwithstanding that the money was not held by any of the parties to the suit, provided the order was otherwise sustainable. (ii) Inasmuch as the District Court had the power, it was not precluded from directing the payment by the mere fact that the fund out of which the payment was to be made was in the custody of another Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction (namely the Subordinate Court of Masulipatam), without reference to the circumstances of the litigation in connection with which the money had come into the custody of that Court and to the rights possessed by the parties in that fund. An order by the District Judge under s. 502 would be binding on the other parties to the litigation; and the Subordinate Court at Masulipatam would give effect to it as no real conflict could arise, in consequence, between the process of the two Courts in the matter. ——— ss. 523, 361—Agreement for arbitration filed in Court—Death of one of the parties—Application by legal representative to be brought on record. Where matters in difference have been submitted to arbitration, the submission is, under the law in force in British India, not revocable without just and sufficient cause, even where the submission has not been made a rule of Court. And where the submission has been made a rule of Court and has become the subject of a suit, it can only be revoked by leave of the Court upon good cause being shown. The policy of the Indian Legislature has been not to follow the English common law with regard to references to arbitration. Such contracts are not revocable, in India, at the will of either party, nor will the authority of an arbitrator necessarily be revoked by the death of one of the parties to the arbitration. The question whether a legal representative of a deceased party is or is not entitled to enforce the contract to refer depends upon whether the right dealt with in the reference is merely of a personal nature or is one which survives to the legal representative. Where it is one that survives, the proceedings before the arbitrators do not, under s. 361, abate by reason of the death of a party. As the right to have partition of joint family property is one which survives to an adopted son, an agreement to refer the partition of such property to arbitrators is not put an end to by the death of a party to it, and if there is any dispute as to who is the legal representative, the Court should (at any rate where the agreement has been filed in Court) proceed under s. 367 of the Code of Civil Procedure. 1. ——— Atash Behram (Parsi Fire Temple)—Parsi Community of Udwada—Trust—Suit—Capacity to hold property—Mandatory Injunction—Trespasser. In this country a fluctuating body of persons, such as a village community, is capable of owning property. It is opposed to the notions of the Parsi community that the Iran Shah (sacred fire) should be regarded as capable of, or the subject of, ownership ; but even if there be difficulty or doubt as to its ownership, it is obvious that there must be some one entitled to protect from improper invasion the temple property, and those who can predicate of themselves that they have exercised the management, authority and supervision, as alleged in the plaint, are so entitled. The Parsi inhabitants of Udwada, as the Anjuman (that is a constituted council or assembly to which all questions regarding their peculiar customs are referred) of that town, are vested with the control, management and supervision of the Atash Behram at that place and all that appertains to it. A suit for the vindication of the right of management, which is vested in, and actually being exercised by, the plaintiffs and those they represent at the date of the obstruction does not fall within s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) merely because those, who cause the obstruction, happen to have been nominated trustees. 6. ——— Public Trusts—Sanction of the Advocate-General—S. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, if mandatory or permissive—Its scope—Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863), s. 14—Demurrer. To bring a case within the purview of s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code the suit must be a representative one brought for the benefit of the public and to enforce a public right in respect of an express or constructive public trust upon a cause of action alleging a breach of such trust or necessity for directions as to its administration against a trustee of such express or constructive trust and whether such trustee be so de jure or de son tort and for the particular relief mentioned. Suits brought not to establish a public right, but to remedy a particular infringement of an individual right are not within the section. As against strangers, such as alienees from the trustee and mere trespassers holding adversely to the trust, the section does not apply. Meaning of the phrases "direction of the Court is necessary for the administration" and "such further or other relief" in s. 539 explained. S. 539 is not mandatory but enabling and permissive, cumulative and not restrictive in its effect and does not affect any right of suit which may exist independently of it. If therefore a suit is one which would have been maintainable prior to the enactment of the corresponding section in the Code of 1877 it may now be instituted independently of the provisions of s. 530, even though it be upon such a cause of action and for such relief as is mentioned in it. Scope and history of the section discussed and explained. BUDREEDAS MUKIM BAHADUR v. CHUNI LAL JOHURRY (1906)

consist or find that particular alienations thereof cannot be maintained, provided all proper parties are represented before it. If transferees or mortgagees, who have been impleaded in a suit instituted under s. 539, do not accept the findings of the Court in that suit, it may be necessary for the trustee appointed by the Court to institute a suit for recovery of possession. And, semble, that in such a suit it is competent also to the Court to direct a trustee, who is being removed from the trusteeship, to make over the trust property to the new trustee or trustees. Sajedur Raja Chowdhury v. Gour Mohun Das Baishnav, I. L. R. 24 Calc. 418, followed. Per BURKITT, J.—In a suit under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure it is not competent to the Court to pass a decree for recovery of possession of the trust property from alienees. All that plaintiffs in such a suit can obtain is a decree appointing a trustee or trustees, declaring what properties are affected by the trust and directing the trustee to bring those properties into possession. If the trustee appointed by the Court is resisted in his attempts to get possession of the trust property, he must then bring a suit for possession in the proper Court on payment of the full Court-fee for such a suit. 8. ——— Suit relating to Public Charity—Suit filed by only one plaintiff with the consent of the Advocate-General—Amendment of plaint by subsequent addition of second plaintiff—Consent of the Advocate-General to the amendment—Suit defective in a material paticular. A suit relating to a public charity was instituted by one plaintiff only with the consent of the Advocate General under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The defendant having objected to the institution of the suit by one plaintiff, the plaint was amended by the addition of the second plaintiff and the Advocate-General consented to the amendment. Held, dismissing the suit in appeal, that the suit was defective in a material particular. The suit was bad at its institution and its amendment by adding a second plaintiff did not better it. DARVES HAJI MAHAMAD v. JAINUDIN (1906) . I. L. R. 30 Bom. 603

10. ——— Suit by Advocate-General at instance of Relators dismissed—No appeal by Advocate-General—Appeal by Relators—Maintainability. A suit having been brought by the Advocate-General he is the proper party to appeal and not the relators. 11. ——— Religious or Charitable Trusts—"Further or other relief," meaning of. Held, by DAVAR, J.:—S. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is very limited in its scope and operation. It contemplates the institution of a suit to "obtain a decree" for reliefs which are strictly confined to five heads. The first branch of the suit clearly falls under the provisions of the section, for the plaintiffs have obtained a decree under three of the five provisions of the section, viz., (a) the appointment of new trustees, (b) vesting trust property in the trustees, and (c) settling a scheme. But the reliefs asked for in the second branch of the case, namely, the ascertainment and declaration of what are the trusts, the rectification of the trust deeds, a declaration that the defendants have either wrongly declared the trust in the deeds or wrongly interpreted the trusts therein, do not fall under any of the five heads mentioned in the section. The words "further or other relief" that follow, must necessarily be construed to refer to reliefs ejusdem generis and not to reliefs wholly outside those specifically defined under these five heads. A suit brought not to establish a public right in respect of a public trust, but to remedy a particular infringement of an individual right is not within s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. S. 539 contemplates a suit either in the name of the Advocate-General at the instance of relators, or a suit in the name of parties "having an interest in the trust" with the consent of the Advocate-General. The "interest" of the parties here contemplated must be the "interest" that is threatened or infringed. Held by BEAMAN, J.:—The decision of a suit, under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is not only binding on the parties to it, but to all persons affected by it. The expression "such further or other relief" in the section means such further or other relief as, from the nature of the introductory words and the exemplificatory cases, appears to the Court to be appropriate in such a suit, e.g., removing fraudulent trustees, restraining a breach of trust, and so forth. Any extension or limitation of the scope of a trust, so as to exclude those who were intended to be included or to include those who were intended to be excluded, is a breach of trust. ——— ss. 540, 623—Practice—Review petition followed by appeal—Decision of review petition during pendency of appeal—Position and power of Court of first instance after an appeal has been filed against its decree. A plaintiff sued by an agent, who compromised the suit, one of the terms of the compromise being that the agent should withdraw the suit. The agent failed to do this, whereupon the defendant brought the compromise to the notice of the Court and the suit was dismissed on 10th September 1901. Plaintiff on the succeeding day applied for a review (alleging fraud and collusion on the part of his agent) and on 13th December 1901 preferred an appeal to the High Court against the decree dismissing the suit. While that appeal was pending, namely on 17th March 1902, the Subordinate Judge heard and allowed the review petition, set aside the decree and restored the suit to the file. Held, that the order was ultra vires. A pending appeal without annulling the judgment appealed against leaves it subsisting as a valid adjudication governing the rights of the parties, but the further litigation and all matters connected with it are transferred to and placed under the control of the Appellate Court. The power of the inferior Court in any way to deal with the litigation is completely in abeyance except to carry out the decree which it is the duty of the Court to do, as s. 545 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that the execution of the decree is not stayed by the mere fact that an appeal has been preferred against it. Held, also, that an appeal lay against the order of the Subordinate Judge. The second defendant, who claimed the property under a mortgage from the first defendant, was admitted a defendant on his own application, but afterwards excluded from the suit. Before this was done he had incurred certain costs, which, by the Munsif's decree, he was ordered to bear himself. Upon appeal by the first defendant, the Civil Judge found that the mortgage bond sued upon was not proved, dismissed the suit, and ordered the plaintiff to pay all costs, those of the second defendant included. Held, that under s. 337 of the Civil Procedure Code, it was competent to the Civil Judge so to modify the Munsif's decree, as the main ground of the whole decision—viz., the validity of the mortgage bond—affected all the defendants in common, and the appeal of the first defendant and the decision of the Appellate Court had reference to that common ground. The Munsif passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal by N C A, which was heard and decided by the Subordinate Judge on reference by the District Judge, the decree of the first Court was reversed, and the suit dismissed. mode of partition, and applied to the Court to set aside the Collector's scheme, and to direct a fresh partition. The Subordinate Judge of Vengurla granted the application and set aside the partition ordered by the Collector. Against this order V, who was plaintiff in one of the suits, appealed to the District Court, and in the appeal he made B alone the respondent. The District Court reversed the order of the Subordinate Judge, and upheld the order of the Collector. Thereupon B preferred a second appeal to the High Court against the decision of the District Court. To this appeal neither R nor his brother, the present appellant, was made a party. The High Court having confirmed the decision of the District Court proceedings were taken to carry out the partition according to the Collector's original scheme. The appellant objected on the ground that the Collector's scheme had been set aside by the Subordinate Judge, and that the appellant had not been a party to the proceedings in either of the Appellate Courts. He contended that he was, therefore, not bound by the decisions of the Appellate Courts and that the order of the Subordinate Judge, setting aside the partition ordered by the Collector was still in force so far as he was concerned. He, therefore, applied that the property should be divided in accordance with that order. His application was rejected by the Court of first instance as time-barred, inasmuch as more than a year had elapsed since the date of the order of the Subordinate Judge, and during that time the applicant had taken no steps to enforce the order. On appeal, the Acting District Judge confirmed the order of the lower Court, holding that the order of the Subordinate Judge was no longer in force, having been set aside by the High Court. On second appeal to the High Court: Held, that the appellant was not bound by the final decision of the High Court. The original order being in his favour he could not be deprived of the benefit of that order without having the opportunity to defend it. Not having been a party to the proceedings in appeal, he was not affected by the result of those proceedings. Where there are several respondents before the Court of first appeal, though one of them may represent his fellows in a further appeal, he cannot represent a person who was not his co-respondent and against whom, therefore, no decree could have been made on a point common to the two, or on any point at all. which would have covered an appeal from the whole decree. The defendant did not appeal or file cross-objections. The lower Appellate Court remanded the whole case to the first Court under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff not appealing under s. 588 (28) from the order of remand. The first Court then dismissed the whole suit, and on appeal by the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court confirmed the decree. On a second appeal to the High Court: Held, (i) that the High Court was competent to consider the validity or propriety of the order for remand, though it had not been specifically appealed against; (ii) that the order of remand was ultra vires so far as it related to that part of the first Court's decree, which was favourable to the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court not having jurisdiction in the absence of any appeal or objections by the defendant to disturb that part of the decree. Per MAHMOOD J.—S. 544 had no application to the case, that section relating only to cases where one or more of the parties arrayed on the same side appealed against a decree passed on a ground common to all, and not to cases where either of two opposite parties appealed from a part of the decree upon a Court-fee sufficient for an appeal from the whole. Moheshur Sing v. Bengal Government, *7 Moo. The Subordinate Judge finding that the subject-matter of the suit, the land of which partition was claimed, exceeded the jurisdiction of the Munsif, reversed the decree of the Munsif, and directed the plaint to be returned for presentation in the proper Court. It was contended on appeal to the High Court that the Subordinate Judge could not set aside the decree against the tenants for mesne profits. Held, that, as the Munsif's Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit for partition, it could make no decree for mesne profits, and, therefore, the Subordinate Judge had power to set it aside. 30. ——— Appeal—Ground of appeal common to all the Judgment-debtors—Reversal or Modification of the decree as against all on appeal by one only. S. 544 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not enable an Appellate Court to decide upon a ground which it considers to be common to all the defendants, an appeal preferred by one only of such defendants, and to reverse or modify the decree of the Court below in favour of all the defendants, unless the lower Court has proceeded upon a ground common to all the defendants. It is only when the decree appealed against has proceeded upon a ground common to all the defendants, that is, when the Court below has made a decree against several defendants upon a finding which applies equally to all of them, that under s. 544 any one of the defendants may appeal against the whole decree, and the Appellate Court may reverse or modify that decree in favour of all the defendants. Protap Chander Dutt v. Koorbanissa Bibee, *14 W. The plaintiffs appealed, and the case was remanded to the Court of first instance under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. One of the defendants appealed against the order of remand to the High Court, which set aside the order of remand and restored the decree of the first Court. Held, that, the decree of the first Court being restored in its entirety, the defendants, who had not appealed, were entitled to take out execution of that decree for the costs awarded to them by it, notwithstanding that they were not parties to the decree of the High Court. Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v. Muhammad Yar Khan, *I. An appeal was preferred by one of the defendants who claimed to be the jenmi of the premises comprised in the kanom and another who held a kanom from him. Part of the property in suit consisted of a kulkarni vatan, one-third share of which (inter alia) was given by the decree to the plaintiffs. Eleven of the defendants appealed against the decree, of whom only six (defendants 1 to 6) had an interest in the kulkarni vatan. The decree was passed on the 11th April, 1898, and the appeal was not presented until the 7th June, 1898, i.e., beyond the period (thirty days) allowed by the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). The only affidavit excusing the delay was made by defendant 14, who was not interested in the kulkarni vatan; and it stated reasons for the delay which were personal to himself, and did not apply to the other appellants. On this affidavit, however, the appeal was admitted, and the lower Appellate Court modified the decree and reduced the one-third share of the kulkarni vatan given to the plaintiffs to a one-sixth share. The plaintiffs thereupon appealed to the High Court. Held (reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restoring that of the first Court), that the Appellate Court erred in altering the share of the kulkarni vatan. Defendant 14 had no interest in the variation of the decree, having no interest in the kulkarni vatan, and s. 544 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) did not apply. The variation was only in favour of defendants 1 to 6, who alone were interested in the vatans. They, however, have not excused their delay in presenting the appeal, and it was barred by limitation. The Court of first instance decreed the plaintiff's suit. B and C alone preferred an appeal, and the lower Appellate Court allowed it, finding that the plaintiff had not proved the title set up by him. On an objection taken by the plaintiff that, inasmuch as D did not appeal, he could not have the benefit of it: Held, that, as the decree appealed against proceeded on grounds common to all the defendants, and regard being had to the terms of the provisions of s. 544 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court below was right in allowing the appeal in favour of D also. Syed Hossain v. *Madan Khan, I. Two of the defendants, who denied the plaintiffs' right and claimed the property as their own, filed a joint appeal. Pending the appeal one of them died, and her representatives were not brought on the record. The surviving appellant, however, proceeded with the appeal, and at the hearing the decree of the lower Court was reversed and the plaintiffs' suit dismissed. The plaintiffs filed a second appeal to the High Court, and contended that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have heard the appeal, inasmuch as it had abated, or at all events that that Court had no power to reverse the lower Court's decree so far as it related to the deceased appellant. Held, that, as the two defendants had appealed on grounds common to them both, the lower Appellate Court had power to hear the appeal and to deal with the whole suit under s. 544 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). If the result of the appeal be against me I hereby bind myself to allow the plaintiff to recover the whole amount of the said decree, which I should pay, by my immoveable property, and, if the said property be insufficient, from me. Until the whole decretal amount is discharged I will not sell or make a gift of the said property to others. I thus execute this security bond." The bond was attested by two witnesses, but was not registered. The order of the Court "Security accepted" was endorsed on it. Held, that the security bond amounted to a mortgage within the meaning of s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act and not being registered was invalid under s. 59 of the Act as a mortgage and did not affect the property. The bond was also compulsorily registrable under s. 17 of the Indian Registration Act. The words "Security accepted" hereby showed that the Court thought the security sufficient. The bond does not derive its validity from these words, and it cannot therefore be brought within s. 17, exception (i) of the Registration Act. Tokhan Singh v. *Girwar Singh, I. L. When the Appellate Court has made an unconditional order for stay of execution the operation of the order is not postponed, until it has been communicated to the Subordinate Court or the party intended to be affected by it. The order becomes operative the moment it is made, and suspends the power of the Subordinate Court to carry on further the execution proceedings. Delivery of possession to the decree-holder made by a Subordinate Court after an unconditional order by the Appellate Court for stay of execution, but before such order could be communicated to it, is invalid and cannot stand. Bessesswari Chowdhurany v. *Hurro Sundar Mazundar, 1 C. 1. ——— Hearing of Appeal ex parte. The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain immoveable property sold to him by the first defendant, a Hindu widow. The second defendant answered that his father and the first defendant's husband were undivided brothers, and that, as a childless widow, she had no right to sell the property. Both the lower Courts upheld the sale as absolute, on the ground that she was competent to make it as widow of a separate Hindu. The District Judge heard the appeal ex parte under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code. The High Court, on second appeal, held that the decrees of the lower Courts were unsustainable, as they did not contain the limitation pointed out above, and remanded the case for the trial of the issue, whether there were any such special circumstances as would justify the absolute sale by the first defendant to the plaintiff. The High Court were also of opinion that the District Judge ought not to have disposed of the appeal ex parte under s. 551 of Act X of 1837. GURUNATH NILKANTH v. KRISHNAJI I. L. The Court, therefore, which has taken action under s. 551 is the only Court, which has jurisdiction to amend the decree under s. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Uma

Whether the judgment of a Court of Appeal dismissing an appeal under s. 551 has sufficiently complied with the provisions of s. 574 of the Code must be decided upon the facts of the particular case and no general rule in regard to it can be laid down. Per COXE, J.—S. 551 of the Code is not controlled by s. 574. Per RICHARDSON, J.—When a subordinate Court dismisses an appeal under s. 551, it is bound under s. 571 to record a judgment and the judgment must be sufficient to meet the requirements of s. 574. ——— ss. 551, 623—Decree passed by first Court allowing plaintiff's claim—Appeal by Defendant—Summary dismissal of Appeal—Application by defendant to the first Court for Review—Jurisdiction. Plaintiff having obtained a decree in the first Court, the defendant appealed, but his appeal was summarily dismissed under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Subsequently the defendant applied to the first Court for review of judgment under s. 623 of the Code on the ground of discovery of new and important evidence. Held that as the defendant had preferred an appeal and it was dismissed under s. 551 of the Code, his application to the first Court for review of judgment could not be entertained. It is open to the person aggrieved, after an appeal has been preferred, to apply for a review, provided his appeal is withdrawn. As by the cancellation of the order for admission of an appeal it is to be taken that no appeal was admitted, so by withdrawal of the appeal it must be treated as though no appeal was preferred. But when an appeal is actually dismissed, it was in fact preferred and cannot be regarded as not having been preferred. RAMAPPA v. BHARMA (1906) . I. L. R. 30 Bom. 625

Subsequently, the appellant applied to the Court, under s. 558 of the Civil Procedure Code, to re-admit the appeal, explaining her absence when the appeal was called on for hearing. The Court rejected the application on the ground that the appeal had been decided on the merits, and reasons had been recorded for its dismissal which there were no apparent grounds for setting aside. Held, that the Court should have dismissed the appeal for default, and it was illegal to try it on the merits, and the judgment was consequently a nullity, the existence of which was no bar to the re-admission of the appeal. The party sought to be made a respondent in the appeal under s. 559 must be shown to be interested in the result of the appeal before he is brought on the record, and the interest he may acquire as a result of being added as a respondent, will not suffice. Where a defendant has been exonerated and there is no appeal against so much of the decree as exonerates him, no decree can be passed against him in an appeal by any other party as he is not a party to the appeal and cannot be said to be interested in the result of such appeal. Atma Ram v. *Balkishen, I. Suits were brought by the ryots before the Sub-Collector under s. 8 of the Rent Recovery Act to compel the defendant, the zamindar, to grant them proper pattas for fasli 1312, alleging that the pattas tendered were illegal as they charged the higher garden rate for dry lands cultivated by them with the aid of wells constructed at their own cost. The defendant pleaded that he was entitled to the enhanced rate (i) by custom, (ii) by virtue of a contract to be implied from previous payments. No consideration for such a contract was however alleged. The Sub-Collector framed two issues—one as to the existence of the custom set up by the defendant, and another as to whether the previous payments by the plaintiffs operated as an estoppel or evidenced an implied contract to continue to pay the enhanced rates. The Sub-Collector did not record evidence as to custom, holding that such custom, even if proved, could not deprive the plaintiffs of the benefits expressly given by the Act. He also held that any such implied contract as that set up by the defendant would be illegal as opposed to the provisions of the Act. He passed a decree, that the defendant should grant pattas as claimed by the plaintiffs. On appeal, the District Judge held that the payment of rent at the enhanced rate raised a presumption that there was a contract to pay such rent; and that, if there was no contract, express or implied, the rent must be fixed in accordance with the other provisions of s. 11 of the Rent Recovery Act. He reversed the decrees of the Sub-Collector and remanded the cases for retrial under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On appeal to the High Court: Held, per SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, J., that the order remanding the case was not legal as all the questions raised between the parties and on which they went to trial, had been decided, and the questions so raised were purely questions of law. A custom can be upheld only so far as it is not in conflict with statute law ; and a custom to pay enhanced rent for improvements effected by a tenant at his cost is illegal as opposed to the provisions of the Rent Recovery Act. Fischer v. Kamakshi Pillai, I. R. 32 Calc. 1023, referred to. Per MOOKERJEE, J.—An Appellate Court does not act without jurisdiction when it makes an erroneous order of remand, but merely commits an error of law, in making an order of a particular description in the exercise of its undoubted jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the litigation. Such error may be cured by consent. It cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule of law that under all circumstances the final disposal of a suit must be taken to be the delivery of the judgment. When a litigant has the right to choose between two remedies which are not co-existent, but alternative, and adopts one of those remedies, his act at once operates as a bar as regards the other and the bar is final and absolute. After having taken the full benefit of an order of remand it is not open to a party to turn round and appeal against it. BAIKUNTHA NATH DEY v. SALIMULLA BAHADUR (1907) . . 12 C. W. N. 590

——— Remand contrary to the provisions of s. 562 illegal and not merely irregular—Failure to appeal against an illegal order of remand not a waiver of the illegality. The Court of first instance passed a decree in favour of plaintiff on the strength of a plan which was not disputed by the defendant. On appeal, the Appellate Court held that the plan was unsatisfactory and that a proper plan was necessary for a right decision of the suit and remanded the suit for retrial under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. No appeal was preferred by plaintiff under s. 588, Civil Procedure Code, against the order of remand and the lower Court again passed a decree in favour of plaintiff which was reversed on appeal. Plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the High Court : Held, (i) That the original order of remand was contrary to the provisions of s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as the Court of first instance had not decided the suit on a preliminary point within the meaning of the section. (ii) That such order was not merely irregular but illegal and could not be validated by s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure. (iii) That even if such illegal order might be validated by consent or waiver, neither the omission of the plaintiff to appeal under s. 588 nor his acquiescing in the trial on remand amounted to such consent or waiver. Subramania Ayyar v. *King-Emperor, I. of the issues, remanded the case for retrial under s. 564 of the Code of Civil Procedure: Held, on second appeal, per SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, J., that an order of remand, contrary to the provisions of s. 564, is not merely irregular, but illegal; but it is not on that account absolutely void so as to render any consent of the parties of no avail. It can be objected to by a party, if he has not given his consent to such a course, and even a party, who has not consented, may be equitably estopped by subsequent conduct from treating such an order as null and void. Such an order of remand does not necessarily vitiate the decision of the lower Appellate Court on questions properly decided by it, which can be attacked only on grounds legally open to the parties on second appeal. It cannot be treated as void for want of jurisdiction, so as to be incapable of being validated by consent or waiver. Mohes Chandra Dass v. *Jamiruddin Mollah, I. L. ——— ss. 568, 623—Discovery of fresh Evidence—Laches—Negligence—Dismissal of application for Review—Additional evidence on appeal—Evidence taken preliminary to hearing of appeal on the merits—Suit for Damages for injuries on Railway—Appeal decided not on evidence at trial but on observations of Judges at presentation of scene and events of accident on another night than that on which accident occurred. The legitimate occasion for s. 568 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) is when on examining the evidence as it stands some inherent lacuna or defect becomes apparent, and not when a discovery is made outside the Court, of fresh evidence and the application is made to import it: that is the subject of the separate enactment in s. 623. S. 623 exacts very strict conditions, so as to prevent litigants being negligent, and enjoins the Court to require the facts as to the absence of negligence to be strictly proved. Where the defendants, on the day after judgment had been given against them, discovered fresh evidence which with diligence they might under the circumstances have obtained before or during the trial of the suit, and even after such discovery delayed for two weeks before making an application for review of judgment: Held, that the application was rightly dismissed. On an appeal on the merits of the case being filed the Appellate Court without recording any reason as required by s. 568 of the Code allowed such further evidence to be taken, not after the appeal on the merits had been heard and the evidence as it stood had been examined by the Judges, but on special and preliminary application: Held, that the Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to admit the additional evidence, that it was wrongly admitted and must be disregarded. The plaintiff sued the defendants, a Railway Company, for damages for injuries sustained by him when alighting from a carriage which overshot the platform of a station at night, and the evidence on the question of what light there was either natural or artificial, on the night in question being conflicting, it was suggested during the hearing of the case on appeal and agreed to by the counsel for the parties that the Judges should visit the scene of the accident under conditions approximating as nearly as possible to those which prevailed when the plaintiff met with his injuries. This was done, and the Judges and the legal advisers of the parties went to the station where a presentation of the scene and events of the accident was gone through by which the Judges were enabled to make a thorough investigation of the material conditions accompanying the accident. They formed their own opinion on the question of the sufficiency or otherwise of the light and gave judgment in accordance with them, reversing the decision of the Court which tried the case: Held, that such procedure was illegal. The result of it was that the appeal was decided not on the testimony given at the trial as to what took place on the night of the accident, but by the Judges' observation of what they saw on another night altogether; and the decision based on it was set aside, the judgment of the first Court being restored. If the Judge of the Court to which the case is remanded is the Judge who heard the appeal in the first instance, he is not bound to re-hear the appeal, if he considers that the case might be properly disposed of without so doing. In such a case his writing a judgment satisfying the requirements of s. 574 will be a sufficient compliance with the order to dispose of the case according to law. But where the Judge of the Court to which the case is remanded is not the Judge who heard the appeal in the first instance, as also in cases where the Judge, though the same, considers such a course necessary for a proper disposal of the case, a re-hearing is necessary for a dis-

6. ——— Practice—Appeal—Difference of Opinion on Division Bench regarding preliminary objection as to limitation—Letters Patent, N.-W. P., s. 27. S. 27 of the Letters Patent for the High Court of the N.-W. Provinces has been superseded in those cases only to which s. 575 of the Civil Procedure Code properly and without straining language applies. There are many cases to which s. 575, even with the aid of s. 647, does not apply; and to these s. 27 of the Letters Patent is still applicable. One of the cases to which s. 575 of the Code does not apply is where a preliminary objection being taken to the hearing of a first appeal before the High Court on the ground that the appeal is time-barred, the Judges of the Division Bench differ in opinion as to whether the appellant has shown sufficient cause, within the meaning of s. 5 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), for not presenting the appeal within the prescribed period. The decision of such a preliminary objection is not a "hearing" of the appeal, but precedes the hearing or determines that there is no appeal which the Court can hear or decide. Where such a preliminary objection is allowed, it cannot be said that the Court which, by reason of the Limitation Act, has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, should nevertheless "affirm" the decree of the Court below. In the case of such a preliminary objection and such a difference of opinion (the Bench being equally divided), the opinion of the senior Judge should, under s. 27 of the Letters Patent, prevail. Appaji Bhivrav v. *Chirlal Khubchand, I. 2. ——— Execution of Decree —Restitution of property sold in execution of a decree afterwards reversed in appeal—Procedure. In a suit for a declaration that certain property belonged to the defendant judgment-debtor the plaintiff decree-holder obtained a decree and proceeded on the strength thereof to sell the property. In appeal, however, this decree was reversed. The rightful owner of the property sold then applied to the Court for restitution of the property. Held, that whether the application could or could not be considered as one falling strictly within the terms of s. 583 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the applicant was entitled to restitution. Radhe Singh v. Mangni Ram, 6 C.W.N. 710, referred to. 3. ——— Restitution—Right to apply not confined to parties to appeal—Rights accruing during litigation. It is not necessary that a person asking for restitution under s. 583 of the Civil Procedure Code should have been a party to the successful appeal, if the appeal is in effect and substance in favour of such a party. Under s. 583 of the Civil Procedure Code, the parties must be placed in the position they were previously in irrespective of any other rights accruing to any of the parties during the litigation. Held*, that, although s. 583 of the Code of Civil Procedure might be applied by analogy to proceedings before a Court of Revenue under Act XII of 1881, s. 244 could not be applied to such proceedings. The remedy, therefore, of a person entitled to a refund in consequence of the reversal or modification in appeal of a decree passed under Act XII of 1881 by a Court of Revenue is two-fold, both by means of an application in execution and by a separate suit. *Durga Prosad Roy Chowdhry v. 3. ——— Second Appeal—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 5—Discretion of Court—Extension of time for filing appeal. Held, that no second appeal would lie in a case where the appeal to the Court below was barred by limitation, and that Court in the exercise of its judicial discretion, after careful consideration of the facts and not arbitrarily, refused to act under s. 5 of the Limitation Act, 1877, and dismissed the appeal. Tulsa Kunwar v. *Gajraj Singh, I. 4. ——— Second Appeal—Substantial error in procedure—Case not raised by parties, decision upon—Evidence, absence of—Fact, finding of. When the lower Appellate Court disposed of a suit upon a case not raised by the parties, and to which the evidence had not been directed, there was a substantial error or defect of procedure within the meaning of s. 584 of the Civil Procedure Code. A second appeal also lies, where there was no evidence before the lower Appellate Court upon which it could properly arrive at the conclusion of fact to which it did arrive. Anangamanjari Chowdhrani v. *Tripura Soondari Chowdhrani, L. 5. ——— Second Appeal—Nature of tenancy, if question of law—Tenant-at-will or from year to year—Ejectment, suit for—Notice to quit, reasonable—Suit, if sufficient notice—Bengal Rent Act (X of 1859). The question as to the nature of a tenancy, i.e., whether the tenants are merely tenants-at-will or whether they are yearly tenants, is a question of law, which can be dealt with by the High Court on second appeal. On the facts of the case the Court held that the defendants were tenants at an annual rent, i.e., yearly tenants and that they were entitled to reasonable notice before they could be ejected and no such notice having been given before the suit was brought, it should be dismissed. SULATU DASS v. JADU NATH DAS (1904) . . . . 8 C. W. N. 774

6. ——— Specific Relief—Mandatory Injunction—Discretion of Court—Injunction refused upon unsubstantial grounds. In a suit by co-sharers for demolition of a building as having been recently erected without their consent on common land by another co-sharer the Court found that the building had been erected as alleged by the plaintiffs, but refused to grant them a mandatory injunction upon the ground that "the area was reclaimed by the appellant, defendant, and that others (the plaintiffs included) who have done the same, have been allowed to build on the areas thus reclaimed without any objection, and that no special damage was done." Held, that this was not a valid reason for refusing to grant a mandatory injunction; and that such refusal was under the circumstances a good ground of appeal within the meaning of s. 584 of the Code of Civil Procedure. RAM BAHADUR PAL v. RAM SHANKAR PRASAD PAL (1905) I. L. R. 27 All. 688

7. ——— Power of Court on Second Appeal to examine evidence of usage—Custom—Ryot, right of, to Trees. A ryot holding lands in a zamindari on a permanent tenure would, as regards land on which a money assessment is paid, be primâ facie entitled exclusively to the trees thereon. Where the crops are shared between the ryot and zamindar, they will be jointly interested in such trees, but such presumptions may be rebutted by proof of usage or contract to the contrary. Narayana Ayyangar v. Orr, I. L. R. 26 Mad. 252, followed. Although the provisions of s. 584 of the Code of Civil Procedure disallow a second appeal with reference to findings of fact, yet, the existence or non-existence of a usage having the force of law is unaffected by such disallowance. Consequently, it is the duty of the Court, when it has to pronounce an opinion upon such question to examine the evidence bearing on it, not only as to the sufficiency thereof to establish all the elements (antiquity, uniformity, etc.) required to constitute a valid usage having the force of law, but also the credibility of the evidence relied on and the weight due to it. Custom in India is transcendent law. A custom cannot be established by a few instances or by instances of recent date. the defendant was not her properly and legally adopted son, that the ceremony of adoption did not take place, and that, if it did, it was ineffectual and invalid owing to misrepresentation, coercion and fraud, the first Court found that there was a real adoption binding on the plaintiff. The lower Appellate Court found that though an adoption had taken place it was not, and was not intended to be, a real adoption, but was a sham transaction entered into by collusion for the purpose of deceiving the Government, a case which was not set up by the parties, nor warranted by the evidence. Held (affirming the decision of the High Court), that such a disposal of the suit was a "substantial error or defect of procedure" within the meaning of s. 584 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and that the High Court therefore had jurisdiction to set aside the finding on second appeal. Anangamanjari Chowdhrani v. *Tripura Soondari Chowdhrani, L. Where an application for review of judgment is granted 'for any other sufficient reason' under s. 623 of the Code, the sufficiency or otherwise of the reason is not a good ground of appeal against the order and is not, notwithstanding the general provisions of ss. 584 and 591, a good ground of appeal against the final decree. This right was denied by the defendants in their written statement. The lower Courts dismissed the claim. Libel suit—Amount of Damages claimed, no test—Practice—Enquiry. The plaintiff in a suit for damages for libel cannot ensure an appeal to the Privy Council by merely placing his damages at a sufficiently high figure. Leave to appeal from an appellate judgment of the High Court dismissing, on the ground of privilege, a suit for damages for libel, was refused in the view that on the finding of the Court of first instance, and not reversed by the Appellate Court, the plaintiff had sustained no substantial damage. Where there is a contest as to the true value of the matter in dispute it has been the invariable practice—a practice sanctioned by the Judicial Committee—to ascertain by evidence and enquiry what the true value is. 1. ——— Sale of Property to satisfy order for Rateable Distribution—Rate varied on appeal—Application for restitution of property sold—Refusal—Appeal—Revision—Restitution. Petitioner and counter-petitioners held decrees against the same judgment-debtor. Petitioner having realized a large sum in execution, the District Court held that petitioner and counter-petitioners were each entitled, on a rateable distribution, to about one-half of the entire sum realized. The District Court realized from petitioner the amount ordered to be paid to counter-petitioners, six items of property being attached and sold, counter-petitioners being the purchasers, and the sale being subsequently confirmed. The High Court then decided an appeal, which had meanwhile been pending, the result of which was that counter-petitioners were held to be entitled to much less than they had been awarded by the District Court and had received from petitioner. This sum was also less than what had been realized by the sale of the six items of property. Petitioner, in consequence, applied to the District Court for restitution of the six items of property, which had been sold by the Court and for other relief. The District Court held that the sale could not be set aside as a nullity and that the petitioner was only entitled to receive back the balance, which had been paid in excess. On an appeal being preferred to the High Court: Held, (i) that no appeal lay from the order of the District Court. The order was not a decree; the parties were not parties to a suit; and the order was not one from which a special right of appeal was allowed by the Code. The right of appeal must not be assumed to exist in every matter which comes under the consideration of a Judge, but must be given by statute or by some authority equivalent to statute. Nor does s. 647 of the Code of Civil Procedure confer any right of appeal not expressly given elsewhere by the Code; (ii) that the High Court had no power to revise the order. The District Court had jurisdiction to decide the matter and had done so, though perhaps wrongly; (iii) that petitioner should have been held entitled to some restitution. The principle which should have been followed was: "The Court in making restitution is bound to restore the parties, so far as they can be restored, to the position, which they were in at the time when the Court, by its erroneous action, had displaced them from it." Inasmuch as the property sold had realized more than what was due under the Court's order, the ale was illegal at any rate in so far as it was unnecessary; and, semble, that it was entirely illegal. 5. ——— Revisional power of High Courts over Presidency Courts of Small Causes—Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882), s. 69. Where the Judges differ, matter must be referred to High Court. There is nothing in the Code of Civil Procedure or in the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act to exempt Presidency Courts of Small Causes from the revisional powers of the High Court under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Where the Judges of such Court sitting together in Full Bench to dispose of a suit, take different views on a point affecting the merits of the case, they are bound under s. 69 of the Act to refer the matter to the opinion of the High Court and ought not to deal with the matter finally. Where the order of the Full Bench, on the application of the party for a retrial, fully deals with all the points arising for decision in the suit itself without granting a formal order for retrial, the absence of such formal order is immaterial, and the Judges must be considered to have sat together in the suit within the meaning of s. 69. The Subordinate Judge thereupon instituted an inquiry under s. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act, as a result of which he granted sanction to the pleader to prosecute for perjury one of the witnesses who had appeared before him in the course of the inquiry, and this order was confirmed by the District Judge. Held, that the High Court had no jurisdiction to interfere with the order of the Subordinate Judge under either s. 195 or s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; nor could it interefere under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, inasmuch as the Subordinate Judge, though he possibly mistook the meaning of the District Judge's order addressed to him, had jurisdiction to inquire into the truth of the charge made against the pleader. ——— ss. 623, 626—Order in Execution—Decree—Review—Order rejecting Application for Review—Appeal. An order in execution, being a decree under the Civil Procedure Code, was passed on the 20th November 1902 and a supplementary order as to costs was made on the 20th December following. On the 3rd August 1903 the party aggrieved by the latter order applied under s. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code for a review of judgment. Notice was issued to the opposite party and the application for review was heard with the result that the Judge after disposing of certain technical objections proceeded to deal with the case on the merits, and having done so, he rejected the application for review with costs on the 14th September 1903. Against the said order the applicant having appealed: Held, that the order rejecting the application for review was not appealable. The proper procedure would be to appeal from the order of the 20th December 1902 relating to costs. A petition of review involves three stages of procedure. The first stage commences ordinarily with an ex parte application under s. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code. The Court may then either reject the application at once, or may grant a rule calling on the other side to show cause, why the review should not be granted. In the second stage the rule may either be admitted or rejected and the hearing of the rule may involve to some extent an investigation into the merits. If the rule is discharged then the case ends. If, on the other hand, the rule is made absolute, then the third stage is reached. The case is re-heard on the merits and may result in a repetition of the former decree or some variation of it. Though in one aspect the result is the same whether the rule be discharged or on the re-hearing the original decree be repeated, in law there is a material difference, for in the latter case, the whole matter having been re-opened, there is a fresh decree. In the former case the parties are relegated to and still rest on the old decree. VADILAL v. FULCHAND (1905)

——— s. 9—Civil Court—Jurisdiction—Suit of a civil nature—Suit by Temple committee against Temple servants for declaration as to their right to have the services performed. The plaintiffs, as members of the committee of management of a temple, received annually from Government a sum of money for defraying the expenses of certain kinds of religious worship in the temple, and it was obligatory upon them to get the worship performed by the hereditary officers or servants attached to the temple. Those officers, owing to quarrels among themselves, failed to perform the worship, with the result that the duties owing to the deity were neglected and the funds in the hands of the plaintiffs remained undisbursed for the purposes for which they were held in trust. The plaintiffs, therefore, filed this suit against the temple servants for a declaration of the former's right to disburse the funds by getting the worship performed by a suitable person or persons of their own choice in the event of the hereditary officers or servants of the temple concerned failing to perform it, and for an injunction to restrain those officers or servants from obstructing the plaintiffs in the exercise of the right so declared. It was objected to the suit that it was not triable by a Civil Court because its prayer was for a bare declaration of the plaintiffs' right either to perform by themselves or to get performed certain religious ceremonies in a temple, and there was no contest as to any right to property or to any office. Held, that the suit was of a civil nature. An action would lie against the plaintiffs by the Advocate-General acting on behalf of the public to compel them to a due execution of their particular acts of duty. The obligation cast on them by the trust, gave them a corresponding right to disburse the funds after getting the religious worship for which those funds were intended, properly performed. Such a right was not the less of a civil nature though the funds were to be appropriated to religious ceremonies. The Court was not called upon to enter into the adjudication of any rites or ceremonies as such. What it had to decide was the right of the trustees to fulfil the trust unhindered. before judgment in each suit—Distribution of sale-proceeds amongst decree-holders in three suits—Remedy of decree-holders in remaining suit. Some buffaloes were attached before judgment by the plaintiffs in four different suits against the same defendants each of which ended in a decree. The decree-holders in three of the suits applied for rateable distribution of the proceeds of a sale of the buffaloes which had taken place during the pendency of the suits. Before the moneys were taken out, the decree-holders in the remaining suit applied for execution and a re-distribution of the sale-proceeds. The application having been rejected: Held, in revision, that s. 73 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply to the case, and the lower Court was not justified in ordering a distribution of the sale-proceeds amongst the decree-holders in three of the suits in disregard of the order of attachment in the other suit, and the application of the decree-holders in that suit made whilst the money was still in Court, should not have been rejected. ——— O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of Pleadings—Defence of the bar of limitation—Practice as to amendment of plaint. The plaintiffs alleging that in pursuance of a partnership agreement they delivered R4,001 worth of cloth to defendants, sued for an order for the dissolution of the partnership and accounts. The Subordinate Judge found that the plaintiffs did deliver R4,001 worth of cloth to the defendants as alleged; but he came to the conclusion that no partnership was created and held that the suit as framed would not lie. The plaintiffs appealed mainly on the ground that the partnership had been created and that the suit was in order. When the appeal came on for hearing this plea was abandoned; the plaintiffs admitted that the facts stated in their plaint did not constitute a partnership and prayed for leave to amend by adding a prayer for the recovery of the R4,001. At this date the claim for the money was barred by limitation. The lower Appellate Court being of opinion that the plaintiffs had from the first intended to sue only for the recovery of their money, but had been misled by their pleader, allowed the amendment to be made and ultimately allowed the plaintiffs' claim. The defendants in appeal to the High Court contended that the amendment was wrongly allowed. Held, that the amendment was rightly allowed. The defence of limitation was a defence to which the defendants were never fairly entitled, and the allowance of the amendment only withdrew from them an advantage which they ought never to have received. Per BATCHELOR, J:—Under the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, O. VI, r. 17, all amendments ought to be allowed, at any stage of the proceedings, which satisfy the two conditions (a) of not working in justice to the other side, and (b) of being necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties. Amendments should be refused only where the other party cannot be placed in the same position as if the pleading had been originally correct, but the amendment would cause him an injury which could not be compensated in costs. It is merely a particular case of this general rule that where a plaintiff seeks to amend by setting up a fresh claim in respect of a cause of action which since the institution of the suit had become barred by limitation, the amendment must be refused: to allow it would be to cause the defendant an injury which could not be compensated in costs by depriving him of a good defence to the claim. The ultimate test therefore still remains the same: can the amendment be allowed without injustice to the other side, or can it not? KISANDAS RUPCHAND v. RACHAPPA VITHOBA (1909) I. L. Subsequently some of the objectors who claimed a 14-anna share in the property compromised with the decree-holder, who then applied that the remaining 2-anna in possession of certain specified parties should be sold. The lower Court ordered that the sale of these 2 annas should not proceed if the objectors who claimed them paid to the decree-holder a sum equal, rateably, to that levied from the 14 annas. Held on appeal by the decree-holder against the original judgment-debtor, that the provisions of s. 246, and not those of ss. 229 and 230, of Act VIII of 1859 applied to the application, which really sought to enforce a particular remedy against a third party named, and not against the original defendant. In execution of a decree against A, "the moiety or half share of A" in certain lands was attached. M filed a petition under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, in which he admitted that A had a one-eighth share in the lands, but alleged that A had only a one-eighth share, and that a two-eighths share belongs to himself, M. Held, that this was a claim to property attached in execution under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, which the Court under that section was bound to investigate and adjudicate upon. In execution of a decree against A, the "right, title, and interest of A" in certain lands were attached. M filed a petition under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, in which he admitted that A had a one-twentieth share, but alleged that A was entitled to no more than a one-twentieth share; and that he, M, has a two-twentieths share. Held, that, assuming the attachment of A's eighth title and interest to be an irregular attachment under s. 213, M, whose lands were included within such attachment, was entitled to come in and claim his own two-twentieths share, and the Court was bound to investigate his claim under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859. Held, also, in both cases, that M was entitled to have the attachment removed so far as his share was concerned: Held, also (per PHEAR, J.), that in the first case M was entitled to have the attachment removed so far as regards the margin in excess of A's actual share; and that in the second case he was entitled to have the whole attachment discharged. Subsequently D obtained a decree against C alone, and on the 11th January 1884 applied for attachment of the one-third share of C in the property attached by A and B, which belonged to C and his two brothers jointly. No order was on that date passed on the application. On the 14th January 1884, E purchased from C his one-third share in the attached properties, and the purchase-money was, by arrangement between the brothers, applied in satisfying the debt due to A and B. On the 28th January 1884, an order was passed on the application of the 11th January 1884, granting the attachment asked for by D; and on the 23rd April 1884 E preferred his claim to the one-third share purchased by him, and which had been since the purchase attached by D. The claim was disallowed on the ground that E had no title to the property, he having purchased whilst the property was under attachment. Held, on appeal, that the Judge should have, in accordance with s. 280 of the Code of Civil Procedure, confined himself to determining whether or not the property was in the possession of E on his own account at the time that D attached the property. The Munsif disallowed her objection on the ground that only the right, title and interest of the defendant's mother was put up for sale. On appeal the Judge set aside the Munsif's order. Held, that, for the purposes of her objection, B was a third party unconnected with the decree, and that her objection should have been disposed of under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859. Certain property was attached in the hands of the petitioner (who had preferred a claim under s. 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure) on the ground that he had become a trustee for the judgment-debtor by virtue of an alleged agreement on his part to discharge the decree-holder's debt contained in a hibanama by which the judgment-debtor had transferred the property to him. The petitioner having obtained a rule under s. 622 of the Code: Held, that, the property having been transferred to the petitioner and being now admittedly his property, the lower Court had acted without jurisdiction in directing execution to issue against the property. Per AMEER ALI, J.—When a claim is preferred under s. 278, what the Court has to see is whether the property, though standing in the name of the claimant or of some other person, is in the possession of the judgment-debtor or not. The mere fact that the judgment-debtor has some beneficial interest in the income would not render the property liable under s. 281. In 1888 he attached the mortgaged property in execution of the decree, whereupon the defendant intervened and applied to have the attachment removed, on the ground that prior to the attachment she had purchased the land under a registered deed of sale, dated the 23rd June 1888. Her application was rejected on the 27th September 1888. Subsequently the judgment-debtors applied and obtained the Court's permission to sell the land by private contract, and, on the 1st November 1888, the plaintiff purchased it and withdrew his application for execution on the 20th November 1888. In 1889 the plaintiff brought this suit against the defendant to obtain the removal of certain portions of a culvert erected by her on the land. The defendant pleaded that she was the owner of the property, having purchased it on the 23rd June 1888. The Subordinate Judge passed a decree for the plaintiff on the ground that, though the plaintiff's sale-deed was not entitled to preference over the defendant's, still, as she had taken no steps to establish her right to the property in a regular suit after application for the removal of the plaintiff's attachment had been rejected, effect could not be given to her purchase. On appeal by the defendant, the decree was reversed, and the plaintiff preferred a second appeal. Held, confirming the appellate decree, that when the plaintiff withdrew his attachment on the 20th November 1888, the parties were restored to the status quo ante. The object of the claim which was preferred by the defendant was, as contemplated by s. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), to obtain the removal of the attachment, and when that attachment was removed by the judgment-creditor's own act, there was no longer an attachment or any proceeding in execution of which the order could operate to the prejudice of the claimant, and therefore there was no necessity for her to bring a suit to set aside the order. On the 13th August 1889, the plaintiff instituted this suit for a declaration that the property belonged to his judgment-debtor (I), and as such was liable to attachment and sale. The defendants pleaded that they had been in possession of the property for more than twelve years prior to the institution of the suit, and that the suit was therefore barred. The Judge rejected the plaintiff's claim. Held, reversing the decree, that the suit being brought under s. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), it was a suit to set aside the order of 11th August 1888, directing the removal of the attachment, and should be determined by ascertaining the rights of the parties at the date of that order. The goods were to be sold on arrival on P's account and the proceeds credited to him as against the advances made by the payment of the hundis. On the arrival of goods at Bombay, they were attached by B S & Co., who had obtained decrees against P. Held, that V H & Co. were entitled to the goods. They had made specific advances against the goods. B S & Co. as attaching creditors occupied the same position as P himself and had no better claim to the goods than he had; and if he had attempted to prevent the goods reaching the hands of V H & Co. who at his request had made specific advances against them, he would have been restrained by injunction. Held, also, that at the date of attachment the goods were in possession of P by the railway company "on account of or in trust for" V H & Co., in the sense in which that expression

II, cl. 1.—Notices to judgment-debtor.* A person holding a claim on property ordered to be sold in execution of a decree is required to make the application contemplated in the High Court's Civil Circular No. 90 (c), page 40, of the "Circular Orders." The application must be in writing and bear the proper fee prescribed by Sch. II, No. 1, of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870). The circular does not require any notice to be served on the judgment-debtor. Whether he is bound by the order passed in the proceedings must depend on the facts of each case. Twelve other creditors also brought twelve other similar suits and obtained decrees against other persons who were also described as owners of the Wahalan Mills, and attached the same property. In suit No. 1548 of 1897 R M (the present plaintiff), under s. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code, claimed the property. His claim was disallowed and he was ordered to bring a suit under s. 283. No claim or order was made in the case of the other twelve suits. R M now sued in pursuance of the above order to recover his property, and he included as defendants not merely those defendants (Nos. 1 and 2) who had been plaintiffs in suit No. 1548 of 1897, but also those who had been plaintiffs in the twelve other suits, and who had attached the property in execution of their decrees. It was objected that no suit would lie against the latter, as in their suits no claim had been made to the goods which they had attached, and no order made under s. 281, Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the suit lay against the defendants (other than Nos. 1 and 2), although no claim had been made or order passed under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code. The summary remedy given by s. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code is alternative to the remedy by way of suit. The object of s. 278 is not to deprive a claimant of his remedy by suit, but to give him, if he is diligent, a more speedy and summary remedy. RAGHUNATH MUKUND v. SAROSH KAMA

52. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 279, 280, 281—Attachment—Striking off Execution-proceedings—Question of nature of possession in claim suit. B instituted a suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court, Cuttack, on the 27th of November 1887, against R for possession of the Dakhin Paresh Muth at Puri, with the properties appertaining thereto, and obtained a decree on the 29th April 1889. Execution having been applied for by B, it was stayed, pending the appeal to the High Court, upon R giving security. The decree of the Subordinate Judge's Court was set aside by the High Court, but restored by the Privy Council, and B was put in possession of the Muth with its properties in execution of the last-mentioned decree between the 23rd of April and the 3rd of June 1895. Subsequent to the institution of the above suit, K instituted a suit for recovery of a certain sum of money against R and obtained a decree, and in execution thereof caused the attachment of the immoveable properties now in dispute on the 18th September 1890, and the application was dismised for default, and subsequently, after the institution and dismissal of various proceedings in execution, an order for sale of the properties attached on the 18th of September 1890 was applied for and obtained by K on the 15th of April 1895 ; B then put in his claim on the 23rd of May 1895, and it was disallowed on the 9th of September following. B moved the High Court under s. 15 of the Charter Act (24 & 25 Vict., c. 104) and s. 622, Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the striking an execution-proceeding off the file is an act which may admit of different interpretations according to the circumstances under which it is done, and no general rule can be laid down which would govern all cases of that kind ; but having regard to the circumstances of the present case, viz., that the Court below had no opportunity of considering the circumstances under which the several execution-proceedings were dismissed, it could not be held that there was no subsisting attachment, and that the order of the Court below was bad in law. Held, further, that the lower Court was wrong in holding that the decree obtained by B in the Subordinate Judge's Court did not show that he had an interest in the attached property merely because it was not final, but had been appealed against. To reconcile s. 279, Civil Procedure Code, with ss. 280 and 281, the words "some interest" must be taken to imply such interest as would make the possession of the judgment-debtor possession not on his own account but on account of, or in trust for, the claimant. Held, also, that it cannot be said that the properties in dispute which were admittedly in the possession of the judgment-debtor at the date of the attachment were in his possession, not as his own property, but on account of the claimant, although the claimant obtained a decree against him, and execution of such decree was stayed upon his giving security. In the sections relating to claims to attached property, what the Code of Civil Procedure provides is a summary investigation into the question of possession, and the question of title is required to be gone into only so far as it may be necessary to determine whether the person in possession holds such possession as agent of, or as trustee for, another. Having regard to the facts that K, the creditor, brought her suit after the institution of the suit by B, the claimant, and also that the money covered by K's decree was borrowed by R for the purpose of paying Government revenue due on account of the properties of the muth, the questions that arise are—whether the doctrine of lis pendens applies and whether the decree-holder can succeed upon the principle that a debt contracted for legal necessity by a mohunt de facto is recoverable from the endowed property in the hands of the mohunt de jure ? These questions do not come within the scope of an investigation under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to claims to attached property. In execution of this decree, an attachment was made of certain immovable property formerly of the original debtor; but prior to such attachment the judgment-debtor had by an oral agreement transferred such property to other persons and put them in possession. Held, that it was open to the transferees in possession to raise the defence which their transferor could have raised, namely, that only the rights and interests of the judgment-debtor himself were liable to attachment and sale in execution of the decree, and not the rights and interests of the co-heirs of the judgment-debtor. *Jafri Begam v. CLAIM TO ATTACHED PROPERTY—contd.

—"Some interest" in property attached—Order dismissing claim by mortgagees—Letters Patent, Art. 15—"Judgment"—Appeal. An order passed by a Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court dismissing a claim preferred under ss. 278 and 282 of the Code of Civil Procedure by the mortgagees of immovable property which has been attached in execution of a decree, is subject to appeal. Art. 15 of the Letters Patent is not restricted by ss. 588 and 591 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Four persons lent money on mortgage, the deed, with the consent of all, being prepared in favour of one of them alone. It, however, specified the amount that each had advanced, and provided that, if the nominal mortgagee should receive any instalments from the mortgagors, the same should be distributed between all the four mortgagees according to the amounts advanced by them. The nominal mortgagee died, leaving a will appointing executors, who had not, however, taken out probate. A judgment-creditor of the mortgagors then caused the property to be attached, whereupon the three other creditors filed a claim petition, asking that the attachment might be declared to be subject to the mortgage. Held, that the applicants were competent to prefer the claim and establish, within the meaning of s. 279 of the Code "some interest in" the property attached. If the nominal mortgagee was the agent of the applicants, they had a legal interest in the property attached, and if he was a trustee, they had a beneficial or equitable interest therein. A beneficial interest is as much an interest, within the meaning of s. 279, as a legal interest in the property attached. SABHAPATHI CHETTI v. NARAYANASAMI CHETTI (1901) . I. L. R. 25 Mad. 555

55. ——— Party—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 283—"Party against whom an order has been made." Plaintiff sued to recover possession of immovable property. The land in question had, on a previous occasion, been attached in execution of a decree against plaintiff, whereupon his younger brother, the present second defendant, had perferred a claim-petition, on which an order was passed holding that plaintiff (then judgment-debtor) and second defendant (then claimant) were jointly entitled to the land. The claim was held to be good to the extent of a moiety of the land, which was accordingly released from attachment, the other moiety being ordered to be sold, the claimant's claim thereto being rejected. Plaintiff satisfied the decree, and the property was not sold. He now sued to recover possession of it. Held, that having regard to the terms of the order in the claim proceedings, and to the fact that it had not been proved that plaintiff had actually received notice of them, plaintiff was not a party against whom an order had been made, within the meaning of s. 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that the order was not conclusive as against him. Netietom Perengaryprom v. *Tayanbarry Paramesh-waren Nambudri, 4 Mad. A claim had been preferred by plaintiff, objecting to the said attachment on these grounds, under s. 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but had been rejected. Plaintiff now sued for a declaration that the attachment and sale were invalid, on the grounds that the properties belonged to a certain mutt, and not to second defendant; that second defendant had been manager of the mutt, but had been dismissed, plaintiff replacing him; and that the rents in question were not liable for the debts of second defendant. The plaintiff prayed for no relief consequential to the declaration. Held, that the attachment was of a debt in respect of which prohibitory orders had been issued under s. 268 of the Code of Civil Procedure; that the attachment of a right to receive a debt is not properly capable of possession within the meaning of ss. 280 and 281 of the Code of Civil Procedure; and that the suit was therefore not one instituted under s. 283 to establish a right to attached property; and that it had been properly dismissed. Mussamut Rambutty Kooer v. Kamessur Pershad, *22 W. The Mamlatdar under the orders of the Collector put up for sale certain immoveable property belonging to the judgment-debtors. The sale was confirmed by the Mamlatdar with the sanction of the Collector. Some time afterwards the auction-purchaser applied to the Collector for a certificate of sale, but the Collector refused the certificate and set aside the sale on the ground that the purchaser was a relative of the decree-holder and had really purchased the property on his behalf without the permission of the Court. Against this proceeding of the Collector the purchaser made an application, first to the Subordinate Judge who had transferred the decree to the Collector for execution, and then to the District Court. But both Courts declined to entertain his application on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Held, on an application to the HighCourt, that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdction to deal with the application and to revise the Collector's proceedings in execution. Held, also, that the Collector, having through his subordinate put up for sale the judgment-debtor's property and confirmed the sale, had in that way completely executed the decree so far as he could, and was so far functus officio. His duty was to make a return to the Court of what he had done. After confirmation of the sale, he could not set it aside. Per WEST, J.—The Collector, like the Nazir in India, is a ministerial officer when he executes a decree. He, like the Nazir, must carry out the decree of a Civil Court in general subjection to the judicial direction of the Court on whose authority the coercive power exercised by him rests, and which alone can deal judicially with the questions that arise in execution. His proceedings and orders are subject accordingly to revision and correction on the application of a party aggrieved whenever he misconceives the decree or acts illegally in giving effect to it. He is limited strictly to the precise line of activity laid down for him in the Code and the orders under it; and in cases of error or doubt it is the Court that must determine whether he, as its ministerial officer, has or has not transgressed his powers. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—A sale made by a Collector under Ch. XIX of the Civil Procedure Code is subject to confirmation by the Civil Court under s. 312. As soon as the Collector has exercised or performed the power or duties conferred or imposed upon him by ss. 321 to 325 of the Code, he is functus officio. If he has sold the property or re-sold it under the power given by cl. (c) of s. 325, he has completed the execution of the decree so far as he can legally complete it, and it is then his duty to retransmit the decree to the Court, under rules prescribed in that behalf by Government under the second paragraph of s. 320. Where the property has been sold or re-sold, the sale or re-sale cannot be set aside by the Collector. Any application for setting it aside must be made to the Civil Court under s. 311 and dealt with by it under s. 312; and if no application is made to the Court, the sale must be confirmed by it under that section. 5. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 265—Execution of decree—Decree for Partition—Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879), s. 113—Collector's power in executing partition decree—Civil Court's jurisdiction to control Collector's action. Decrees in three separate suits for the partition of a certain estate having been referred to the Collector of Ratnagiri for execution under the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 265, B and R (brothers of the first appellant), who were parties to the suits, objected to the Collector's mode of partition, and applied to the Court to set aside the Collector's scheme and to direct a fresh partition. The Subordinate Judge of Vengurla granted the application and set aside the partition ordered by the Collector. Against this order V, who was plaintiff in one of the suits, appealed to the District Court, and in the appeal he made B alone the respondent. The District Court reversed the order of the Subordinate Judge and upheld the order of the Collector. Thereupon B preferred a second appeal to the High Court against the decision of the District Court. To this appeal neither R nor his brother, the present appellant, were made parties. The High Court having confirmed the decision of the District Court, proceedings were taken to carry out the partition according to the Collector's original scheme. The appellant objected on the ground that the Collector's scheme had been set aside by the Subordinate Judge, and that he (the appellant) had not been a party to the proceedings in either of the Appellate Courts. He contended that he was therefore not bound by the decisions of the Appellate Courts, and that the order of the Subordinate Judge, setting aside the partition ordered by the Collector, was still in force so far as he was concerned. He therefore applied that the property should be divided in accordance with that order. His application was rejected by the Court of first instance as time-barred, inasmuch as more than a year had elapsed since the date of the order of the Subordinate Judge, and during that time the applicant had taken no steps to enforce the order. On appeal, the Acting District Judge confirmed the order of the lower Court, holding that the order of the Subordinate Judge was no longer in force, having been set aside by the High Court. On second appeal to the High Court: Held, that the appellant could not succeed in the present appeal, the object of which was to revive the order of the Subordinate Judge. That order was one which the Subordinate Judge had no power to make. It involved taking the execution of the decree for partition out of the Collector's hands into his own, in direct contradiction of the law. In case of partition of lands, s. 265 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) and s. 113 of the Bombay Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879) place the execution of the decree entirely in the Collector's hands. This does not deprive the Court of judicial control of its decree, as, for instance, if it should appear to have been obtained by fraud or surprise; but in the present case nothing of that kind was relied on. Nor was it asserted that the Collector had acted in bad faith, or contravened the command of the Court, or transgressed the law. What was alleged was that he had made an objectionable partition. This was not a ground on which the Subordinate Judge could interfere. DEV GOPAL SAVANT v. VASUDEV VITHAL SAVANT . . . I. L. R. 12 Bom. 371

That decree was sent for execution to the Collector. In the meantime, a revision survey had been introduced into the village, under which the designation of some of the lands directed to be partitioned was changed from khoti to dhara lands. The Collector proposed to partition them, as described by the survey; but the plaintiffs having declined the proposal, he refused to partition the lands, and returned unexecuted the decree to the Court. On reference to the High Court:—Held, that the Collector had acted ultra vires. The plaintiffs were entitled to have the lands partitioned, quite independent of the result of the new survey as regards the character of the lands. The proposal of the Collector was virtually to contravene the command of the Court, which as a purely ministerial officer, it was not in his power to do either directly or indirectly. It is a false statement made under a verification that constitutes an offence under s. 193 of the Penal Code, not a verification on oath or solemn affirmation. The Deputy Collector acting under the Land Acquisition Act is not a judicial officer, he cannot properly be regarded as a Revenue Court within the terms of s. 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, his proceedings under the former Act are not regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure, nor is he right in requiring a petition put in before him to be verified in accordance with that Code, so as to make any false statement punishable as perjury. The Deputy Collector is not in a position to pass any final order in the matter of value of the land or the right to claim the price fixed ; a party dissatisfied can claim a reference to the Civil Court, whose duty it is to settle the matter in dispute judicially ; therefore, to subject parties who claimed the right to such a reference to a criminal prosecution, when the matters on which the Deputy Collector had formed an opinion as a Revenue Officer under the Land Acquisition Act must be submitted to the determination of a Court, is obviously premature and improper, and is almost certain to operate very prejudicially towards them in the trial before the Civil Court of the same matter. The grounds upon which he based his application were the following:—(i) That P had lost her husband ten months previously and was in mourning; that, according to Parsi usage, a widow observed mourning for two or three years, and during that time did not leave her house; (ii) that B was fifty-eight years of age and sickly and physically unable to attend the Court; (iii) that A was about to go up-country, and could not stay in Bombay until the hearing. Held, the circumstances alleged were not such as to justify the issue of a commission. It is to be taxed on the same scale and on the same principle as would be adopted in England, and, if the Taxing Master finds any difficulty, he must refer to England for information. Where an item is objected to in taxation, the Taxing Master should reconsider and review his taxation, and in doing so he should throw the onus of proof, as to the necessity of the item, upon such party as, having regard to its particular nature, he considers ought to bear it. As to the production of vouchers in case of commissions to England, no rule can be laid down. Upon objections being brought in, it is in the discretion of the Taxing Master, either on his own motion or on the application of the party objecting, to require vouchers for, or further proof of, all or any of the items objected to, and, failing the production of the vouchers or proof which he may require, to disallow the item. Quære: Whether in taxation as between party and party the costs of obtaining a transcript of the evidence given and of perusing it ought to be allowed. Payments made to witnesses are discretionary allowances, and the Court is averse to review such allowances. The Court, in appointing a commissioner to take evidence in England, expects that the fees for and obtained a commission to issue to the Judge of Agra as commissioner to examine witnesses on his behalf, but the Judge of Agra refused to execute the commission without being paid his fees, which D accordingly paid. On the hearing of the rule, it was discharged with costs including costs of the commission. On the taxation of the bill of costs as between party and party, the taxing officer disallowed the sum paid to the Judge of Agra, and allowed certain fees and additional fees to the counsel for D. Exceptions were filed by both parties, and eventually the exceptions came on for argument. Held, that the Judge of Agra was not bound to execute a commission issuing from the Insolvent Court without making a charge for so doing; the amount of the charge is in the discretion of the taxing officer. As to allowing fees to the counsel for D, the taxing officer should consider what was fair and reasonable, regard being had to the nature and circumstances of the case; they are not necessarily to be measured by the amount allowed by the Official Assignee for his counsel. In re GHASEERAM . . 12 B. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 40—Service—Refusing admission to commission—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) s. 174, Proceedings under. A commission was issued to take the deposition of the defendant in a civil suit, a lady. A notice of the commission was shown to the pleader of the lady and his signature taken thereupon; the notice was not addressed to any particular person. On the day appointed for the commission, the doors of the lady's house were locked, and the commissioner was refused admittance, and consequently the commission could not be executed. Proceedings were thereupon instituted against the lady under s. 174, Indian Penal Code. Held, that such proceedings under s. 174, Indian Penal Code, were bad. And that, although notice to the pleader, if properly served, would be effectual for all purposes in relation to the civil suit, it could not render the party liable to punishment under s. 174, Indian Penal Code. And that the notice had not been properly served on the pleader. Held, also, that there is no authority to compel a person to allow a commission to be held in his house without his consent. SARASWATI DEBI v. DURGA CHURN LAHA (1902) . 6 C. W. N. 927

30. _____ Power of Courts to issue commission—Cases enumerated in sections exhaustive—Court may prevent abuse of its process. The present appellants obtained a decree against the late head of a mutt and in execution thereof attached certain gold and silver articles. The respondent, the present head of the mutt, who had been made a party to the execution proceedings as the representative of the deceased, contended that the attached articles were not liable to be sold in execution of the decree as they were not assets of the deceased, but property belonging to the mutt. The appellants thereupon applied to the Subordinate Judge to summon the respondent, as a witness for the appellants. The respondent, who resided within the jurisdiction of the Court, then applied to the Subordinate Judge to take his evidence on commission stating that he was unable, of his own personal knowledge, to give any evidence material to the questions at issue, and alleging that the appellants were insisting on his appearance in Court to put pressure upon him to relinquish or compromise his claim, as it was considered derogatory to a person in his position to appear in a Court as a witness. The Subordinate Judge refused to issue a commission. On a revision petition being filed, a single Judge of the High Court set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge and ordered the respondent to be examined on commission. On an appeal being preferred under Art. 15 of the Letters Patent: Held, that an appeal lay. Held, also, that the issue of commissions for the examination of witnesses by the Courts of this country is governed solely by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, and s. 386 is exhaustive, and provides for all the cases in which the Legislature intended that it should be competent to a Court to issue a commission for the examination of witnesses resident within its jurisdiction. Held, further, that a litigant's privilege of taking out summonses to witnesses is subject to the control of the tribunal which is called upon to enforce their attendance, though such control will be exercised sparingly and only in exceptional cases. This control is an instance of the authority of every Court of competent jurisdiction to prevent abuse of its process. In the present case the appellant's application was not bonâ fide, and the respondent's attendance in Court was required not for the purpose of obtaining material evidence, but from other motives, and the order for the issue of a commission was therefore rightly made. 2. CRIMINAL CASES—contd.

(Act X of 1872) empowers the Courts to allow examination by commission in criminal cases where a witness, according to the manners and customs of the country, ought not to appear in public. The complainant in a case of defamation, alleging that she was a pardanashin, applied to be examined by commission. Held, that the fact that she was a complainant, and not merely a witness, materially altered her position as regards the question whether she ought not to be exempted from personal appearance in Court, and that, under the circumstances, she ought not to be examined by commission, but ought to attend personally to be examined in Court. Direction to the Magistrate to make such arrangements for the examination of the complainant in Court as should secure her privacy consistent with the recording of her evidence, according to law, in the presence of the accused. Witnesses in criminal cases should not be examined by commission except in extreme cases of delay, expense or inconvenience. In the matter of the petition of FARID-UN-NISSA

4. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 503—Examination by Commission—Personal appearance in Court. A Hindu lady having been summoned as a witness on behalf of an accused, applied under s. 503 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to be examined by commission on the ground (inter alia) that she was a pardanashin, and that her enforced appearance in a Criminal Court would entail a forfeiture of her dignity and position in Hindu society. Held, that such application was properly made under the section, and that under the circumstances of the case the order prayed for could be made. In the matter of the petition of DIN TARINI DEBI

5. ——— Examination of pardanashin lady—Code of Criminal Procedure (1882), ss. 6, 7, 503, 504, 505, 506, and 507—Presidency Magistrate, power of. It is doubtful if a Presidency Magistrate in the Town of Calcutta has power to issue a commission, under ss. 503 to 507 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, to examine a witness residing within his own jurisdiction; but there is nothing in the Code to prevent a Presidency Magistrate examining a witness within his jurisdiction at some place other than the Court-house. Where a Presidency Magistrate refused, on the ground of want of jurisdiction, to grant a commission, for the examination of a pardanashin lady, but offered to take her evidence in his Court when cleared for the purpose, or in his private room; and she applied to the High Court for a commission being granted, or for such other order as they might deem proper, the High Court, on revision, directed that, if the lady would take a house or suite of rooms not far from the Magistrate's Court and pay all the costs which the Magistrate deemed reasonable and proper, he should not enforce her attendance in Court, but examine her in the place so appointed, in the

6. ——— Grounds for granting commission—Inconvenience—Expense. At the trial of a person for an offence under s. 411, Penal Code, the Court of Session, under s. 33 of the Evidence Act, used against the accused the evidence of the owner of the property in respect of which the accused was charged and of his wife taken by commission during the enquiry, and the evidence of the servant of those persons taken at the enquiry, and also the evidence of the owner of the property taken during the trial under a commission issued by the Sessions Judge under s. 503 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The grounds upon which the Sessions Judge admitted the evidence taken during the enquiry, were that the attendance of the witnesses could not be procured without an expense of ₹500, an amount which he considered unreasonable; that the witnesses would be inconvenienced; and that their evidence did not concern the accused personally, having reference only to the identification of the property in respect of which the accused was charged. Held, that the Sessions Judge had improperly admitted such evidence. Inconvenience to witnesses is no ground allowed under s. 33 of the Evidence Act, and the question of identification was a most material one, and the evidence of the witnesses in question was of the utmost moment, the whole case resting on it; and as regards the ground of expense, it was impossible to consider the amount unreasonable, considering that the entire case rested on the evidence of those witnesses and that the accused had not cross-examined those whose evidence had been taken by commission, nor, looking at his position, could he arrange for their cross-examination. Held, that on these grounds the Sessions Judge was not justified in issuing a commission under s. 503 of the Criminal Procedure Code. 7. ——— Application by prisoner for commission to place out of the jurisdiction. Previously to the trial at the Sessions, the prisoner had applied to the Court for commission to Pondicherry and Mauritius to take evidence on his behalf. The application was refused on the ground that the High Court had no authority to issue a commission in such a case, but the learned Judge (WEST, J.) reserved the question for the full Court. Held, that the High Court had no power to issue a commission out of the jurisdiction in a criminal case on an application by the accused. XL of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), may be admitted under s. 33 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) if the requirements of the proviso to that section have been complied with. The words "opportunity to cross-examine" in the proviso to s. 33 do not imply that the actual presence of the cross-examining party or his agent before the tribunal taking the evidence is necessary. To make evidence admissible against an accused person under s. 33 of the Evidence Act, the fact that he had full opportunity of cross-examination, if not admitted, must be proved. Quœre: Whether the opportunity to administer cross-interrogatories under a commission is an "opportunity to cross-examine" within the meaning of the proviso to s. 33 of the Evidence Act so as to render the evidence taken on interrogatories admissible. owners were not the same : Held, that the District Judge should have separately considered each property or group of properties belonging to the same co-owners and made separate appointments in regard to each property or group, though the same common manager might be appointed in all the cases. Fazlal Ali Chowdhury v. Abdul Majid Chowdhury, I. L. R. 14 Calc. 659, followed. Where on being directed to deal with the case in the above manner, the District Judge instead of starting proceedings de novo and issuing notices on the co-owners under s. 93, Bengal Tenancy Act, to show cause why a common manager should not be appointed, issued notices under s. 94 of the Act asking them to appoint a common manager : Held, that, in the circumstances of the case, the proceedings should have been commenced de novo and the co-owners given an opportunity of showing that owing to the altered state of things there was no longer any necessity for appointing a common manager. A District Judge can in the exercise of his discretion consider the propriety of the appointment of a common manager whatever be the stage at which the proceedings may have arrived. This discretion is not, however, to be exercised arbitrarily but according to well established rules. A co-owner who has opened a separate account in the Collector's register or makes separate collection for his share is nevertheless liable to have his share taken over by a common manager, although the dispute may not have extended to his share. His remedy, if any, is to have his share demarcated by metes and bounds. SARADINDU ROY v. THE COLLECTOR OF RUNGPUR (1907) . . 11 C. W. N. 1143

It also appeared that although the patta of defendant No. 1 authorised him to take partners, there was no promise on the part of Government to recognise, nor did they recognise, them as partners in the business so as to create direct relationship between them and Government. The deed of partnership was not one executed by all the partners in favour of all but one between the first defendant on the one side and the other partners on the other: Held, applying the principles of Smith v. *Anderson, L. 2. ——— Appeal from order in winding up—Ex parte application for extension of time—Service of notice within the extended time—Validity of extension made on ex parte application—Right of respondents to raise objections at hearing of appeal. By s. 169 of the Indian Companies Act, 1882, appeals are provided for against orders and decisions made in the winding up of companies, subject to the restriction that no such appeal shall be heard "unless notice of the same is given within three weeks after any order complained of has been made in manner in which notices of appeal are ordinarily given under the Code of Civil Procedure, unless such time is extended by the Court of Appeal." Certain applicants, under s. 214, for an order against delinquent directors and officers of a company, appealed to the High Court against the order of a District Judge dismissing their petitions. An ex parte application was made by them, under s. 169, for an extension of time during which notice of the appeal might be given; an order for extension was made; and notice was in fact given to the respondents within the time so extended. Upon the appeal coming on for hearing, it was objected that the time should not have been extended without notice to the respondents, and that the extension, if granted, should be subject to objection being raised at the hearing. Held, that notice of the application for extension of time was unnecessary; but, inasmuch as the order granting an extension had been made ex parte, the respondents were entitled to raise objection to it at the hearing. Such an appeal must, under s. 169, be filed within three weeks of the date of the order, at the latest. Per BHASHYAM AYYANGAR, J.—While refraining from expressing an opinion on the point, the terms of s. 169 of the Companies Act are probably complied with by lodging the memorandum of appeal. No order was passed by the Registrar upon this application until 6th May, and owing to delay, for which the applicants were not responsible, registration was not effected, and the certificate was not issued until the 3rd July, when a certificate was given purporting to be granted in pursuance of Act X of 1866. Meanwhile, on the 1st May 1882, the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1822) repealing Act X of 1866 came into force, s. 28 of which provided that every share in any company should be deemed to have been taken and held subject to payment of the whole amount thereof in cash, unless the same had been otherwise determined by a contract in writing filed with the Registrar. No such provision existed in Act X of 1866. The shareholders of the company paid nothing upon their shares in cash, but had agreed (not in writing filed with the Registrar) that, in consideration of certain property conveyed by them to the company at the time of its formation, fully paid-up shares were to be allotted to them. Subsequently, the company having gone into liquidation, the official liquidator sought to make the shareholders contributories to the assets of the company as the holders of shares upon which nothing had been paid, with reference to s. 28 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). Held, that the proceedings for obtaining registration of the company and a grant of a certificate of such registration commenced, within the meaning of s. 6 of the General Clauses Act, when the memorandum and articles of association were received in the Registrar's office in April 1882, while Act X of 1866 was in force; that therefore the repeal of that Act by Act VI of 1882 did not affect those proceedings; that consequently the company must be taken to have been incorporated under the former Act; and that the provisions of s. 28 of Act VI of 1882 not being applicable, the shareholders were not liable to be placed on the list of contributories as not having paid the full amount of their shares. In the matter of WEST HOPETOWN TEA COMPANY

5. ——— Registration of Association—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 4—"Gain"—Mutual Assurance Society. In 1870 a fund was formed by a number of persons over 20 in number, the object being, according to the prospectus and rules, to provide for the widows, children, and other relatives of the subscribers. The management was vested in a board of directors elected by the subscribers from amongst their own number. Subscriptions at fixed rates according to tables were paid by the subscribers to secure the provision of pensions for their widows, children, and relatives. The money so subscribed were invested in Government 4 per cent. securities, and in the course of management a large reserve fund was accumulated and so invested, the interest annually payable in respect of which amounted in the year 1888 to upwards of R46,000, but there was nothing to show that such reserve was larger than sound principles of management required. The rules provided for abatements of subscriptions according to a graduated scale, which might be granted or withheld from year to year by the directors according to their opinion as to the condition of the fund. A subscriber to the fund was under no obligation to continue his subscription, but might stop it at pleasure, subject in certain contingencies to forfeiture of the benefit of past payments. Fines were also provided for unpunctuality in payments of subscriptions. It was contended that the subscribers formed an association which required registration under s. 4 of the Indian Companies Act, inasmuch as they carried on business having for its object the acquisition of gain by the association, or the individual members thereof, as the subscribers must be taken to contemplate the ordinary consequences of their acts, and the forfeitures, fines, and large and increasing reserve fund constituted "gain." Semble: that these did not constitute gain. But held that, whether they did or not, no business was carried on, having for its object the acquisition of gain by the association or the individual members thereof. The subscribers to the General Family Pension Fund are not a company, association, or partnership formed for the purpose of carrying on business that has for its object the accquisition of gain by the company, association, or partnership, or by the individual members thereof, within the meaning of s. 4 of the Indian Companies Act. Where the substantial purpose of an association is not to carry on a business for gain, the fact that gain may accrue incidentally or may arise from merely subsidiary provisions does not make registration necessary. 6. ——— Unregistered Association—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 4—Mortgage, illegality of—Right of suit—Estoppel. In 1868 the Madras Hindu Mutual Benefit Permanent Fund was created for the purpose of enabling Hindus to assist one another and invest their savings chiefly in landed property, and the doing all such other things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above objects. By the rules of the said fund, which was not registered under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866), it was provided that the members should pay subscriptions at the rate of R2-8-0 per share per mensem for seven years from the date of admission, and that at the end of the seven years R250 should be paid in full discharge of each share. It was further provided that subscribers should be entitled to borrow money from the said fund at interest, that a reserve fund be formed and distributed once every five years to the subscribers, and that surplus collections be distributed among the subscribers annually. In 1868, defendants' father borrowed money on mortgage from the fund in accordance with the rules, and the amount was admittedly due at the time of suit. The fund was wound up under an order of the High Court, dated 15th September 1877, during the lifetime of defendants' father, who, however, took no active part in those proceedings. It further appeared that on the execution of the mortgage, the defendant's father (the mortgagor) took a lease from the mortgagees of the houses mortgaged, and retained possession of them as tenant. Held, that the association had for its object the acquisition of gain, and that, as the association consisted of more than twenty members and was not registered, its formation was forbidden by the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866), s. 4; that the mortgage suit, having for its object the carrying out of the illegal purpose of the association, was an illegal transaction; and that the suit must fail. Held, further, that the defendants were not estopped from setting up the plea of illegality either by the order of 1877 or by reason of their predecessor in title having attorned to the fund. The sum total of the subscriptions was then paid over as a loan free of interest to one of the subscribers chosen by casting lots, and he was thereupon required to execute a bond with a surety obliging him to continue his monthly subscriptions to the end of the period for which the arrangement was agreed to hold good—that period being as many months as there were subscribers. The bonds in question were executed in favour of the stakeholder and the subscribers. The business was not registered. A suit was brought on one of such bonds to recover the amount payable for subscription on account of the period subsequent to its execution. Held, that the obligees carried on business which had for its object the acquisition of gain within the meaning of the Companies Act, 1882, s. 4, and accordingly constituted an illegal association, and that the suit was not maintainable. The defendant, on being shown a document purporting to be the memorandum of association of a projected company, signed his name to it as having taken four shares. This document was not registered as the memorandum of association of the company, but another was, which differed from it in omitting, in its 4th clause, the word yearly before the word profits, on which the company were to pay a certain commission to the secretaries, agents, and treasurers, and in adding to its 6th clause a provision empowering the company by special resolution in general meeting to subdivide the shares. Held, that the first was not, but the second was, a material variance. Quære: Whether the provision empowering the company to subdivide the shares was illegal. But even if it was, held, that the effect of it being practically to alter the position of the defendant from what it would have been had the document signed by him been registered as the memorandum of association of the company, the defendant was not a shareholder in the company registered. *In re the Financial Corporation, L. under Act X of 1866. In January 1867 certain contributors (amongst whom appellants were not) and certain creditors applied to the Recorder of Rangoon, under cls. 4 and 5, s. 101, to have the company wound up, and an official liquidator appointed. A liquidator having been appointed, he applied to the Court to call upon each of the contributories, named in a list which he presented, to pay up his contribution. Accordingly, the Recorder declared the appellants to be contributories, and directed each of them to pay the amount appearing against his name. Held, that this was a suit by the official liquidator to have appellants declared contributories, and an appeal therefore lay from the Recorder's decision so declaring them. Held, that the liability, under ss. 6, 11, 18, 22, 36, and 37, of a registered shareholder, as member of a company, to contribute, is a primâ facie liability only; it being open to him to show that, although his name was on the register, yet he did not agree to become a member; and that, as appellants were not cognizant of (much less did they assent to) the registration of their names as shareholders, whilst they refused to receive any shares or pay up any calls or deposits, the sole step taken by them of joining others in putting forth the prospectus and affixing their names therein to a certain number of shares could not be said to be an agreement to become members of the company, and therefore they were not contributories. His withdrawal, however, was not accepted. Subsequently to the receipt of the said notice, the memorandum and articles of association so signed by the defendant and others were presented for registration ; but registration was refused, on the ground that the said documents were not printed. A printed copy of each was then procured and registered. The registered copies differed, in respect of the signatures subscribed thereto, from the copies signed by the defendant. The defendant's name was put upon the register of the company as the holder of 101 shares, but without the defendant's assent or knowledge, and two calls were made upon him in respect of the said shares. The defendant denied that he was a member of the said company or liable for calls. Held, that the defendant was not a member of the plaintiff company, either (i) as a "subscriber of the memorandum of association" under the earlier part of s. 22 of the Indian Companies Act, inasmuch as the memorandum there referred to was the registered memorandum, of which the document signed by the defendant was not even a true copy, or (ii) by reason of an "agreement to take shares" under the latter part of that section, inasmuch as the agreement there alluded to was an agreement with the company, and the agreement (if any) entered into by the defendant was not, and could not have been, an agreement with the company, the company not being at that time in existence. Quære : Whether it is enough to constitute a person a member of a company under the earlier part of s. 22 to subscribe a true copy of the registered memorandum of association. 11. ——— Member signing unregistered copy of Memorandum of Association—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 45—Agreement to become a member—Proposal—Acceptance—Repudiation before registration of Company. On the 13th April, 1886, L signed a printed copy of the proposed memorandum of association of a projected company for ten shares, which on the 3rd August was registered as the Imperial Flour Mills Company. On that day, viz., the 3rd August 1886, L received a notice from the secretary of the company, informing him that the company had been duly registered and requesting him to pay R100 as the deposit on the shares subscribed by him . On the 5th August L replied, stating that he had decided not to take up the shares. On the 6th August the secretary wrote to L, stating that he had already become a shareholder, and could not withdraw. On the 25th September the directors held their first meeting, and resolved that the "shares applied for be allotted, and application and allotment money be called in." On the 1st October the secretary notified to L the allotment of ten shares, and requested him to pay the overdue deposit call of R10 per share and the allotment call of R15 per share. L refused to pay, and repudiated his liability in respect of the shares. He contended that he had never become a member of the company. Held, that the defendant was not a member of the company, and was not liable to the plaintiff's claim. The fact that he had signed the proposed memorandum of association did not make him a member, inasmuch as the document which he had signed was not the document which was registered, nor even a true copy of it. Nor could the defendant be held bound as having agreed to become a member within the meaning of s. 45 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). The agreement which binds a party under this section must be an agreement with the company itself. The company not being in existence at the date of the defendant's signing the memorandum of association (viz., the 16th April 1886), that signature could amount, at the most, to an application for shares to the promoters, which by reason of its non-withdrawal before the registration of the company on the 3rd August became on that day an application to the company. There could be no acceptance of that application until the company was registered; and the defendant withdrew his application by his letter of the 5th August. The letter written by the company's agents on the 3rd August was not an acceptance. It was only a request for the payment of the deposit on the shares for which the defendant had applied, and which was required as a guarantee for the bonâ fides of the application. Further, the terms of the resolution of the board of directors of the 25th September made it clear that up to that date the defendant's application had not been made a binding agreement by acceptance. His repudiation, therefore, of the 5th August was in time, and he could not be held liable as a shareholder of the company. Held, also, that in no case could the defendant have been bound by the letter of the 3rd August written by the agents of the company. That letter was written— not by order of the directors at a meeting duly convened and composed of the proper quorum of four. It was written by the secretary after consulting separately three only of the directors. This was an irregular proceeding, which would not bind the company or the subscribers with regard to the application on the acceptance of shares. The directors did not act as a board, nor was the consent of a quorum obtained. IMPERIAL FLOUR MILLS COMPANY v. LAMB . . . . I. L. R. 12 Bom. 647

COMPANY—contd.

12. ——— Agreement to take shares —Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 43—Signing duplicate memorandum of association of the registration of company—Effect of such signature only equivalent to a proposal to take shares—Acceptance. A, after the Bombay Electrical Company had been registered, signed a duplicate memorandum of association for five shares. He subsequently acted as director of the company, being qualified to act as such by procuring from a member of the company five fully paid-up shares. The shares for which he subscribed were never allotted to him, nor was he registered as holder of them. The company went into liquidation. Held, that A was not liable in respect of the five shares for which he subscribed. A person signing a duplicate memorandum of association is not bound as one who has signed the original memorandum, although such duplicate is signed after the company has been registered. Such a signature cannot be binding, because it does not amount to a signing of the memorandum itself, and does not satisfy the requirements of s. 45 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). It does not create the positive agreement which the law has made the necessary consequence of the signature of the real memorandum before registration. It only amounts to a proposal to take shares. But in the present case there had been no acceptance by the company of the proposal. There had been no allotment and no placing on the register. Acceptance could not be legally inferred from the circumstances of the case. A's liability was only inchoate and never became complete. The company, while it was solvent, never accepted A's offer to become a shareholder, and after it went into liquidation it was too late. In re BOMBAY ELECTRICAL COMPANY. 13. ——— Liability of a Signatory to the Memorandum of Association for a fully paid-up share given to him as a present— Shares available for allotment, but not allotted. The Bombay Electrical Company having gone into liquidation, the official liquidator applied to have E placed on the list of contributories in respect of one share for which he had subscribed, and signed the memorandum and articles of association on the 26th February 1885. The company was registered on the 5th March 1885, and went into liquidation in July 1886. In his affidavit E stated that he had been induced to sign the memorandum and articles of association by one P, who was a promoter of the company, and who had promised to give him a fully paid-up share as the share he had signed for; that in March 1886, P had accordingly handed him the certificate of a fully paid-up share; that the said share was one out of a hundred fully paid-up shares which were given by the company to P in part payment of money due to him from the company, and that the said share was duly entered in the share register of the company as having been fully paid-up on the 18th September 1885. He contended that the company was estopped from denying that the share was fully paid up; that no other share had been allotted to him, and that all the shares of the company had been allotted. Held, that he was liable in respect of the share. The transaction between him and P did not bind or affect the company. The present of a paid-up share by a third party does not satisfy the obligation of a subscriber of the memorandum. The issue of the certificate does not estop the company so long as the certificate has not passed to a bonâ fide transferee for value. If E had not, in fact, paid money or money's worth for the one share subscribed for, the company was still entitled to prove the non-payment, and claim the value of the share. Held, also, that, as there were left shares available for allotment, the fact that none had been allotted to E made no difference, and that the liquidator was entitled to hold

(e).* The defendant, in February 1886, signed duplicates of the documents subsequently registered as the memorandum and articles of association of the plaintiff company in December of the same year. By the documents which he signed, he "agreed" to take the number of shares (ten) set opposite his name. He never cancelled that agreement. Ten shares were subsequently allotted to him; but the defendant did nothing amounting to an acceptance of this allotment, and on the 19th April, 1888, definitely cancelled his previous agreement to take shares. Held, that the defendant had never become a shareholder of the company. Whatever the signing by the defendant of the documents in February 1886 amounted to—whether to a contract or to a mere proposal—the defendant in signing them addressed, not the company, which was not then in existence, but the promoters. If a contract, the company was not then in existence, and could not therefore ratify it: if a proposal, it was not a proposal to the company, or an agent for the company, and the company could not therefore accept it. S. 23, cl. (h) and s. 27, cl. There was no express agreement to pay him in cash, but there was a tacit understanding that he should get the usual broker's commisson. He was given two shares as remuneration for his services. At the time he accepted the shares, the account of his commission as broker had not been settled, and no demand had been made by him for payment of any specified sum. When the Company was wound up under the orders of the Court, the liquidators placed his name on list A of the contributories for the value of the two shares. He applied to have his name removed from the list. Held, rejecting his application, that his name was rightly put on the list of contributories. The fact that the shares were given him as remuneration for his services could not be pleaded as a payment of the calls on shares, as no definite sum had been found due when the shares were accepted by him. Where the circumstances relied on would, in an action for money due on the shares, be evidence only in support of a plea of accord and satisfaction, it would not be a good defence of "a payment in cash" within the meaning of s. 28 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882), but otherwise, if the circumstances would support a plea of payment. The agreement under which the shares were so allotted was not registered as required by s. 28 of Act VI of 1882. A sold three of these shares to D, who had no notice that they were not fully paid up. D sold the three shares to G, who was the Managing Director of the Company. The Company was wound up by the Court. At the date of the winding up, G was holder of the three shares. In settling the list of contributories, the Court ordered G's name to be placed on the list in respect of the three shares. Held, that G was not liable as a contributory. Though G was a Managing Director of the Company, and as such must have known that the shares had been issued as fully paid-up shares without complying with s. 28 of Act VI of 1882, he was not on that account estopped from taking advantage of the equitable rule which protects a purchaser with notice taking from a purchaser without notice. In re GULABDAS BHAIDAS I. 17. ——— Contributory—Increase of capital—Illegal issue of shares—Reduction of capital—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 13. The Nawab of Beyla Spinning, Weaving, and Manufacturing Company, Limited, was registered under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866). The original capital of the company consisted of R4,00,000 divided into 1,600 shares of R250 each. In 1882 the capital of the company was increased by R1,00,000, divided into 1,600 shares of R62-8. The resolution to increase the capital was not passed in accordance with the articles of association, i.e., "with the sanction of a special resolution of the company passed at a general meeting." On the 5th November 1884, a resolution was passed at a general meeting of the company that the shareholders should take up 459 shares of the original capital and 1,027 shares of the increased capital, which were then in the hands of the company, in the proportion of one share to every two shares already held by them. In pursuance of this resolution, the appellants took up several shares of the original capital as well as of the new capital.

2. ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION AND LIABILITY OF SHAREHOLDERS—contd.

On 19th October 1885, a general meeting of the company was held, at which it was resolved that the resolution of the 5th November 1884, and all acts done in connection with it, should be set aside, that the shares taken by the shareholders in pursuance of that resolution should be taken back by the company, and such amounts as had been paid by them on those shares should be credited to their names in the company's books. This was accordingly done, and the shares were transferred to the name of the company. In October 1886, the company was wound up by order of the Court. In settling the list of contributories, the District Judge of Surat held that the appellants were liable, as contributories, in respect of all the shares which they had taken up in pursuance of the resolution of 5th November 1884. On appeal from this decision: Held, that, with respect to the shares of the original capital, the resolution of the 19th October 1885 was illegal and invalid. It operated, not as an investment by the company of its funds in its own shares, but as an extinguishment of the shares, and such extinguishment was virtually a reduction of the capital which could not be done without complying with the provisions of s. 13 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). The holders of such shares were therefore properly placed on the list of contributories. Held, also, that the issue of the shares of the new capital was illegal, as the resolution to increase the capital had not been come to in accordance with the articles of association. It was therefore open to the company to set aside the resolution of 5th November, 1884. When it was set aside, the persons who held the new shares ceased to be shareholders, and could not, therefore, be held liable as contributories, BHIMBHAI v. ISHWARDAS JUGJIWANDAS I. L. The Official Liquidator need not take out letters of administration to the estate of a deceased shareholder before settling the list of contributories. There is nothing in ss. 126 and 144 requiring the Official Liquidator to place on the list all the persons who may as representatives be liable to contribute in discharge of the liability of a deceased shareholder as contemplated by s. 126. Nor can the liability, under that section, of a person who has been placed on the list as his representative be affected by omission of the Official Liquidator to do so. The plaint set forth the particulars of demand, one of which was R250, being the amount of deposit payable before allotment on 15th July 1886, and another a sum of R250 payable on allotment on 15th July 1886. This suit was brought on 10th September 1889, and the defendant contended that the above two items of claim were barred by limitation. The lower Courts, notwithstanding the statement in the plaint, found, as a fact, that the allotment of the shares was really made in November 1886. Held, therefore, assuming three years to be the period of limitation, that the claim was not barred. holding the procuration of the said firm and managing the said business," to vote as proxy for them at meetings of the company. Art. 65 of the articles of association of the company provided that "no person shall be appointed or have authority to act as a proxy who is not a shareholder in the company." At meetings in May and June 1902, the right of proxy was exercised by a person, who had become a shareholder in the company in March 1889, and was manager of the firm of Wallace & Co., and holding its procuration from 1st April 1889, but who was neither a member of the firm nor a shareholder in the company, when the power of attorney was executed. Held, by the Judicial Committee (reversing the decision of the High Court), that on the true construction of Art. 65, the proxy was not necessarily required to be a shareholder when the power of attorney was signed: the article was complied with by his being so qualified at the time when he was called upon to act as a proxy. Held, also, that although the proxy was not expressly named in the power of attorney, he was sufficiently described in it for all business purposes, and the articles of association required nothing more. 1. ——— Preferential Dividend payable to holder of one set of shares—Construction of contract by the company to pay it to the shareholder and to his executor holding the same—Death of the shareholder—"Holder" of shares—Legal title to shares—Meaning of the word "hold"—Administration, effect of. The goodwill of a business, which a merchant had carried on, and the capital, property and assets with it, were transferred by him in 1864 to a joint stock limited company, who agreed with him that, in consideration of the transfer by him of property, referred to in the contract as "the fixed assets," one hundred paid-up shares of R2,500 each, of which any assignment by him during the next five years from the registration of the company should not be recognized by them as valid, should be allotted to him. It was also agreed that in consideration of the transfer, he and "his executors or administrators shall be entitled, so long as they hold the said hundred shares, to an extra or preferential dividend." On this agreement the parties acted, and the shareholder held the shares till he died in England in 1888, having by will directed that his executors or administrators should hold the hundred shares in trust for his surviving brothers, of whom the executor, who proved the will, was one. Administration with the will annexed was granted in India to the plaintiff in this suit as the attorney of the executor. A note of this was made in the register of the company leaving the hundred shares still in the name of the testator. The company then discontinued to pay the preferential dividend, and contended that it was no longer payable, inasmuch as the testator's estate had been administered, and that the executor no longer held the shares as executor, but as trustee for the beneficiaries under the will. Held, that the contract was still in operation, the executor still "holding" the shares within its meaning; and that the preferential dividend continued payable to the estate of the testator, the company being only concerned with the legal title to the shares, and not with any claims, if there were any, that might be made by beneficiaries under the will against the executor as trustee. Coorla Spinning and Weaving Company provided that the board of directors might decline to register any transfer of shares, unless the transferee were approved by the Board. A shareholder, holding 423 shares, became insolvent, and his shares thereupon vested in the Official Assignee who sold them. The purchaser required the Official Assignee to transfer the shares into the names of two nominees, viz., 200 shares to the name of one nominee, and 223 shares to the name of the other. The Official Assignee executed the necessary transfer deeds and sent them to the company, with a request that the shares might be transferred accordingly. The proposed nominees were already members of the company and registered holders of shares in it, and no objection was taken to them in their personal capacity. The directors, however, declined to approve of the transferees and to register the transfer, unless the transferees would pledge themselves not to approve a certain change in the mode of remunerating the agents of the company, which the directors desired to effect, and which they believed would be very advantageous to the company. The transferees refused to pledge themselves in any way as to their future action and brought this suit to enforce registration of the transfer. Held, following Moffatt v. Farquhar, L. R. 7 Ch. D. 591, that the directors were bound to register the transfers. It was contended that neither the Official Assignee nor the transferees had any legal right to call on the company to register the transfers. Held, that, having regard to the provision of the articles of association of the company, the Official Assignee was entitled to have the shares registered in the names of his vendees. The articles of association of the company provided, (inter aliâ), that any shareholder might, with the sanction of the board of directors, sell or dispose of and transfer all or any of his shares to any other person approved by the board who shall not be bound to assign any reason for the withholding of such sanction. Held, that the application should be refused, for s. 45 of the Specific Relief Act did not apply (there being another

5. _____ Approval of Transfer by Directors—Such power of approval a fiduciary power—Resolution of Directors to approve of future transfers ultra vires. By the articles of association of the New Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Company, transfers of shares in the company were subject to the approval of the directors. On the 18th October, 1898, the directors passed a resolution "that up to the time of the next ordinary general meeting the board approve of all transfers of shares made by Dwarkadas Shamji and Ramdas Kessowji (two of the shareholders) or either of them and . . . . will transfer shares standing in the name of Dwarkadas Shamji and in the name of Ramdas Kessowji to their or his transferees without claiming any lien or raising any objection." Held, that the above resolution was ultra vires and not binding on the company. The power conferred on the directors by the articles of association was a fiduciary power to be exercised for the benefit of the company, and could not be exercised until the question of each transfer together with the names of the transferor and the transferee was before them and they had an opportunity of considering each case. In re NEW GREAT EASTERN SPINNING AND WEAVING CO. Ex-parte RAMDAS KESSOWJI I. on the ground of its being premature, there having been no refusal to register by a properly constituted Board, but might treat the defence set up as a refusal, and deal with the application on the merits. (iii) Where it was found that the real objections entertained by the directors to the various transferees were (a) their connection as employés of the Cawnpore Woollen Mills with M (the managing director of the Cawnpore Woollen Mills), and the personal animosity existing between J. (the managing director of the Muir Mills), and M, and (b) the desire of the directors (of the Muir Mills) that M should not add to his voting power at the meetings of the company, and (c) that therefore the objections were not personal to the applicants themselves. Held, that, where the articles of association give a discretionary power to the directors to refuse to register a transfer, and it appears that the directors have bonâ fide considered the matter, the Courts will not compel them to disclose their reasons, but if they do disclose their reasons, or evidence is produced as to their reasons, the Courts will consider whether those reasons proceeded on a right or wrong principle. Held, further, applying the principle of English cases, that objections not personal to the transferees do not constitute legitimate reasons. Poole v. *Middleton, 29 Beav 646 ; In re Bell Bros., 7 L. Payments were made by him, by way of calls on the shares, and by his successor in office, and the company credited the amounts paid by the successor towards the amount due as calls on the shares. Subsequently plaintiff, another successor in the office, applied to have the company's share register altered, so that the shares should stand in the name of the mutt. This the directors refused to do unless plaintiff provided them with a transfer from the original allottee (who was still alive) or an indemnity by the mutt. Plaintiff did neither, and the shares were ultimately declared by the company to be forfeited. Plaintiff now sued the company, claiming that the shares were not the private property of the original allottee, but belonged to the mutt, and that the forfeiture should be declared to be invalid, and that the company's register should be rectified. He adduced no evidence to show that the original applicant had utilised the funds of the mutt in payment of calls. Held, that no presumption arose that the money paid belonged to the mutt. Nor was the company estopped, by s. 115 of the Evidence Act, from denying that the shares were the property of the mutt. On the refusal by the directors to transfer the shares to the name of the plaintiff, he should have applied for rectification of the company's register under s. 58 of the Indian Companies Act, though such an application could not have been successful, as in the circumstances he could not have shown that the directors had acted capriciously and unreasonably in refusing to enter plaintiff's name on the register without a transfer from the original holder or an indemnity. 8. ——— Sale of Shares—Voucher by company of title of vendor—Estoppel—Pukka receipt issued by company. In 1898, the plaintiff, through his broker, purchased in the open market three shares in the defendant company. According to the practice usual in Bombay, the transfer deeds signed by the vendors were brought to him by his broker and were signed by him and returned to the seller's broker, who lodged them, together with the share certificates, in the office of the company, and obtained a katcha receipt for the same, addressed to the seller. The directors of the company having duly approved of the transfers, the seller's broker returned the katcha receipt and obtained from the company a pukka receipt addressed to the plaintiff (i.e., the purchaser) in the following terms : "Received for transfer the following share certificates with transfer deeds duly executed :—

Nos....
Total..shares only.
(Sd.)——Transfer Clerk.

N.B. This receipt shall be presented within one week from this date, when the share certificates will be returned. The Company will not hold itself responsible for the safe custody of the above share beyond one week from this date." This pukka receipt was given by the seller's broker to the plaintiff's broker, who handed it to the plaintiff, and the latter thereupon (in accordance with the practice in Bombay) paid the price of the shares. No fresh certificate was issued by the company to the plaintiff, but his name was endorsed by the company on the existing certificate as transferee. He was also duly registered as transferee in the books of the company. It was subsequently discovered that, by reason of a previous transfer of the said three shares having been forged, the plaintiff's vendor had no title, and by a decree in a suit filed by the real owner of the shares the plaintiff was ordered to give them up. He thereupon filed this suit to recover the value of the shares from the company contending that by their pukka receipt the company had represented to him that he was obtain ing shares in the company, and that upon that representation he had paid for them, and that the company were estopped from denying that he was entitled to them. Held, that the company were not estopped by the receipt from denying the plaintiff's title on the ground of the invalidity of the forged transfer. 5. MEETINGS AND VOTING.

1. ——— Meeting of Shareholders—Power of chairman—Poll—Time for taking a poll—Right of shareholder to vote at meeting—Articles of Association.* At common law, and where the taking of a poll is not governed by statute or special rule, the chairman of a meeting is the proper authority to fix the time and place for the taking of a poll; and a poll is properly and correctly taken immediately after the termination of the meeting. The same rule applies to meetings of registered companies, unless their articles prescribe some other procedure. The object of a poll in the case of a meeting of members of a registered company, as of other meetings, is to ascertain the true sense of the meeting, and is not to give absent members a further opportunity of voting, unless a contrary intention is expressly or impliedly to be gathered from the articles of the company. There is no presumption in construing a doubtful article in the latter sense. One of the articles of association of a joint stock company provided as follows:—"Every shareholder not disqualified by the preceding article or article No. 17, and who has been duly registered for three months previous to the general meeting, shall be entitled to vote at such meeting, and shall have one vote in respect of every share held by him. Held, that the meaning of the above article was merely that a shareholder should be registered for three months before he could vote, but that, having thus once acquired the right to vote, he had one vote in respect of every share held by him. It was not necessary under the article that every such share should have been held by him for three months. LILADHAR SHAMJI v. REHMUBHOY ALLANA I. L. R. 15 Bom. 164

5. MEETINGS AND VOTING—concld.

—Alteration of Memorandum of Association—Act XII of 1895. The right of a shareholder to vote by proxy depends on the contract between himself and his co-shareholders, and, where parties have a right depending on the contract between them and other parties, then all the requisitions of the contract as to the exercise of that right must be followed. Article 65 of the articles of association of the Bombay Burma Trading Corporation, Limited, provided as follows: "No person shall be appointed or have authority to act as a proxy who is not a shareholder in the company." Held, that the above article imposed two essential conditions, viz., that the proxy should be a shareholder at the date of his appointment and also at the date when he acted. By a power-of-attorney dated the 14th October, 1881, some of the shareholders in the above company authorized and appointed certain specified persons "and all persons who at any time during the continuance of these powers-of-attorney may be partners in the firm of Messrs. Wallace & Co., of Bombay, however that firm may be constituted . . . and in the absence from Bombay" of all the said persons, "then the person or persons for the time being holding the procuration of the said firm, and managing the said business, jointly and each of them severally" to vote as proxy for them at meetings of the above company. On the 20th March 1889, M became a shareholder in the company, and on the 1st April, 1889, he began to manage the business of Wallace & Co., holding its procuration. Under the above power he voted as proxy at meetings of the company held in 1902 for the purpose of altering the memorandum of association. Held, that, not having been a shareholder at the date of his appointment, as required by art. 65, he had not been validly appointed a proxy. It is not necessary that the actual name of the person appointed to be proxy should appear in the proxy paper. It suffices if he is designated by a description which fixes his identity at the date of appointment. In the matter of the BOMBAY BURMA TRADING CORPORATION, LIMITED (1902) I. L. R. 27 Bom. 113

from carrying into effect a resolution of directors —Injunction—Right to sue, survival of. By the memorandum and articles of association of the New Dhurumsey Poonjabhoy Spinning and Weaving Company, the plaintiff's firm of M F & Co. were appointed agents of the company for twenty-five years, and it was provided that they should have the general control and management of the company. Clause 98 of the articles provided that the said firm, as such agents, should have full power and authority, inter aliâ, to appiont and employ, in or for the purposes of the transaction and management of the affairs and business of the company, such solicitors as they should think proper. An agreement, dated 26th August 1874, was also entered into between the company and the partners in the firm of M F & Co., their executors, administrators, and assigns, for the time being constituting the partnership firm of M F & Co., whereby it was agreed that the said firm should be agents to the company for twenty-five years to buy and sell, etc., and particularly to exercise all the powers contained in cl. 98 of the articles of association. Messrs. C and B were duly appointed solicitors to the company, and acted as such for a considerable time. Merwanji Framji, one of the members of the said firm of M F & Co., died in the middle of March, 1876. The plaintiffs complained that G, one of the shareholders in the company, became desirous of ousting the plaintiffs from the position of agents of the company, and of becoming the managing director of the company; that, in July 1881, he procured his own election and that of certain nominees of his as directors of the company; and on the 8th August 1881 procured the passsing of a resolution at a board meeting to the effect that, as Messrs. C and B, the company's solicitors, were also the solicitors of the agents, it was desirable, for the interests of the company, that a change should be made, and that Messrs. H, C and L be appointed solicitors of the company. The plaintiffs alleged that the only object of passing the said resolution was to facilitate the design of G, of ousting the plaintiffs from their agency, and getting the management of the company for himself; that Messrs. H, C and L had been for a long time the solicitors of G, and had been advising him in his designs upon the company and upon the plaintiffs, and they contended that the resolution was a breach of the contract between the company and the plaintiffs, and a violation of the articles of association of the company. The plaintiffs sued G and two other directors of the company, and the company itself, and prayed for an injunction against the defendants to restrain them from committing any breach of the agreement of 26th August 1874, and in particular from carrying into effect the resolution appionting Messrs. H, C and L as solicitors for the company, and to restrain them from doing anything inconsistent with the memorandum and articles of association. The defendants contended that the contract of the 26th August 1874 had been determined by the death of Merwanji Framji, and that the powers conferred on the agents by cl. 98 of the articles were, subject to the general powers of management, vested in the directors by the articles, and that the case was not one in which an injunction could be granted. Held, that, having regard to the memorandum and articles of association, the contract was that the firm of M F & Co. for the time being should be the agents of the company for twenty-five years, and that the right to sue on the contract by its nature survived to the plaintiffs after the death of Merwanji Framji. Held, also, that there being no provision either in the articles of association or the agreement of 26th August 1874, that the power thereby conferred on the agents should be subject to the control or assent of the directors, there was no right in the directors to interfere with the agents in the exercise of their powers otherwise than as representing the company in virtue of their general powers of management. mon seal, shall be as valid and effectual as if the common seal were affixed thereto." By s. 54, "the company from time to time may appoint and remove such committees, persons or person as the company think fit to act on behalf of the company in India or elsewhere, with respect to the making, maintaining, managing, working, and using of the railways and other works of the company, and the control and conduct of any of the affairs in India or elsewhere of the company; and may delegate to any such committee, persons and person respectively all or any of the powers of the company and of the directors and officers thereof, which the company thinks it expedient that such committee, persons, and person respectively should possess for the purposes of his or their respective appointment." In January, 1867, E was the agent of the company in India, and he entered, it was alleged on their behalf, into a contract with the plaintiffs for sixty sets of iron-work for low-sided waggons. The plaintiffs' firm did not deal in iron-work, and they had to get the goods manufactured for them in England. The Board of Directors were at the time supplying iron-work for the company. There was nothing to show that E had been appointed under the provisions of s. 54 of the Act, 20 & 21 Vic., c. 160, nor was there any evidence of the extent of his power or authority. A specification of the contract differed from it, in that it stated the waggons to be covered waggons, and not low-sided waggons. The contract was not made under seal of the company, nor was the iron-work, the subject of the contract, ever accepted by the company. The defendants admitted that at the date of the alleged contract E was the agent of the company in India, but denied that his power extended to the making of such contract; they further stated that the contract, if entered into, had been afterwards cancelled. Held by PHEAR, J., that there was no evidence to show that E had authority to make the contract. The contract was one which E would have had power to make in writing only, under s. 97 of the Companies' Clauses Consolidation Act, had he been appointed under s. 54, 20 & 21 Vic., c. 160; but there was no proof of such appointment. Held on appeal, that assuming that E had been appointed under s. 54, with powers as large as in the ordinary course could be conferred upon him under that section, the contract was not one by which, acting as such agent, he had power to bind the company. The dividend of 10 per cent. per annum for two years is guaranteed to the shareholders." The prospectus was signed by A and M and another as directors, but the last took no active part. On the same day an agreement was signed by B, whereby he agreed, in consideration of R4,00,000 paid by A and M as therein mentioned, viz., R1,50,000 in paid-up shares of the company, to transfer to them, or Spence's Hotel Company, Limited, all his right, title, and interest in Spence's Hotel the good-will, furniture, outstandings, etc. The articles of association were dated 7th September 1863. A and M with two others formed the first board of directors. These directors, at an extraordinary meeting on August 1st, presented a report, which was adopted by the meeting, in which they said, "B has deposited with M and A security sufficient to ensure the payment of the 10 per cent. dividend guaranteed to him by the company." On the 5th December, 1863 a deed was executed, with the approval of the company's solicitors, by B on the one part and A and M on the other, which, after reciting that as security for the guarantee of the 10 per cent. dividend B had deposited with A and M 400 fully paid-up shares in the company, witnessed "that B would pay to A and M such sums as would be necessary to make up and pay half-yearly a dividend of 10 per cent. per annum: and that he constituted A and M his attorneys to sell the 400 shares and out of the proceeds to make good the yearly dividend of 10 per cent., and after such payment towards the guaranteed dividend, to hold the remaining shares or balance of money in trust for B absolutely." On the same day another deed, prepared by A's private solicitor, was executed by B on one part and A and M on the other, which, after reciting an agreement by B with A and M in April, that if they would assist him in forming such company, for the purchase of Spence's Hotel, and as they had in fact since formed, "he, B, would pay or secure to them, A and M, such fitting and proper remuneration for their trouble and risk as might be ultimately arranged;" and after reciting the first deed of 5th December, 1865, witnessed "that B covenanted with A and M that, notwithstanding the trust contained in the before-mentioned indenture whereby the surplus mentioned was declared to belong to B absolutely, the same surplus should belong to, and be the exclusive property of, A and M in equal shares: and that if the net profits of the Hotel Company should prove sufficient to pay the whole 10 per cent., then the whole of the 400 shares deposited with A and M should be retained by them for their own benefit in equal shares." This deed was undisclosed until the filing of their written statement by A and M in the present suit. There was no actual deposit of the 400 shares by B, but A and M respectively took 200 shares in their own names. R10,947-9-6 were paid by A and M to make up the deficit on the guaranteed dividend up to December 1864. Also, on the 5th December, 1863, B executed another deed, in which, after reciting that he had guaranteed that the outstanding debts of the hotel should realize, before May, 1865, R50,000 at least and that he had deposited with the company 50 fully paid-up shares as security for this guarantee, he, B, covenanted to pay any deficit, and appointed the company his attorneys to realize these shares, and out of the proceeds to pay themselves the deficit, and, subject to this, to hold the shares or the proceeds in trust for him, B. Fifty shares were received from B by A under the trusts of this deed. The outstandings fell short of the guaranteed amount by R19,255. In a suit by the company to recover the 400 shares and for an account of the profits of the same: Held, in the Court below and on appeal, that the suit was rightly brought by the company as plaintiffs. That A and M were the agents of the company to effect the purchase, and, as such, were bound to make for the company the best bargain which they reasonably could, and forbidden to obtain personal profit or benefit out of the matter. A and M, as regards the beneficial interest in the 400 shares, were trustees thereof for the benefit of the company from the date when that interest arose, and A and M were jointly as well as severally responsible for the 400 shares after satisfying the trust of the guarantee. In the lower Court it was decreed that A should make over the 50 shares or their value to the company, and account for the interim receipts and profits. A and M to account for the 400 shares at par value at least, and for dividends and profits thereon, including profits, if any, made by sale at a premium. A to account similarly for the 50 shares. B to make good his two guarantees after being allowed the benefit of the trust of the 400 shares. Held, also, on appeal, that A and M were trustees of the 400 shares for the benefit of the company, and jointly and severally responsible to make them good; and whatever benefit they took under the secret deed they must make good to the company. A to be responsible for the 50 shares (but in this respect, and in respect of the details of the accounts between the parties, the decree of the Court below slightly modified). 7. _____ Liability of Directors for negligence in management—Employment of agent by directors—Acquiescence of shareholders—Liability of estate of deceased director—Banker, who is a director. The plaintiffs company went into liquidation early in the year 1879, in consequence of losses sustained by the failure of Nursey Kessowji & Co., which firm had been the bankers of the said company. The said firm had stopped payment on the 26th December 1878, having then in its hands the sum of R8,80,250-14-1, belonging to the company. In this suit the official liquidators of the company sought to recover that sum from the defendants, who had been directors of the company, and a further sum of R2,48,670-14-0 as damages sustained by the company through the fraud and gross negligence of the defendants in permitting Nursey Kessowji, the agent of the company, to deal with certain shares for his own purposes. The first four defendants were the directors of the company; the fifth defendant was the assignee of the estate of Nursey Kessowji, whose firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co. had become insolvent. The plaintiffs company was registered on the 31st July 1878, and by the memorandum and articles of association the said Nursey Kessowji was appointed secretary, treasurer and agent of the company for a period of twenty-five years, upon the terms and conditions contained in an agreement annexed to the articles of association, whereby, it was (inter alia) provided that Nursey Kessowji should deposit with such banker or bankers, as the directors for the time being should appoint, all the moneys due from him to the said company and exceeding in amount at any one time the sum of R5,000. On the 6th August 1878, the directors of the company appointed the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co. to be the bankers of the company. It was further alleged by the plaintiffs that, immediately after the registration of the company, the directors and Nursey Kessowji began to borrow money upon the credit of the company far in excess of the legitimate wants of the company, and to pay over the money so borrowed to the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co., to be used by that firm in speculative business; that the said loans were obtained by the directors, not bonâ fide for the purposes of the company, but for the purposes of supplying funds to the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co., to enable it to carry on its business. At the end of the year 1878 the sum paid over by the directors to the firm of Nursey Kessowji had, by reason of such borrowing, amounted to the sum of R8,80,250. The plaintiffs alleged that the said loans were wholly unnecessary; and they charged the directors with gross negligence in raising the said loans or permitting them to be raised; and in permitting the money so borrowed to remain in the hands of the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co., to be applied by that firm to its own purposes. As to the R2,48,670-14-0, the plaintiffs alleged that certain unallotted shares of the total value of R3,93,750 had been left in the hands of the directors to be disposed of, the proceeds of which were to be applied in making certain payments due by the company; that instead of applying these shares to such purposes, the directors had filled up the said shares in the name of Nursey Kessowji, and authorized him to mortgage the same, in order to raise funds; that the said Nursey Kessowji had accordingly dealt with the said shares, and had applied the proceeds thereof to his own purposes. The plaintiffs charged the directors with fraud and gross negligence as to these shares, and claimed to recover R2,48,670-14-0 in respect thereof from the defendants. The defendants alleged that they had acted bonâ fide in all matters connected with the company; that they had always believed the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co. to be in a solvent condition; and had no reason to mistrust its management of the affairs of the company. One of the defendants (No. 3) died after the institution of the suit, and his sons were made parties. His representatives and Kessowji Naik (defendant No. 1), also claimed to set off against the plaintiffs' claim certain payments made by them as guarantors for the company. Held, (i) that one of the directors knew as a fact that the agent was not in a solvent condition; and that the other directors, in the circumstances of the case, ought to have ascertained his financial condition. (ii) Directors are responsible for the management of their company where, by the articles of association, the business is to be conducted by the board with the assistance of an agent. They cannot divest themselves of their responsibility by delegating the whole management to the agent, and abstaining from all enquiry. If he proves unfaithful under such circumstances, the liability is theirs, just as much as if they themselves had been unfaithful. (iii) That the directors had not used fair and reasonable diligence in the management of the company's affairs, and were liable to refund the money entrusted by them to the agent, Nursey Kessowji, without proper knowledge as to whether it was needed, and without any subsequent investigation of a serious character with respect to its disposal. Such conduct amounted to gross negligence. All the directors were equally responsible, as all attended the directors' meetings, and all gave the same blind sanction to every act and proposal of the agent. Held, also, that the estate of the deceased director was liable on the ground that the misfeasance of a director is a breach of trust, and not a mere personal default. A separate debt cannot be set off against a joint and several debt, and directors cannot set off money due from the company to them against sums which they may be ordered to refund to the liquidators. 8. ——— Power of Directors to deal with profits either by declaring a dividend or by appropriating to reserve fund—Power of Shareholders to interfere with declaration of dividend. The articles of association of the B Co. provided (a) that the directors might, with the sanction of the company in general meeting, declare a dividend; (b) that the directors might, before recommending any dividend, set aside out of the profits of the company such sum as they thought proper as a reserve fund to meet contingencies or for equalizing dividends, etc. The directors of the company added to the existing reserve fund a certain portion of the profits of the company for the year 1885, and thereby diminished the amount of dividend which they could otherwise have declared. Some of the shareholders disapproved of the course taken by the directors, and contended (i) that the shareholders of the company had a right by resolution to withdraw from the reserve fund a sum sufficient to enable the directors to declare a suitable dividend; (ii) that they had the right to direct the directors to declare a dividend greater or less than that recommended by the directors out of the amount standing to profit and loss, including the amount so withdrawn. Held, that under the articles of association the contention of the shareholders could not be sustained. The reserve fund consisted of profits, and by the articles the disposal of profits was expressly entrusted to the directors. To allow the shareholders to deal with it would be a direct contravention of the articles, which entrusted to the management of the directors all the business of the company. Nor could the shareholders decide the question as to the amount of dividend. By the articles they agreed that the directors should declare the dividend and only reserved to themselves the power to vote a dividend to which they objected. The remedy of the shareholders, if they were dissatisfied with the directors, was to remove them from office, or to alter the articles of association. ants 2,000 shares in the defendants' company at 15 per cent. premium, for which they paid in cash R3,20,000, and the defendants simultaneously agreed to repurchase, for future delivery and payment at a fixed time in July, the same 2,000 shares at 29½ per cent. premium. The contracts for the re-purchase were signed by three directors of the defendants' company, and on each was a memorandum, initialled by two of them, referring to a list of the "Share Receipts," delivered with the words "we are duly to examine and receive the same at the fixed time." One hundred and ninety letters of allotment in the names of several persons, and for various numbers of shares, endorsed by the original allottees, and initialled by one of the three directors, were, together with receipts for the first call, handed over to the persons who acted for the plaintiffs by the three directors of the defendants' company who made the contracts. In April the defendants' company made a fresh call, payable on the 4th May. A list of the names and addresses of the original allottees of what were called "shares in the market" (i e., other than those purchased by the company itself for cash, or held by it on mortgage) was made out from the date of settlement, and notices of forfeiture for non-payment of the call were sent by post. The original holders of the 190 letters of allotment were included in the list, but no notice was sent to the plaintiffs. On the 27th of May, all shares upon which the second call was not paid were declared to be forfeited for the benefit of the company. The defendants' company, as stated in the memorandum of association, was established among other objects for the purchase and sale of debentures, stocks, shares of joint-stock companies (including the shares of this company), and other securities, the making loans and advances on such securities as the directors of the company might think fit. Held, that the contracts for the purchase of the 2,000 shares being within the scope of the authority of the directors, the defendants were bound by them; that the defendants were bound to treat the plaintiffs as the holders of those shares, and to give them the notice required by the articles of association; and that they were not at liberty to give that notice to the original allottees, who, by the admission of the defendants, testified by the acts of their agents in making the contracts, had parted with the shares; that the shares were, consequently, not legally forfeited, and the defendants having refused to accept them, and they being then unsaleable, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the full price as damages. 10. _____ Purchases of Shares by individual Directors—Liability of directors—Absence of sanction of board. J S, an allottee of 25 shares in a company registered under Act XIX of 1857, signed the memorandum and articles of association, and paid the first call on the 28th September 1863, on which he sold the 25 shares to B P, the chairman of the company. The purchase by B P was made in pursuance of an agreement entered into between B P and P H, another director of the company, and two other persons who were members of the firm of B B & Co., and then managers of the company, which they accordingly jointly purchased, and subsequently divided among themselves, B P taking for himself two-fifths of the whole, including the 25 shares of J S. The fact of the joint purchase was not communicated to the other directors of the company, nor was there any evidence to show that their attention had been called to certain entries in the books of the company relating to B P having paid the second call on his two-fifths of the joint purchase. J S got no notice to pay the second call, and never applied for or obtained a certificate for the 25 shares; but such a certificate was obtained by B P on the 10th of October 1864, certifying that J S was the shareholder. J S had signed a blank form of transfer and a blank form of request to the directors to transfer, which were undated and without particulars; but B P never executed the transfer as transferree, and the shares never were transferred to his name on the register, nor was the sale to him ever brought to the notice of the directors as a board or to any of his partners, of any portion of the 2,800 shares; and the articles of association required the consent in writing of the directors to every transfer. On application by J S that his name should be removed from the list of contributories as framed by the official liquidator, and the names of B P's trustees under Act XXVIII of 1865 substituted therein in respect of the 25 shares: Held, that J S was not exonerated, under the circumstances, from the duty of obeying the articles of association and the provision of Act XIX of 1857; that the act of an individual director in his private capacity ought not to bind the board, which had never authorized or ratified his conduct; and that the official liquidator, as representing the body of shareholders, rightly insisted upon keeping J S's name on the list of shareholders. In re EAST INDIAN TRADING AND BANKING COMPANY. 11. _____ Purchase by Company of its own Shares—Omission to register transfer—Contributories. A company registered under Act XIX of 1857, and enabled by its memorandum of association to purchase its own shares, purchased seven thousand of them which were in scrip, share certificates having never been issued in respect of them. The letters of allotment indorsed by the allottees and receipts for the first call were made over, at the time of purchase, to the company. No transfers, however, were executed by the allottees, nor were the shares registered by the company in their own name, but they continued to stand in the names of the allottees. Two thousand of the seven thousand shares had been re-sold by the company; and the remaining five thousand were mentioned in a list, kept by the company, of shares purchased by them. On application to the allottees to have their names removed from the list of contributories, as framed by the official liquidator: Held, that the company, through its directors, having, as well by the act of purchase as by their subsequent conduct, treated themselves as the owners of the shares, could not be permitted to take advantage of their own neglect, or that of their officers, in not registering the shares in the name of the company, and that the name of the company therefore be substituted as holders of the shares. In re MERCANTILE CREDIT AND FINANCIAL ASSOCIATION. Ex parte DALVI

12. ——— Purchase of Shares in other Companies and their own shares—Trustee shareholders—Parties—Acquiescence. The purchase by the directors of a joint-stock company, on behalf of the company, of shares in other joint-stock companies, unless expressly authorized by the memorandum of association, is ultra vires. A joint-stock company, even though it be empowered by its memorandum of association to deal in the shares of other companies, is not thereby empowered to deal in its own shares, and a purchase by the directors of the company of its own shares, on behalf of the company, is therefore, under such circumstances, ultra vires. A sharer in a joint-stock company can maintain an action against the directors of such company to compel them to restore to the company funds of the company that have by them been employed in transactions that the directors have no authority to enter into, without making the company a party to the suit. Where a shareholder purchased shares in a joint-stock company, knowing at the time that similar companies were in the habit of dealing in their own shares and those of other companies, and believing that the company in question adopted the same practice, but made no enquiry to ascertain whether or not such was the case, nor made any objections to such dealings of the company until it was discovered they had resulted in loss, it was held that he had, by his own conduct, lost his right to hold the directors personally liable in respect of such dealing, and the result was held to be the same whether the said shareholder was beneficially entitled to his shares, or merely a trustee of them for others. At the time of issuing the prospectus there were no other members of the company besides the directors. Some of the material statements in the prospectus were untrue to the knowledge of the directors. The prospectus, which was published on the 23rd June 1865, contained the following statements: "Capital fifty lakhs of rupees in 10,000 shares, of R500 each with power to increase. R50 per share to be paid on application, and the balance by calls of R100 each to be made within not less than three months of each other. The first call will not be made within less than three months after the closing of the share list. Of these 10,000 shares, 6,000 will be reserved for England, but the operations of the company will not be delayed until they can be sent home and taken up." On 18th July 1865, the company advertised that "all the Indian shares being subscribed for, the share list is now closed, and the letters of allotment will be issued at an early date. In truth, not half the number of "Indian shares" were at any time subscribed for. On the 22nd November, 1895, the directors resolved that "a call of R100 per share be made upon the shareholders, payable at the National Bank of India on the 15th December proximo." R G received notice of the call but did not pay it. On 18th April, 1866, the directors desired the secretary to write to shareholders who had not paid their first call in full, asking them to do so at once. R G, who had not signed the articles of association, on receipt of notice from the secretary, requested to be allowed to withdraw his money, forfeiting one-fifth, or to be allowed to hold five shares instead of fifty. The request was refused by the directors, who on 18th July, 1866, passed a further resolution that the defaulters, among whom R G was named, "have notice sent them that unless the amount of the calls due on their respective shares, together with interest thereon at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum from the 15th December 1865, be paid into the National Bank of India, Calcutta, on or before the 7th August 1866, legal proceedings will be adopted against them for the recovery without further notice." R G, on receiving notice of this resolution, wrote, through his attorneys, informing the directors that he would apply to the High Court to have his name removed from the register of shareholders. The directors thereupon declared the shares to be forfeited. On 25th September 1866, a resolution to wind up the company voluntarily was passed at a general meeting of the shareholders, and was afterwards confirmed. In the course of the winding up, the liquidator applied to the Court, under s. 154, Act X of 1866, to determine whether R G was entitled to a refund of the deposit money paid by him on the fifty shares allotted to him in the company, or whether he was liable to pay, as a contributory, the call in respect of his shares made before the shares were forfeited. It was not until the hearing of this application that R G became aware of the facts which proved that the directors had published material statements which they knew to be untrue. Held, that the issuing of a prospectus is an act comprised within the term "management and conduct of the company's business." In a suit by the plaintiff company to recover money due upon certain shares taken by and allotted to the defendant, the defendant in his pleadings set out and relied upon certain misrepresentations said to have been orally made by one B as the agent of the plaintiff company. At the trial he also sought to rely upon a misrepresentation in the prospectus of the company. Held, that the defendant ought to be pinned down to the misrepresentations alleged in his pleadings and upon the faith of which he says he acted. It is not open to him to go into the question of misrepresentation in the prospectus. That the prospectus, although issued by the promoters before the formation of the company, was the basis of the contract between the company and the defendant for the allotment of the shares, and if the misstatements therein alleged by the defendant were relied upon by him and were material to the contract, the defendant would be entitled to rescind the contract and to repudiate the shares in the absence of laches or conduct on his part which would deprive him of that right. *In re Metropolitan Coal Consumers' Association. as they deem best, and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any money so borrowed with interests, to make and carry into effect any arrangement which they may deem expedient by conveying or assigning any property of the company to trustees or otherwise." Held, that, though power to borrow money on bills of exchange was not specifically given, yet bills of exchange being in many respects analogous to promissory notes, and promissory notes having been specifically mentioned in the article, the power to raise money by an equally well-known and recognized mode,—viz., by drawing, endorsing, or accepting bills of exchange,—must be deemed to be included in the general words "or in such other manner as they deem best." Three of the directors of the above company, one of whom was also the secretary, treasurer, and agent of the company, drew a bill in favour of S in the following form: "sixty days after the date of this first of exchange (second and third of the same tenor and date not being paid) pay to the order of S the sum of rupees two lakhs only, value received, and place to account of G P, K N, N K, secretary, treasurer, and agent. The New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, directors." The bill was endorsed by S to the bank of Bombay, was duly presented for payment to the drawee, and protested for non-payment. Subsequently to the date of the drawing of the bill, the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, went into liquidation. The Bank of Bombay claimed as endorsees of the bill to prove against the company as drawers. Held, that, assuming that companies under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) are by s. 47 liable on bills of exchange drawn on their behalf, or on account of persons acting under their authority, the bill in question was not such a bill. Whether or not a note or bill, must, on the face of it, express that it is made, accepted, or endorsed "by or on behalf or on account of" the company, yet there must be on the face of it that which shows that it was so made, accepted, or endorsed, and which excludes the inference that it was made, accepted, or endorsed by or on behalf or on account of any other person. A bill or note may be in a certain sense on behalf of or on account of a company, though there is upon its face no reference to the company, even in the form of a description of the persons who actually make, accept, or endorse as being directors or secretary. As between such persons and the company, such a bill or note may well be on behalf or on account of the company, but it is not therefore so between the company and third parties. So far as third parties are concerned, a company under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) can be made liable on a bill or note only when such bill or note on the face of it expresses that it was made, accepted, or endorsed by, or on behalf or on account of, the company, or where that fact appears by necessary inference from what the face of the instrument itself shows. The addition to the signatures of individuals as makers, drawers, acceptors or endorsers of notes or bills, of their description as director or directors, secretary, treasurer, and agent of a certain company, is not considered to raise such inference, as it does not exclude the supposition that, though described as directors, etc., they intended to make themselves personally liable to holders of the instrument, though as between themselves and the company they may be entitled to be indemnified for anything they may have paid on account of the company in respect of such notes or bills. Dutton v. Marsh, *L. and ship to England and carry on such local trade as may seem profitable." The company went into liquidation in 1867. In April, 1890, the present suit was filed against the defendant, who had been one of the directors of the company, and it was alleged that after the formation of the company the defendant and his co-directors had carried on speculative dealings in shares of other companies and had used the funds of the company for this purpose, which was not warranted by the memorandum of association. The plaintiffs alleged that their dealings which were duly set forth in their plaint, had resulted in a heavy loss to the company, and they now sought to recover from the defendant the sum of R3,37,700-13-5. There had been originally five directors of the company, but at the date of suit two of them were dead, and two had become insolvent. The plaint was filed in April 1890. Held, (affirming the decision of PARSONS, J., (i) that the memorandum of association did not justify the directors of the company in dealing in shares of other companies, and that the transactions complained of by the plaintiffs were ultra vires; (ii) that the directors were liable to replace the moneys of the company which they had misapplied by applying them to a purpose which was ultra vires. Soon after the establishment of the company, the directors were induced to take a share in, and become liable for the cost of, a mill for husking rice, which it was intended to establish by a separate company; and a considerable sum was advanced out of the funds of the company for the building of the mill and for machinery, etc. The undertaking failed, and the directors, to avoid losing the advances of the company, resolved to take over the mill, and carry it on as the property of the company. They accordingly purchased a large quantity of rice which was husked at the mill, and consigned to several firms in England. PM & Co. were appointed agents of the company in Calcutta for the purpose of shipping the rice, under letters from the directors guaranteeing that the company would pay at maturity any re-drafts which might be drawn on P M & Co. as their agents in respect of the shipments. by P M & Co. on the firms to which the respective consignments were made, and these bills were sold in the ordinary course of business in Calcutta, P M & Co. realizing the proceeds for the benefit of the company. Those bills were honoured by the respective consignees. The rice was sold in England at a considerable loss, and re-drafts for the deficiency were drawn on P M & Co. or on the company. The company went into liquidation during these transactions. Some of these re-drafts had been accepted by the company, and others merely registered by the liquidators as claims against the company. Claims were now made on the company by the drawees or endorsees of these re-drafts, but the liquidators declined to pay them, stating that the proceedings in connection with the consignments of rice were not authorized by the memorandum and articles of association of the company, and that therefore the company was not liable for any losses in respect of such consignments. Held, that trading in rice was a transaction ultra vires of the company; the directors therefore could not bind the company, and the consignees could not recover in respect of the shipments. The company was not liable on the re-drafts; it had no power to issue bills of exchange or to accept the re-drafts, and therefore the holders of those which had been in fact accepted were in no better position than the holders of those which had not been accepted. In the matter of PORT CANNING COMPANY . . . . 7 B. Where a note, which had been taken by the company as a security from two judgment-debtors of the company, was endorsed by the company to a third party, and discounted by him, and was on the due date, not having been taken up by the makers, renewed by the company: Held, that such negotiation of the note by the company was within the ordinary course of the business of the company. Principal and Agent—Undisclosed Principal—Election—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 230, 233, 234. By the memorandum and articles of association of the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company N K was appointed secretary, treasurer, and agent of the company, with power to raise or borrow from time to time, in the name or otherwise on behalf of the company, such sums of money as he might think expedient by bonds, debentures, or promissory notes, or in such other manner as he might deem best; and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any money so borrowed, to make any arrangement which he might deem expedient by conveying or assigning away property of the company to trustees or otherwise. N K was also secretary, treasurer, and agent of three other mill companies in Bombay. On the 31st October 1878, the directors passed the following resolution :—"That the unallotted shares be filled up in the name of Nursey Kessowji, Esq., secretary, treasurer, and agent, who is empowered to mortgage them at a fair rate of interest to enable him to obtain funds for the use of the company. On the 11th November 1878, P advanced a sum of R1,00,500 upon the terms contained in a Gujarati writing of that date, and signed by N K. In this document N K acknowledged the receipt of the money, for which 335 shares in the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company were duly handed over as security, and he agreed to repay it within three months. The last clause in the agreement stated that it was "duly agreed to and approved by him (N K) and his heirs and representatives." As an additional security, P, when advancing the loan, obtained from K N (father of N K) a guarantee in the following terms :—"To Thukur Purmanundass Jivandass. Written by Sha Kessowji Naik. To wit,—This day Sha Nursey Kessowji has received from you R1,00,500, namely, one lakh and five hundred, having deposited by way of security 335, namely, three hundred and thirty-five 'shares' of 'The New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited.' If your said money cannot be paid with interest by the expiration of the time, and you should sustain any kind of loss in (respect of) that, I am duly to pay the same. As to that, I am not to raise any obstacle or objection. In case it should be necessary, I am to fill up and duly deliver to you an 'indemnity bond' on stamped paper through your vakil (solicitor). This writing is duly agreed to and approved by me and my heirs and representatives. Bombay, the 11th of November in the English year 1878." On the evening of the day on which the loan was made,—viz., 11th November 1878,—but without the knowledge of K N, it was agreed between N K and P that the time for the repayment of the loan should be extended to six months. In December 1878 N K became insolvent, and on 28th December 1878 a petition was presented to the High Court to wind up the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company. On the 30th December P, through his solicitors, wrote a letter to the company, stating that N K had obtained a loan from him of R1,00,500 on behalf of the company, and enquiring whether the fact appeared in the company's books. To this letter he received a reply signed by "K N, director," stating that the loan appeared in the books in P's name. On the 17th January 1879, an order was made for the winding up of the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, and on the 4th February 1879 P gave notice on the official liquidators of the company of his claim against the company for the money advanced by him on the 11th November 1878. In March 1869 he filed a suit against K N to enforce his guarantee, but was unsuccessful, the Court holding that, by extending the period of the loan to six months, the agreement of the 11th November 1878 had been materially varied without K N's knowledge, and that K N was consequently discharged. On the 24th April 1879, P filed his affidavit in support of his claim against the company. The company resisted the claim. Held, (i) that the directors had power, under the memorandum and articles of association, to authorize N K to borrow money on behalf of the company, and that they had done so, and with that object had entrusted him with the unallotted shares. (ii) That when P advanced the loan to N K, he was led to believe that N K was obtaining it on behalf of the four mill companies of which he was secretary, treasurer and agent, but that P was not aware and was not informed for which of the said companies the loan was obtained, and that the money was in fact advanced to N as to an agent acting on behalf of an undisclosed principal. (iii) That P, when he discovered that the money was obtained for the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, was entitled to claim against the company and to rank as a creditor of the company for the amount advanced to N K with interest from the date of the loan,—viz., 11th November 1878—to the date of the presentation of the petition to wind up the company. 24. ——— Borrowing in excess of power in Articles of Association—Ratification. Under the articles of association of a limited company, the directors had power, from time to time, as they might see fit, without any previous consent of the shareholders, to borrow any sum of money not exceeding R50,000, on the bill, bond, note, or other security of the company, upon such terms as they might think proper; and had power, with the sanction of a special resolution of the company previously obtained at a general meeting, to borrow any sum of money not exceeding in the whole, together with the R50,000, the sum of R1,00,000. K advanced sums of money to the company amounting in 1879 to over R80,000. No previous sanction was given to any of these advances. On the 4th October 1879, an extraordinary general meeting of shareholders was held, at which a resolution was passed sanctioning a mortgage to K of the whole of the company's property, except a certain garden, to secure the payment of a sum, not exceeding R1,00,000, for advances already made and to be made, with interest at 7 per cent. This resolution was confirmed on the 16th of October, and the mortgage was executed on the 22nd of December 1879. Subsequently the company was ordered to be wound up, and K advanced a claim for R1,20,787. Held, that there is a distinction between loans which a company is empowered to raise under its borrowing powers, and debts which, in meeting its current liabilities and in the actual carrying on of its affairs, the company, or its agents on its behalf, have contracted; and that the advances made by K did not amount to a borrowing within the meaning of the articles of association. *In re Cefn Cilcen Mining Company, L. 5. _____ Winding up under supervision of Court—Order for Dissolution of Company—Voluntary winding up—Official liquidator—Companies Act, VI of 1882. As a general rule, a winding-up of a company under supervision of the Court should be terminated in the same way as a purely voluntary winding-up,—i.e., under ss. 186 and 187 of the Companies Act, VI of 1882. Although, under s. 195 of the Companies Act, VI of 1882, the Court has power to make an order dissolving a company in the course of winding-up, subject to its supervision, such cases must be exceptional and can only occur when the Court has deemed it proper to carry on the winding-up under supervision in a manner such as clearly to approximate to a winding-up by the Court. The ordinary rule is the other way, and it is reasonable that it should be so; as generally, a winding-up under supervision is not conducted under so intimate a control of the Court as to put the Court in a position to judge of the correctness of the liquidators' action and the completeness of the winding-up. So far as the Court does not interfere, a winding-up under supervision remains essentially a voluntary winding-up; but the Court in a winding-up under supervision has full authority to interfere and to exercise to any extent the power which it might have exercised if an order had been made for winding up the company by the Court. The words "official liquidator" in s. 160 of the Companies Act, VI of 1882, do not include the liquidators in a winding-up under supervision. the said schedule, and the present suit was brought to recover the sum therein appearing as due from him to the bank, viz., R3,900. The defendant denied that he had ever held shares in the plaintiffs' bank, or that he ever had notice of any of the proceedings in the winding-up. At the trial it appeared that all the various orders and notices to shareholders made in the winding-up of the bank prior to the balance order of the 5th June 1879 had been sent by post to the defendant, addressed to him at No. 36 Fanasvadi, and were all returned undelivered. It was proved that he had never resided there; but that his brother had a place of business there, and that the defendant used occasionally to go there for the purpose of attending to his brother's business. It further appeared that the residence of the defendant, as given in the register of shareholders, was Loharchall, and not 36, Fanasvadi. Held, that the notices, orders, etc., prior to the order of 5th June 1879, were not so served as to make the defendant subject to that final order; that the obligation to obey the command of the Court of Chancery contained therein had not arisen as against the defendant, and that, consequently, the present suit must fail. It is a leading principle of English law, always understood except when expressly excluded, that a person proceeded against in a Court must have due notice of the proceeding; failing such notice, he is entitled to protection if the judgment or order obtained in his absence is made the ground of a suit in any Court governed by English principles. The Court of Chancery in England had not in this case so called the defendant before it as to enable it in his absence to pronounce a definitive order against him or to bind him in the Court of his domicile, although he was included in the order of the Court of Chancery. The fact that the defendant frequently attended his brother's place of business at No. 36, Fanasvadi, was not sufficient to make that place his "last known address." If there had been evidence that he had used No. 36, Fanasvadi, as an address for receiving letters, that might probably have been sufficient. It would then have been known as his address at least as an address. The address or residence of a member of a company entered in the register of share-holders, although sufficiently ascertained for the purpose of communication from the company, is not, therefore, ascertained for a service of legal proceedings. For the purpose of such service, care must be taken to find out the last known place of abode of the alleged contributory, and to effect the substituted service there. Joint Stock Company registered under the English Companies Act, 1862, and the winding-up order was made by the Court of Chancery in England on the 20th July 1866. By a subsequent order made on the winding-up it was ordered by the said Court that service of notices, etc., of the various proceedings might be effected on contributories, being past members, by posting the same either in England or in Bombay duly addressed to the last known address or place of abode of such contributories. The Court of Chancery, on the 16th December 1878, made an order for a call of £10 per share upon the contributories, and on the 5th June 1879, the final balance order was made by the Court. This suit was brought to recover the sum of R754-7-0 alleged to be due by the defendant as a contributory in the B list under the said balance order. The plaintiff was an assignee of the bank. The defendant who resided at Sumari, in the Surat District, denied that he was a shareholder in the bank, and alleged that he had no notice of the various proceedings in the winding up. At the hearing it was proved that one of the notices, which had been posted in Bombay addressed to the defendant at Sumari, in the Surat District, viz., a notice of the intended application for a call of £10 per share, dated the 27th August 1878, had been returned undelivered to the Dead Letter Office, having been carelessly addressed. No further steps were taken to serve it on the defendant. Held, that the defendant, not having received any summons or notice to attend the hearing of the application for a call of £10 per share, was not liable to the call made in his absence. Courts in British India, when called upon to give effect to a foreign judgment, should insist upon a strict proof of the validity and service of summonses and other processes alleged to have emanated from a foreign Court, and made a foundation for a liability to be enforced here by Courts that have no cognizance of the case on its merits. Rousillon v. Rousillon, *L. 17. ——— Contributories—Shareholders—Notice of allotment—Secondary evidence of notice—Press-copy letter—Evidence of original letter having been properly addressed and posted—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 16, 114—Register of members—Presumption of membership—Companies Act (VI of 1882), ss. 45, 47, 60, 61, Sch. I, Table A (97). Upon the settlement of the list of contributories to the assets of a company in course of liquidation under the Indian Companies Act, one of the persons named in the list denied that he had agreed to become a member of the company or was liable as a contributory. The District Court admitted as evidence on behalf of the official liquidator a press-copy of a letter addressed to the objector for the purpose of proving that a notice of allotment of shares was duly communicated. No notice to the objector to produce the original letter appeared on the record; but at the hearing of the appeal it was alleged by the official liquidator and denied by the objector that such notice had been in fact given. There was no evidence as to the posting of the original letter or of the address which it bore; but the press-copy was contained in the press-copy letter book of the company, and was proved to be in the handwriting of a deceased secretary of the company, whose duty it was to despatch letters after they had been copied in the letter-book. The objector denied having received the letter or any notice of allotment. Held, that the Court should not draw the inference that the original letter was properly addressed or posted; that the press-copy letter was inadmissible in evidence; and that there was no proof of the communication of any notice of allotment. The evidence adduced by the official liquidator to show that the defendant was a member of the company and so liable as a contributory consisted of the register of members, a letter written by the objector, a reply thereto written by a managing director of the company, and the oral testimony of the director himself. The objector adduced no evidence at all. Held, that the official liquidator might, if he had chosen to do so, have put the register in evidence, and waited, before giving any further evidence until the objector had given some to displace the primâ facie evidence afforded by the register, or to impugn the character of the register; but his case must be looked at as a whole, and having taken the line which he did, he must take the consequences of his other evidence contradicting or impugning the primâ facie evidence of the register, and notwithstanding that the objector gave no evidence, the register was not conclusive. 19. ——— Suit against Contributory on the B list—Plea of discharge in insolvency —Foreign judgment—Balance order—Insolvency Act (Stat. 11 & 12 Vic., c. 21), s. 61. The plaintiffs, who were an English joint stock company registered under the English Companies Act, 1862, sued the defendant, as a past member of the bank, upon a balance order of the High Court of Justice in England, dated 24th February 1881. The bank was in liquidation under a winding up order made on 20th July 1866. The defendant pleaded discharge by insolvency, and it appeared that he had filed his schedule on 15th January 1873, and had obtained his discharge under s. 60 of the Indian Insolvency Act (Stat. 11 & 12 Vic., c. 21) on the 15th July 1874. Held (but doubting), that the question of the defendant's liability or non-liability to the claim made against him as a contributory could not be raised in this suit, and that on formal evidence being given by the plaintiffs, judgment must go against the defendant. 20. ——— Transfer of Assets to new Company—Companies Act (X of 1866), ss. 149, 154, and 175—Right of creditors of transferring company—Dissentient shareholder—Sanction of Court. By special resolutions passed on the 3rd July 1878 and confirmed on 31st July 1878, the shareholders of the Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company (Limited) resolved that the company should be wound up voluntarily, and that all the assets of the said company should be transferred by the liquidators to a new company then intended shortly to be formed and registered in Bombay, called the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, and that the liquidators should receive as the consideration for such transfer certain fully paid-up shares in the new company for distribution among the shareholders of the old company. The said transfer was to be made subject to a covenant on the part of the new company to perform all the agreements and to discharge all the debts and liabilities of the old company. The new company was duly formed and registered on the same day (31st July 1878) and the specified number of shares was delivered to the liquidators of the old company for distribution among the shareholders of the old company. Two of the said shareholders, J and H, the holders of 50 and 20 shares respectively, dissented from the special resolutions in the manner provided by s. 175 of the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866), and required the liquidators to purchase their interests. The matter was thereupon referred to arbitration. In the case of H an award was made and filed, but further proceedings were stayed by order of Court. In the case of J no award was made and he brought a suit which was still pending against both the old and new companies and the liquidators to recover R75,000, the alleged value of his shares. In pursuance of the resolution, the liquidators of the old company handed over the assets to the new company, but no formal grant or assignment, in writing, of the said assets was executed. They remained in its possession until the 17th January 1879, on which day the said new company was ordered to be wound up by the Court. The petitioners were appointed official liquidators, and as such were in possession of the assets at the date of the petition. No property whatever remained in the hands of the old company, except the shares remaining to be distributed among the dissentient shareholders. The new company had discharged debts of the old company to the amount of six lakhs of rupees, and there remained debts of over three lakhs due by the old company. Until after the new company had become insolvent, no creditor of the old company had expressed his dissent from the above special resolution, or had refused to accept the new company as his debtor. On 1st March 1879 the voluntary winding-up of the old company was directed to be continued as a winding-up under the supervision of the Court. The official liquidators of the new company now presented a petition, praying that the above special resolutions might be sanctioned by the Court. Certain unsatisfied creditors of the old company opposed the petition, insisting that the sanction should be refused, except upon the condition that they should be paid in full out of the property of the old company. The two dissentient shareholders, J and H, also objected to the sanction being given unless provisions were made for the satisfaction of their claims as soon as they should be ascertained. Held, that, under the special circumstances of the case, the sanction of the Court should be given to the resolutions, but subject to the value of the interest of the two dissenting shareholders being paid or adequately secured. Such order to be without prejudice to any question between the creditors of the old company and the dissenting shareholders. In re FLEMING SPINNING AND WEAVING COMPANY . I. L. R. 3 Bom. 299

S. & W. Co.* (Ld.), in the course of being wound up voluntarily, proposed to transfer its business and property to another company to be called the New F. S. & W. Co., and passed a special resolution on the 3rd July, confirmed on the 31st July 1878, under s. 175 of the Indian Companies Act, X of 1866, empowering the liquidators to carry out the transfer. J, a dissentient member of the old company, sent on the 5th August, and, therefore, within the seven days provided by that section, a notice expressing his dissent from such resolution; but the notice did not contain the requisition provided for by the latter part of that section requiring the liquidators either to abstain from carrying the resolution into effect or to purchase his interest in the company. The liquidators, however, replied on the 23rd August by offering to purchase J's shares which offer being refused, they and J entered into an agreement on the 12th October, "in pursuance of the provisions in that behalf contained in the Indian Companies Act, X of 1866," for the reference of "the dispute as to the price to be paid to the said J for his shares in the F. S. & W. Co. (Ld.)" to two arbitrators and an umpire to be named by them. The agreement fixed a short date for the making of the award. The arbitration was entered on, but the time limited for the award having expired without any award being made, J filed a suit, on the 28th of December, to recover the value of his shares. On the 1st March 1879, the winding-up of the F. S. & W. Co. was ordered to be continued under the supervision of the Court, and J's suit was at the same time stayed. J then endeavoured to have the arbitration revived. In this he was unsuccessful, the submission not having been filed in Court, and the arbitration being held to be already dead and past revival. The suit subsequently came on to be heard and was dismissed, on the ground that s. 175 of the Act made an arbitration and an award a condition precedent to any suit. J then called on the liquidators to nominate an arbitrator, and enter on a fresh arbitration. This the liquidators doubted whether they could legally do, and therefore they now petitioned the Court for its order and direction in the matter. They submitted that J had never acquired the rights of a dissentient shareholder under s. 175 by reason of the insufficiency of his notice, and that, in any case, one arbitration having been already entered upon and determined, J could not now call upon them to enter on a fresh arbitration. Held, following In re Union Bank of Kingston-upon-Hull, L. R. 13 Ch. D. 808, that J's notice of dissent of the 5th August was in itself an insufficient notice under the provisions of s. 175 of the Indian Companies Act, 1866, inasmuch as it did not contain the requisition to the liquidators required by the latter part of that section, and that, consequently, it was open to the liquidators to have treated J as disentitled to the rights of a dissentient shareholder under that section. Held, further, that it was within the power of the liquidators to waive such informality in the notice on behalf of the company, and that they had in fact done so, and that J was consequently entitled to the rights of a dissentient shareholder under that section. Held, further, that the rights of a dissentient shareholder, under that and the following sections, who had elected to have the value of his interest in the company decided by arbitration, were not limited to a single reference to arbitration, and were not extinguished by the expiry without an award being made, of the time fixed by such reference for making an award; that in such a

34. ——— Claims on Assets—Precedence of judgment-debt due to Secretary of State—Stay of execution of judgment-debt. A judgment-debt due to the Crown is in Bombay entitled to the same precedence in execution as a like judgment-debt in England, if there be no special legislative provision affecting that right in the particular case. Under similar circumstances, a judgment-debt due to the Secretary of State in Council for India is in Bombay entitled to the like precedence, and the reason is that such debt is vested in the Crown, and when realized falls into the State treasury. The nature of the cause of action in respect of which the judgment was recovered does not affect the right of the Crown or of the Secretary of State in Council for India to priority. As the Crown is not, either expressly or by implication, bound by the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866), and as an order made under that Act for the winding-up of a company does not work any alteration of property, such an order does not enable the Court to stay the execution of a judgment-debt due to the Crown or to the Secretary of State for India in Council. The probable use of land in the most advantageous way in accordance with the use already made of neighbouring lands leads to speculative advance in prices to which regard should be paid. The utility of land is an element for consideration in estimating its value, that is, the utility which may be calculated by a prudent business man. Premchand Burral v. Collector of Calcutta, I. L. R. 2 Calc. 103; Hooghly Mills Company v. Secretary of State, unreported; Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs v. Charlesworth Pilling & Co., L. R. 28 I. A. 121; Rajendra Nath Banerjee v. Secretary of State, I. L. R. 32 Calc. 343, referred to. The market value of the acquired lands is also to be ascertained from recent instances of sales in the same or in the adjoining localities, and from the average rental of these and similar lands in the vicinity. S. 21 of the Act authorizes the Judge to confine his inquiry into valuation to the interests of persons affected by the Collector's reference, but the section must mean the admitted interests. If there is any dispute as to the relative value of such interests, the Judge should determine the total amount payable for the land leaving the question of apportionment to be decided in a separate proceeding. The general demand for land, and the consequent reflex action on the prices of all classes of lands, is a factor in the calculation of the market value of lands under acquisition. The onus probandi varies according to the probative value of Collector's inquiry under s. 11 of the Act, and if he makes no inquiry or gives no reasons for his valuation, the onus on the claimant is nominal, and the Special Judge must decide on the weight of evidence. And on appeal by the Government it was contended that in doing so the High Court had wrongly disregarded the great experience of the Special Judge and had given undue weight as evidence to the decision in the former case, in which it was said that the land was so essentially different in area, locality, and special and peculiar advantages, that no deduction could be drawn from the amount awarded for it which would be of any use in estimating the value of the land now in dispute. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee holding that no good ground for such a contention had been established, dismissed the appeal. 8. ——— Compulsory Acquisition of land—Method of hypothetical development for fixing value of land to be acquired—Charges as to the costs of the speculator—Compensation based on sales of lands into suitable building sites—The two methods employed in conjunction and producing the same result. The method of hypothetical development is open to the objection that it involves or presupposes the intermediation of a third person, called the speculator or exploitor that is to say, a person who purchases the land wholesale from the claimant in order afterwards to sell it retail for building purposes. The value of the land to the owner is what must be regarded, and that is the price which it will fetch if disposed of on most profitable terms. The owner is not to be deprived of the most advantageous way of selling his land by reason of the fact that it is subject to immediate acquisition. If the sale of the land in building sites is impossible except through the speculator then, no doubt, allowance will have to be made for the profits, costs and other charges of the speculator. But the claimant is not to be debited with these expenses unless the introduction of the speculator is a commercial necessity. And there is no necessary reason why the claimant should be driven to have recourse to the speculator for a business which he can do for himself. When compensation is fixed on the general principle of a sale of the land split up into parcels suitable for building, it is not only necessary but inappropriate to make a special deduction on account of the small area marked off for the roadway. Where the method of hypothetical development is employed for assessing compensation in conjunction with the method of ascertaining the present value of the land by reference to the prices realised by the sale of neighbouring lands, and the consequence is that the two methods lead to very much the same result, it follows not only that the result is entitled to so much the greater degree of confidence but also that the method of hypothetical development is itself corroborated. In the method of arriving at a valuation of land by reference to prices realised by sales of neighbouring lands, it is plain that no evidence of former sales can be obtained which shall be precisely parallel in all its circumstances to the sale of the particular land in question. Differences small or great exist in various conditions, and what precise allowance should be made for these differences is not a matter which can be reduced to any hard and fast rule. 17. ——— Joint Fine—Fine and Compensation. Proceedings under s. 22 of the Cattle Trespass Act are quasi-civil in their nature; a Magistrate being at liberty under that section to assess and enforce, in a summary manner, compensation for an injury for which a civil action might be brought. An order, therefore, for the payment of a sum as fine and compensation, passed against two persons under that section, which does not specify the proportionate amount payable by each, is good. In the matter of NEAZ v. MONSOR

1. CIVIL CASES—concld.

18. ——— Illegal Seizure of Cattle—Fine—Imprisonment in default of payment of compensation—Criminal Procedure Code (1882), s. 386. An accused was found to have loosed the complainant's cattle at night from a cattle pen, and to have driven them to the pound with the object of sharing with the pound-keeper the fees to be paid for their release. He was proceeded against under Act I of 1871, and under the provisions of s. 22 ordered to pay compensation to the complainant, and in default to undergo one month's rigorous imprisonment. Held, that s. 22 was inapplicable to the facts of the case, and that the order must be set aside. On the facts it was not a case of "illegal seizure and detention" of cattle, but rather one of theft, as all the elements of that offence were present, and the accused should have been charged with and tried for that offence. Held, further, that the sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of the compensation was not warranted by law. Compensation may be levied as a fine, and the ordinary mode of levying fines is laid down in s. 386 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The law nowhere provides that fines may be levied by means of imprisonment. PARYAG RAI v. ARJU MIAN

Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 4, cl. (o), 250 —Act XIII of 1859, s. 2. A mere breach of contract is not, under the first part of s. 2 of Act XIII of 1859, an offence within the meaning of the term in s. 4 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and no compensation can, therefore, be legally awarded under s. 250 of the Code in respect of such breach. In the matter of the petition of RAM SARUP BHAKAT

In the month following the conviction, the Deputy Magistrate issued a warrant for the collection of R12-4-0 from the accused, of which R2-4-0 were levied under s. 31 of the Court-fees Act as Court-fees paid by the complainant, and R10 under s. 545 of the Code of Criminal Procedure for two fees of R5 each paid by the complainant to the medical officer for a certificate and for giving evidence in the case. Objection having been made to the recovery of these sums, the case was referred to the High Court for orders. Held, that the levy of Court-fees was warranted by s. 31 of the Court-fees Act, which is not modified by s. 545 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Held, also, that the Deputy Magistrate's order passed under s. 544 of the Code of Criminal Procedure for the payment of expenses incurred in the prosecution was unsustainable, and that such expenses could only be awarded to the complainant out of the fine levied from the accused, and not in addition to it. That section directs that "compensation shall be recoverable as if it were a fine," and s. 386 and the following sections of the Code direct by what means a fine shall be recovered. S. 250 of that Code does not contemplate that compensation shall be awarded because a case is found to be false, but where the Magistrate is satisfied that the accusation is frivolous and vexatious. The words "frivolous and vexatious" in the section indicate an accusation merely for the purpose of annoyance, not an accusation of an offence which is absolutely false. A Deputy Magistrate, having held that a complaint was vexatious, ordered the complainant to pay compensation under s. 250 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. He recorded the following order: "The complainant is unable to produce any sureties, and pleads inability to pay the compensation. He is awarded 30 days' simple imprisonment." No attempt was made to levy the amount of the compensation. Held, that the order was invalid, whether it were passed under s. 260 (2) or s. 388 (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Where an order to pay compensation has been made under s. 250, the Magistrate cannot make an order for imprisonment on the mere intimation by the person who is directed to pay the compensation that he is unable to do so. Under s. 388 (2), the issue of a warrant for the levy by distress of the amount awarded as compensation is a condition precedent to the carrying out of the sentence of imprisonment. In the matter of BYRAVALU NAIDU (1902)

A Magistrate may take cognizance under s. 191 of the Criminal Procedure Code of an offence brought to his notice by a police report which affords ground for a suspicion that an offence has been committed ; but as matter of sound judicial discretion, a Magistrate should not so proceed and direct that the person suspected be tried until some person aggrieved has complained, or until he has before him a police report on the subject based on an investigation directed to the offence to be tried, and in cases of alleged false charges, until it is clear that the original charge has been either heard and dismissed or abandoned. Until he has done so, it is not competent for him to dismiss the complaint under s. 203 of the Code. It is an irregular proceeding on the part of a Magistrate, in place of examining the complainant on oath, to call on the person complained against to submit a report as to the truth or otherwise of the allegations made against him. If an investigation into the subject-matter of the complaint is considered necessary, it should be conducted according to the provisions of s. 202, either by the Magistrate himself or by some properly qualified officer. A complaint against a public servant such as the Chairman of a Municipality must be dealt with in exactly the same manner as any other complaint, and the consideration of the question as to the applicability of s. 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code to the case should be postponed until after the complainant has been examined on oath in accordance with the law. day required him to show cause why he should not be prosecuted under s. 211 of the Penal Code. He afterwards referred the case for inquiry and report to a Sub-Deputy Magistrate with second class powers, who after examining the complainant and his witness reported the charge to be maliciously false. The Sub-divisional Magistrate then heard J's pleaders, and agreeing with the report passed an order directing his prosecution. Held, that the petition to the Sub-divisional Magistrate was a "complaint" within s. 4 (h) of the Criminal Procedure Code. Held, further, that according to the current of decisions of the Court, when a person institutes before the police criminal proceedings found on enquiry to be false, before he can be prosecuted under s. 211 of the Penal Code, he must first have an opportunity of proving his case, that if he impugnes the correctness of the police inquiry by a petition, he is entitled to have the persons complained against tried on the charge, or else his statement must be recorded on oath and his complaint dismissed under s. 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code; and that the order of the Magistrate in the case was therefore bad. *In the matter of Chukradhar Potti, 8 C. When a complaint is made before a Magistrate, but not reduced to writing, he cannot, under s. 273 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, refer the case to a Deputy Magistrate for trial. Ss. 426 and 439 do not apply to a case where the prosecution is not commenced by a complaint, as directed in the Code. The Deputy Magistrate tried and convicted the accused. On a reference from the Sessions Judge, on the ground that the proceedings were irregular under s. 66, Act XXV of 1861, and that therefore the order of the Deputy Magistrate was without jurisdiction:—Held, that the petition was sufficient, and that the Magistrate was justified in making over the petition to a Deputy Magistrate who had the full powers of a Magistrate for enquiry and trial. 24. ——— Report of police officer who is an accused person—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), ss. 200-203, 437. Ss. 200 to 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code must be read together, and a Magistrate dismissing a complaint under the provisions of s. 203 on any one of the three grounds—viz. (i) if he, upon the statement of the complainant, reduced to writing under s. 200, finds no offence has been committed ; (ii) if he distrusts the statement made by the complainant ; and (iii) if he distrusts that statement, but his distrust is not sufficiently strong to warrant him in acting upon it, except upon a further enquiry as provided for in s. 232—must record his reason for so doing, for, if such reasons were not recorded, it would be impossible for the High Court, exercising its revisional powers under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to consider whether the discretion of such Magistrate has been properly exercised. It was never contemplated that a Magistrate should call for a report from an accused person under s. 202 for the purpose of ascertaining the truth of the complaint. If such accused happened to be an officer subordinate to the Magistrate, where, therefore, a complaint was made against a police officer, and complainant's statement was duly recorded, and the Magistrate acting under the provisions of s. 202 called for a report from such police officer, and acting upon that report dismissed the complaint under s. 203 :—Held, that he had acted illegally, and that his order made under the last-named section should be set aside, and the case proceeded with according to law from the time at which the complaint was made and the com-

Meanwhile, on the 15th October, the charge was repeated in a complaint before the Magistrate of the District who directed the complainant and his witnesses to attend on a particular day, but subsequently, without having examined them or the complainant, referred the matter to the Sub-Deputy Magistrate. That officer having reported the charge to be false, the Magistrate, on the 9th November, wrote upon the police report, which had meanwhile, on the 26th October, been submitted to him, the following direction, viz. "show as false". On the 19th November a counter-prosecution under ss. 211, 182 and 500 of the Penal Code was sanctioned, and eventually, on the 22nd May 1879, resulted in the petitioner being convicted. While the counter-prosecution was pending, the petitioner, on the 22nd April, applied to the Magistrate to proceed with his complaint according to law, but was informed that his complaint was dismissed. On the following day the Magistrate recorded the following order:—"Dismissed in accordance with my decision recorded in the police report under s. 147 of the Code of Criminal Procedure." Held, that the complaint had been improperly dismissed and that the order of the Magistrate, dated 23rd April 1879, must be set aside. An accused person was arrested on the charge of having stolen a registered letter from the Post Office, and was brought up before a Bench of Presidency Magistrates, charged with offences under s. 381 of the Penal Code and s. 52 of the Post Office Act, 1898. He was discharged on the same day, the Bench considering the evidence insufficient. Subsequently the accused was re-arrested on substantially the same charge, and was committed by the Chief Presidency Magistrate for trial upon further and fresh evidence. Upon an application by the accused to have the order of commitment discharged on the ground that the Chief Presidency Magistrate had no jurisdiction to make the commitment, as the previous order of discharge had not been set aside: Held, that the commitment was good. Nilratan Sen v. Jogesh Chundra Bhattacharje, *I. The Town Magistrate dismissed the complaint on the ground that sanction, which he deemed to be necessary, had not been obtained. The complainant obtained sanction, and thereupon the Town Magistrate proceeded with the case and convicted the accused. On appeal, the Deputy Magistrate, while agreeing that the accused were guilty, reversed the conviction on the ground that, inasmuch as the Town Magistrate had once thrown out the complaint under s. 203 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, he could not subsequently entertain it. On the case being referred to the High Court for order: Held, that, although in form the Town Magistrate's order purported to dismiss the complaint under s. 203, in substance it refused to take cognizance of the offence on the ground that sanction was necessary and had not been obtained; and that the acquittal must be set aside. The Magistrate instituted proceedings only against one of them and after his conviction refused to issue processes against the others. On application by the complainant, the Sessions Judge, under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code, directed a further inquiry into the matter without notice to the other persons accused. Held, that the refusal by the Magistrate to issue processes was an order of dismissal of the complaint within the meaning of s. 203 of the Code, in regard to which a further enquiry could be made. Held, further, that it is not necessary that notice should issue to a person accused of an offence before an order can be properly passed under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code directing a further inquiry into a matter which has terminated in the summary dismissal of a complaint under s. 203 of the Code in the absence of any person excepting the complainant. Hari Das Sanyal v. Saritulla, *I. The complainant's solicitor, finding that no sanction had been obtained as required by s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code for proceeding with the charge under s. 182 of the Penal Code, applied to the Magistrate for leave to withdraw the complaint, which the Magistrate granted, adding to his order the words "accused is discharged". The complainant having subsequently obtained the requisite sanction, filed a fresh complaint on the same charges. It was objected on behalf of the accused that the accused had been acquitted under s. 248 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and that futher proceedings were now barred under s. 403. The Magistrate allowed the objection and stopped the proceedings. On application to High Court :—Held, that the order of the Magistrate should be reversed and the complaint investigated. The order stopping the proceedings would be legal only if the accused had been acquitted by a Court of competent jurisdiction, which was not the case, as the Magistrate could not take cognizance of the charge under s. 182 of the Penal Code, without a sanction having been previously obtained. As to the charge under s. 500 of the Penal Code, the proper procedure in respect of it was that prescribed for warrant cases. The only legal order that could be made in such a case was an order of discharge under s. 253 of the Criminal Procedure Code and not of acquittal, and it was an order of discharge that was actually made. In re SAMSUDIN . . On the matter coming before the High Court on revision, it was found that the offence being not compoundable the reference of the parties to arbitration was irregular. Held, that the order of 24th July discharging the accused was improper ; that the provisions of ss. 436 and 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code were not applicable to Presidency Magistrates who, therefore, can revive a complaint even after discharge ; that the High Court has ample powers under the Charter Act, if not under the Code, to revise an order reviving a complaint after discharge ; and that in this particular case the Presidency Magistrate has exercised a proper discretion in reviving the complaint. ——— Mortgage bond—Stipulations in amount to penalties—Compound interest—Increased interest on default—Compensation for breach of contract—Interest after date fixed for payment, power to give—Interest at contract rate after such date. Compound interest at a rate exceeding the rate of interest on the principal money being in excess of and outside the ordinary and usual stipulation, may be regarded as in the nature of a penalty. Where a stipulation in a mortgage bond for increased interest on default is retrospective and the increased interest runs from the date of the bond, and not merely from the date of the default, it is always to be construed as a penalty, because an additional money payment becomes in that case immediately payable by the mortgagor.

But the increased interest is not therefore to be disallowed altogether ; for by s. 74 of the Contract Act reasonable compensation not exceeding the amount of the penalty is to be received by the party complaining of the breach of the contract. Where two mortgage bonds were executed each providing for interest, compound interest, and on default increased interest from the respective dates of the execution of the bonds, and on the date of the execution of the second bond the amount due on the first bond with interest was included in the principal of the second bond ; the High Court in a decree on the bonds held that the increased interest by way of compensation on the first bond should run only from the date of execution of the second bond, and that on the second bond should run only from the date of default on that bond, and allowed compound interest at the same rate only as that at which simple interest was stipulated for in the bond, and the Judicial Committee affirmed that decree. Ss. 86 and 88 of the Transfer of Property Act contain no directions for interest beyond the date to be fixed by the Court up to which the account is directed to be taken ; but it has long been the uniform practice of the Calcutta High Court to give such interest, and the power to do so, whatever the source of it (and that is immaterial since the decision in Maharaja of Bharatpur v. *Kanno Dei, L. Subsequently the Magistrate of the district, relying upon ss. 248 and 259, and professing to act under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code, directed the Deputy Magistrate to send up the parties and proceed regularly with the case. Held, that ss. 248 and 259 had no bearing on the case, and that the mere fact of the accused having been sent up by the police did not prevent the offence, which was legally compoundable, from being compromised, and that consequently the order of the Deputy Magistrate was prefectly correct and legal. The alleged compromise consisted of a Bengali paper, signed by the coolies, stating that they "made razinama" (compromise) "of the case of their own accord," and a paper in English signed by M, these papers being given to the District Superintendant of Police, who had investigated the complaints, and who stated that he asked the coolies as to the contents of the Bengali paper, and they said that they had signed it voluntarily and stated its purport, and that one of them said in the presence of the others that it was a razinama. G, one of the coolies, also wrote on the paper the words in Uriya, "I will not carry on the case." The Bengali paper was written by the Darogah of the police station in presence of M. The paper signed by M was as follows:—"I hereby agree with these Ganjam people that there shall be no legal proceedings of any kind taken against them with the exception of those who have not completed their agreements. Those whose agreements have not been completed, proceedings will be taken against them on 22nd May, if they have not returned to the garden before then". Neither of the papers were explained to G so as to make them intelligible to him, for though the Bengali paper was read out, G did not understand that language. G was one of the coolies who had completed his agreement with M. Held, per PRINSEP, J.—The compounding of an offence signifies that the person against whom the offence has been committed has received some gratification to act as an inducement for his desiring to abstain from a prosecution; here there was no forbearance on the part of M to proceed against G, who had served out the term of his engagement, and, therefore, there was no consideration for the agreement to compound. Having regard, moreover, to the ignorance and inferior intelligence of G, it was of vital importance for M to show what led to the alleged agreement, and how it was that the Darogah was instrumental to it, which he had not done. Per TREVELYAN, J.—Compounding an offence supposes an arrangement by which the parties have settled their differences, and in the more usual acceptation of the term implies that the prosecutor has received some consideration or gratification for dropping the prosecution. Although the provisions of the Contract Act may not apply, the proof of the arrangement must be similar to that which the Court requires for the proof of any agreement which is in issue; and unless it appears that the parties were free from influence of every kind and were fully aware of their respective rights, it would be impossible to give effect to a so-called arrangement or composition. Having regard to the fact that the writer of the Bengali agreement had not been called, and that the contracting parties were, on the one side, ignorant coolies, strangers to the land and to the language in which the document was written, and on the other, a European of some education, assisted by his Bengali clerk, and, having also the assistance of the police, it was not proved that G knew what he was about and was fairly contracting. Held, therefore, by the Court that there was under the circumstances no compounding of the offences with which M was charged, valid in law such as to deprive the Magistrate of jurisdiction to try them. 18. _____ Compromise—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 345—Filing of petition of compromise in Court—Effect of subsequent withdrawal of petition. Where a complainant, a female, had presented a petition of compromise in respect of a compoundable offence and the Magistrate had examined her and satisfied himself as to her understanding the same. Held, that he was wrong in ordering the petition to be put up with the record but should have immediately dealt with the matter, and that he was under the terms of s. 345, Criminal Procedure Code, obliged to accept the compromise and to give effect to it. Held, also, that the complainant could not by a subsequent withdrawal of the above petition of compromise insist upon the case proceeding. COMPOUNDING OFFENCE—contd.

19. _____ Offence lawfully compoundable—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 342—Petition for withdrawal and compromise—Object and effect of—Duty of Magistrate on receipt of such petition. When a charge is framed against an accused person only of an offence which can be lawfully compounded and a petition of compromise or for leave to compound the offence is put in, the Court should allow the parties to compound the offence, and acquit the accused. When a petition either for compromise of, or for withdrawal from, the case is put in, the Court ought to make an order either granting or refusing the application then and there, and should not put it off by ordering it to be filed with the record to be considered at the close of the trial. MAHOMED ISMAIL v. FAIZUDDI 3 C. W. N. 548

20. _____ Compoundable offence—Whether the compounding of an offence enures to the acquittal of all the parties complained against. If, in the case of a compoundable offence, the complainant intimates to the Court that he has compounded it and desires to withdraw his complaint, the order passed by the Magistrate allowing the withdrawal is in respect of the offence and not solely in regard to the persons actually under trial at the time, as the law contemplates that all the accused persons should be under trial at the same time before a judicial officer, unless in some exceptional circumstances, such as their absconding, or sickness, or some such reason, the attendance of some of them cannot be obtained. Where, out of several persons named in the complaint, the Magistrate issued process against one, and subsequently allowed the complainant to compound with him, but did not issue process against the others, and also refused to stay proceedings against them in respect of the offence complained of: Held, that the Magistrate ought to have issued process against the latter at the same time as it was issued against the former, and, the offence having been compounded, all the persons complained against were equally entitled to an acquittal. CHANDRA KUMAR DAS v. EMPEROR (1902) 7 C. W. N. 176

21. _____ Agreement to stifle a prosecution—Compounding a non-compoundable offence—Agreement as defence in a civil action—Suit for wrongful confinement—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23. The plaintiff sued the defendant in damages for wrongful arrest and confinement. The defence pleaded an agreement whereby the parties had agreed to settle their differences in consideration of compounding some criminal charges, one of which was not by law compoundable, and which were then pending between the parties in a Criminal Court. The lower Appellate Court held that the plaintiff was prevented from bringing the action by reason of the agreement

On appeal: Held, that the object of the agreement being to stifle a prosecution was bad in law, and that the agreement, therefore, could not be set up as a defence in a Court of Law. DALSUKHRAM v. CHARLES DEBRETTON (1904)

after the determination, on the death of the owner, of a prior estate by way of what is known to English law as a vested remainder, so as to create an interest which can pass to a third person before the determination of the prior estate. The parties to a solenamah or compromise were, on the one side, the widow of a Mahomedan, she being in possession of villages in Oudh, which had belonged to him, and of which the summary settlement of 1858 had been made with her; and, on the other side, two brothers, alleged to be his sons. By the compromise, which was made in the course of proceedings at regular settlement, it was agreed that the widow should, during her lifetime, continue to hold possession, and remain proprietor, without power of alienation, and that after her death the two sons should possess each one-half of the property. Held, that, on the true construction of the compromise, the title of the sons to succeed was contingent upon their surviving the widow, and that no interest passed to their heirs on their deaths in her lifetime. 6. ——— Penalty for non-fulfilment of conditions, suit to enforce. A suit for a kabuliat having been brought in the Revenue Court, a deed of compromise was filed in the suit, in which it was stipulated that a certain sum would be paid by the defendants to the zamindar as rent of four kanis of land, including homestead, after mutation of names; that R15-8 on account of outstanding balance and charges connected with the rents would be paid to the plaintiffs within a month; and that in default the defendants would have no right to the lands specified. The defendants having failed to fulfil the conditions, the plaintiffs executed their decree and realised from them the balance above mentioned, and having sued them for the rent obtained a decree. The plaintiffs then brought this suit to recover possession, in virtue of itmami right, of the land on the ground of non-fulfilment of the conditions of the compromise. The first Court gave them a decree, which the lower Appellate Court reversed, holding that the deed merely imposed a penalty with a view to punctual payment. Held, that, as what the defendants had to do was of a perpetually recurring nature, and no action which the Court might take would be effectual in preserving the plaintiff from being sued by the zamindar, the intention was that the terms should be strictly enforced on failure to perform the conditions, and that the defendant should be obliged to surrender the lands. the Naik rulers of Madura for the maintenance of the rank and dignity of his family which was now represented by the plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 1 to 23. The property was long managed by the representative, for the time being, of the senior line. In 1844 one of the junior members instituted a suit for partition, which terminated in a decree, declaring the corpus of the property to be indivisible and the annual produce to be divisible in certain shares. Subsequently in 1857 a compromise was entered into, by which the parties agreed to vary the distribution of the shares, but they agreed that the management of the estate, indivisible and inalienable, should continue to be vested in the eldest line subject to certain supervision on the part of the other members. The compromise was long acted upon by the family; but in 1892 the representative of the senior line died, leaving only his widow and infant sons. The widow, as guardian of the elder son, then entered on the management, and being gosha, delegated it to a stranger. The plaintiffs representing a junior line now sued for the removal of these persons from management and the appointment of another manager alleging both that they had no right to the managership and that they had been guilty of mismanagement. All the members of the family were made parties to the suit. Held, that the compromise was binding on the parties, and that under the compromise the plaintiffs had no right to joint management; and that the widow of the last manager should be removed from the managership, and that until one of her sons came of age the estate should be managed by a receiver appointed from among the members of the family. 8. ——— Assignment of villages, part of an impartible estate—Maintenance of a member of a junior branch of a joint Hindu family—Agreement—Arbitration award, decree and settlement there on—Revenue, by whom payable. A talukhdar owning an impartible inheritance was the head of a joint Hindu family, of which the defendant, his first cousin, was a member in a junior branch. In 1864 they came to terms as to the latter's claims upon the ancestral estate. A decree in that year founded upon the award of arbitrators between them declared the talukhdar's ownership, and the assignment by him of eleven villages to the junior member, free of liability in respect of the revenue. These terms were entered in an administration paper, or wajib-ul-arz, of the talukh before the settlement of 1867, in the record whereof they were also entered. And they were referred to in a sanad granted to the talukhdar. When the settlement of 1889 was in progress the profits of the eleven villages and the Government demand thereon had greatly increased; and for this jumma the talukhdar was liable without any proportionate increase of profit from the eleven villages. In 1881 the talukhdar sued for a declaration that the defendant's right in the villages consisted only of a certain amount of allowance for maintenance derivable from them. He also claimed that the defendant should repay to him a sum which he had paid for local cesses. The defence was that the defendant's right in the eleven villages had been conclusively settled in the above proceedings. Held, that by the true construction of the decree of 1864, which was the foundation of the title of either party, the profits of the eleven villages belonged to the defendant, and that the revenue was to be paid, as between the two, by the plaintiff with the enhancements, without benefit to him from the increase in the yield of the land. The principle of the judgments below was that the question to be decided was of the kind where the head of a family and a junior member dispute the amount of maintenance that should be paid. But the property assigned in this case was not of the variable character which belonged to an ordinary allowance for maintenance and there was nothing to show that the Courts had authority to disturb settled arrangements on the ground of their being originally based on claims to maintenance. The talukh was vested in the plaintiff subject to the right of the defendant to hold eleven villages, and as between them, the former was liable for the jumma and the latter for the local rates and cesses. 9. _____ Enforcing Compromise—Compromise of family disputes—Hindu law—Agreement as to succession to property—Suit to enforce the agreement—Mistake in law. In 1859, two brothers, A and B, filed a petition in the Collectorate, by which it was agreed that the family property should be divided in certain shares. B, who had only lately attained his age of majority, acted on his own account and as guardian of his minor brothers. In a suit by A to carry out the terms of the petition, B contended that undue advantage had been taken of his youth and inexperience; that the agreement was invalid; and that there was no consideration. It appeared that, at the time of the agreement, there was a bonâ fide dispute as to the rights of the parties, and no evidence of fraud was adduced. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. out of possession of these lands by the younger, and he performed the worship at his own expense, and the younger took out execution, objecting that his brother had not performed his trust as family shebait, so that he had been compelled to perform the ceremonies at his own expense: but his objection was overruled. Held, on appeal by the younger, that the non-performance of any ceremonies by the elder brother gave him no cause of complaint, unless he could show that such failure was not caused by any default on his own part. 11. _____ Decree made on compromise—Review of judgment—Altering decree. The manager of the Court of Wards effected a compromise with claimants on the estate; a decree was passed on the basis of that compromise, but before the parties wished the decree to be made; in the decree, leave was reserved to apply for a review, if the compromise was not sanctioned by the Commissioner, and was prejudicial to the parties. The compromise was sanctioned by the Commissioner, but afterwards the manager found that he had been deceived by his servants, and that the claim had been allowed erroneously. Held, that the Court having granted a review, and the claim being proved to be exaggerated, a decree was properly given for the true amount. 12. _____ Effect of Compromise—Reconveyance with condition of the gift of property—Restriction of alienation—Mahomedan Law—Gift. M and her son S departing on a journey, made a conditional gift of their property to A. On their return, A, under the award of a panchayat, restored their property, but by the instrument reconveying it their estate was limited to a life interest, and they were restrained from alienating it. The lower Courts held this instrument to be a deed of gift, and that the conditions attached to the gift were void by Mahomedan law. Held, on special appeal, that the lower Courts were wrong in so treating it, as it was in fact a compromise, the terms of which should be carried out, and M and S should be restrained from wasting or alienating the property. Subsequently K's widow sued for a share on behalf of her own son, but the suit was decided against her and affirmed by the High Court, on the ground that her son was an idiot. The plaintiff now sued for recovery of a moiety of the one-third share still in possession of the defendant which in ordinary course would have fallen to K or his representatives. Held, that the plaintiff having by the agreement accepted a third share, and abandoned his claim to the rest, could not recover. On attempting to take possession, the plaintiff was opposed by J D. The case was taken up under s. 230, Code of Civil Procedure, and J D's possession was upheld; the plaintiff then brought a suit against J D, who dying, was represented by the defendants in the former suit who had been parties to the compromise. Held, that these defendants were bound by the terms of the compromise in which they had admitted the title of the plaintiff in the lands in dispute, even if their title to the lands accrued to them since the compromise. 17. ——— Compromise consisting of two Agreements, one registered and the other not—Unregistered Agreement incorporated into a judicial proceeding. A prior suit between the same parties, now contesting the right to part of an ancestral estate, claimed another part of the same estate, without comprising the lands now in suit, which, at the time when the first suit was brought, were outstanding under a mortgage. A decree had been made by consent, excluding the lands now sued for. The defendant's case was that the lands now claimed, together with those decreed by consent, had been made the subject of a compromise of which the terms had been stated in two written agreements not registered. Also, that according to the compromise each of the parties was to take a moiety of the whole estate. Each had obtained possession; but the decree was limited to the part of the estate for which the prior suit, then disposed of, was brought; and only one of the agreements—that one which related to the lands then in suit—was presented to and accepted by the Court which made the consent decree. Held, that this agreement had a different effect from the other one, as it constituted a step in a judicial proceedings, and did not require registration. The order was pronounced in terms of it. But as regarded the lands now in suit, excluded as they had been from the decree in the former suit, the defendant's title to them had been left to stand or fall by the other unregistered document. The latter, by the Registration Act, 1877, conferred no title, and this defence failed. PRANAL ANNI v. LAKSHMI ANNI . . I. L. R. 22 Mad. 508

A solenamah or deed of agreement to compromise conflicting claims entered into in the presence of witnesses and solemnly acknowledged in Court, by parties who were mutually ignorant of their respective legal rights, cannot afterwards be set aside upon a plea of ignorance of the real facts when the party seeking to avoid the deed had the means of ascertaining those facts within his reach. Gross fraud and imposition are not to be imputed upon mere suspicion, and unless the charge is proved, a party cannot be released from an agreement entered into by his own solemn act. The onus of showing that a compromise has been fraudulently obtained by intimidation and false representation is cast upon those who seek to impeach the validity of their own deed. 20. ——— Joint and undivided ancestral property—Separate property—Estoppel. Certain ancestral estate was recorded as held in equal shares by four brothers, A, B, C, and D. On A's death his son E was recorded as the holder of the share. On the deaths of B and D, C was at first recorded as the owner of their shares. Shortly afterwards B's widow, F, and D's widow G, were recorded as the holders of their husbands' shares. Again, at a later period, the names of H and I, the sons of E, were substituted for those of the widows. The estate was subsequently sold for arrears of Government revenue, but a farm of it was given to E, H, I, and C. In 1853 the Government, having purchased the estate, proposed to regrant it to the old zamindars and farmers, and a report regarding the ownership of the estate was called for. It was reported that it appeared from the statements of E and J, the son of C, that the widows of B and D had made a gift of their shares to H and I. In 1853 E, J, H, and I were asked by the Collector in what manner they proposed to divide the estate if it were granted to them, and they replied that they would hold it in equal shares. The estate was eventually granted to these persons on payment of the arrears of revenue. Each of them contributed his quota in making such payment. In 1855 an administration-paper was framed in which they were entered, at their own request, as in possession each of equal shares. In 1864 they agreed to a partition of the shares by arbitration. These proceedings were stopped by J advancing a claim to a moiety of the estate. In March 1867 J sued for possession of a moiety of the share originally held by B's widow, then deceased, and for a declaration of his right to a moiety of the share held originally by D's widow. In June 1867 the parties to the suit effected a compromise, agreeing to divide the estate into four lots on certain conditions. A decree was accordingly passed in the terms of the compromise. K, J's son, sued in 1876, in his father's lifetime, to obtain the same relief as his father had sought in 1867, and a declaration that the arrangement effected by the compromise and the decree was ineffectual. Held, that, assuming that the estate was joint until 1867, K was, in the absence of fraud, bound by the compromise entered into by his father, and his suit was not maintainable. Assuming that the estate was held in separate shares, the shares of K's great-uncles descended as inheritance liable to obstruction, and K could not have questioned his father's acts. 21. ——— Suit to set aside —Fraudulent Representations—Sanction by Court of compromise entered into by a minor—Misapprehension or mistake as to material facts—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 20—Enquiry as to whether it would be for benefit of minor to set aside compromise. The plaintiff, a minor, was, as daughter and one of the heirs of A, entitled to $\frac{7}{24}$ths of his estate. The value of A's estate was uncertain, and depended on whether or not A had been a partner in business with M, and whether or not a sum of R30,000 had been paid by M to A in satisfaction of all claims which A had against M in respect of the estate of K, a deceased brother of A and former partner in the same business. M having, on A's death, possessed himself of all the estates of A, the plaintiff brought a suit against M, in which a decree was made ordering an account to be taken of the estate of A which had come into the hands of M. Pending such account M died, leaving a will, by which he appointed the son of A and another his executors, and the suit was revived against them. In their application for probate they stated that the value of M's estate, so far as they had been able to ascertain and were aware, was R4,41,000. Shortly after probate was granted, negotiations were entered into between the executors and the advisers of the plaintiff for a compromise, and a petition was, with the concurrence of the executors, presented by the plaintiff to the Court, asking for its sanction to the terms agreed upon by the parties, which were, that the plaintiff should receive R20,000 in full of all demands, and R5,000 for her costs of suit. This petition took, as the value of M's estate, the amount stated by the executors in their application for probate, and stated that the value of A's estate, in case the above-mentioned payment by M was proved, would be R30,000, and in case it was not proved, then a moiety of the estate of M; and that, considering the difficulties the plaintiff had to meet in proving her case, and with a view to put an end to further trouble, litigation, and expense, the above terms had been agreed to on her behalf. These terms of compromise were sanctioned by the Court on the 11th September 1876. Shortly afterwards, further property was discovered belonging to the estate of M. The plaintiff brought a suit against the executors to set aside the compromise, allowing that the terms had been accepted by her on the faith of the representation made by the executors in their application for probate, and charging them with wilful and fraudulent concealment. There was evidence to show that some of the property subsequently discovered was such that the defendants as executors ought to have known, even if they did not, of its existence at the time of the compromise. Held, that even though the executors had no such knowledge, and there was no actual fraud, yet there was such culpable ignorance and neglect of duty on their part as to amount to fraud, and carry with it the consequences of knowledge; and as the compromise had in consequence been entered into by the parties and sanctioned by the Court under a misapprehension of material facts, the plaintiff was entitled to have the compromise set aside, and the parties restored to their rights in the former suit at the time it was effected. Per PONTIFEX, J.—In cases where the sanction of the Court is required, as where there is an infant concerned, each party is bound to see that the materials on which the sanction of the Court is asked for are unimpeachable. Per PONTIFEX, J.—Quære: Whether in this suit, if the questions were found to arise, it would be necessary for the Court to consider whether it would be for the benefit of the minor that the compromise should be set aside. Per GARTH, C.J.—Semble: Even if it only appeared that the compromise had been entered into and sanctioned under an entire mistake of the parties and of the Court with regard to the subject-matter of the agreement, it ought to be set aside under s. 20 of the Contract Act. Per GARTH, C. J.—In a substantive suit by a minor to set aside a compromise made with the sanction of the Court obtained by fraud or mistake, it is not the province of the Court to enquire whether it would or would not be for the benefit of the minor that the compromise should be set aside; though it might be otherwise on an application for review to the Court which granted the sanction. 25. _____ Effect of setting aside compromise on right of appeal. In a suit brought on behalf of an infant daughter by her mother as guardian, a decision was given partly for and partly against the defendant, who thereupon filed an appeal, which he afterwards withdrew in accordance with the terms of a compromise purporting to have been made with the mother anddaughter. Subsequently, at the suit of the daughter, the compromise was set aside as fraudulent and collusive, and a review of the original decision, in so far as it was adverse to the plaintiff's interest, was allowed. The defendant then applied that his appeal might be revived, but his application was rejected by the High Court, on the ground that he had deprived himself of his opportunity of appeal by his own fraudulent conduct. Held, by the Judicial Committee, that the effect of setting aside the compromise was to remit both parties to their original rights, and that if the plaintiff was to be allowed to be heard against so much of the original judgment as was unfavourable to her, the defendant must similarly be heard against so much of the same judgment as was unfavourable to him. On his death in 1852, disputes arose between C and G regarding the management of the sansthan, each claiming to be the heir and successor of D. After a long litigation they entered into a compromise in 1881, by which a portion of the sansthan property, consisting of certain inam villages, lands and varshasans, were assigned to G, and C was left in charge of the rest of the sansthan property, together with all the rights, privileges and manpans enjoyed by the hereditary trustee of the endowment. In 1886, by a decree made in a suit called the "Charity suit," C was removed from his office and the plaintiffs were appointed trustees in his place. In 1889 the plaintiffs filed the present suit to set aside the compromise of 1881, and recover back the sansthan property assigned to G under that compromise. G pleaded, by way of set off or equitable defence, that if the plaintiffs were at liberty to set aside the compromise they were bound to restore to him, in lieu of the trust property assigned to him under the compromise, certain private property belonging to his adoptive father which he had given up. Held, that G could not claim as a set off or as an equitable defence to recover from the plaintiffs in question the private property, there being nothing in the compromise to show that there was any exchange of private property for trust property. Sen Kunwar executed a bond for a considerable sum of money in favour of Jai Chand, the father-in-law of her daughter, Mewa Kunwar. Sen Kunwar died in 1857, and Raj Kunwar in 1858. After the deaths of these ladies three claimants to the property appeared, namely, Chatar Kunwar and Mewa Kunwar, the daughters of Daulat Singh, and Khairati Lal, the son of a daughter of Ratan Singh who had predeceased her father. The matter in dispute between these claimants was settled by means of a compromise, in virtue of which 8½ annas of the property were assigned to the daughters of Daulat Singh and 7½ annas to Khairati Lal; and in 1861 the partition of the property in accordance with the terms of the compromise was completed. In 1866 Chatar Kunwar died, and upon her death Mewa Kunwar successfully asserted her right by survivorship to the 4¼ annas which had been the share of her sister, and thus became possessed of the whole 8½ annas assigned by the compromise mentioned above to the daughters of Daulat Singh. Meanwhile, however, Jai Chand had brought a suit upon the bond given to him in 1857 by Sen Kunwar. Why this bond was originally executed did not appear, not that there was evidence of any such legal necessity pressing upon Sen Kunwar as would have supported an incumbrance of more than her own life interest in the property. The final decree in this suit was obtained by Jai Chand in 1868, that is to say, after the surviving defendant, Mewa Kunwar, had been declared entitled to the entire 8½ annas share; and it was a decree based upon a confession of judgment by Mewa Kunwar. In satisfaction of this decree certain villages, part of the said 8½ annas share, were made over to the decree-holder, some of which, in turn, were sold by him to various vendees. On the suit by the sons of Mewa Kunwar to recover some of these villages on the ground that their mother had in them no more than a Hindu daughter's life estate which had come to an end on her death in 1899, it was held, that Ratan Singh, by his conversion to Mahomedanism, became, according to Hindu law, civilly dead, and that the whole of the property of the former joint Hindu family became vested in Daulat Singh, in 1845, the provisions of s. 9 of Regulation VII of 1832 embodying merely a rule of procedure and not a rule of substantive law, and no suit claiming the family property having been brought by Daulat Singh, to which the rule of procedure therein laid down could be applied; that in any case the conversion of Ratan Singh worked a separation of the joint Hindu family, and one-half of the property became vested in Daulat Singh, though it might not have been actually partitioned; that the property so becoming vested in Daulat Singh would be held by him as a separated Hindu; that the property was held by the Court of Wards during the lives of Raj Kunwar and Sen Kunwar, not specifically for either of them, but for the benefit of the rightful owner, both ladies being incapable of managing their affairs; that, after the compromise arrived at between Chatar Kunwar and Mewa Kunwar on the one side and Khairati Lal on the other, the estate which Chatar Kunwar and Mewa Kunwar took was a Hindu daughter's estate merely, and not an absolute estate and that, inasmuch as no legal necessity was shown for the making of Sen Kunwar's bond or for the relinquishment by Mewa Kunwar of the villages which she made over to Jai Chand in satisfaction of his decree upon that bond, the estate taken by Jai Chand could not be more than that possessed by Mewa Kunwar, and on her death her sons were entitled to recover possession. Abraham v. *Abraham 9 Moo. The Court had partly heard the suit before the compromise was entered into; the appellant had no separate interest; the adult male members of the family, who were presumably competent to judge of their own interests, had taken part in the compromise and assented to it; and the Court pronounced that it was for the benefit of the appellant, who had been made a party for the purpose of binding his interest. XIV of 1882), s. 375—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 59 and 100. Upon a suit for recovery of money due on bahikhata accounts, a compromise was come to, and a petition filed, and in accordance with the petition a decree was made to the following effect, viz., that the defendants do pay to the plaintiffs a certain sum of money together with interest in instalments, but in default of payment of two instalments the whole amount, with interest, will be realizable at once. The decree further declared that the immoveable properties specified therein should be hypothecated for the realisation of the said money, and that the defendants should not be able to create an incumbrance on the same. A certain sum of money having been realised, the plaintiff brought a suit for the balance under the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act, and prayed for the sale of the properties specified in the schedule to the said decree. On an objection by the defendants that the compromise decree was void for want of registration and non-compliance with the provisions of s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, and was of no effect in so far as it purported to create a lien on immoveable property: Held, that having regard to s. 17, cl. (1) of the Registration Act, the compromise decree need not be registered. Held, also, that as the decree under consideration had little resemblance in form to a simple mortgage, and the hypothecation clause created a lien and prohibited further incumbrances, the parties only intended to create a charge, and not a mortgage, on the immoveable properties mentioned in the schedule to the decree and therefore s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act had no application, and the absence of the formalities required by that section would not bar the relief, which might be obtained by s. 100 of the Act. Held, further, that as the hypothecation of immoveable property in the consent decree was the consideration for the time allowed for payment of the sum decreed by instalments, and as it was an integral and necessary part of the adjustment of the claim in the suit, the hypothecation clause was properly inserted in the consent decree, and the Court did not act against the provisions of s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure in allowing its insertion. misrepresentation or surprise. Where the compromise is deliberately entered into and the party admitting the right receives valuable consideration for recognising such right, he will be bound, unless he can show that such compromise was illegal or void. A compromise between a widow and a reversioner, by which the latter admits that the former takes an absolute interest under the will of her deceased husband, does not effect a transfer by the latter of his reversionary right, as the existence of any such right is negatived by the compromise and the transaction does not fall within s. 6 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act, as a transfer of a mere spes successionis. The acceptance by the widow of a release from the reversioner, in accordance with the terms of the compromise, is not an acknowledgment by her of any right in the reversioner, but an arrangement by which she gives something to avoid disturbance. In the case of wills by Hindus, to which the provisions of s. 82 of the Succession Act apply, a gift, simpliciter, of immoveable property by a husband to his wife, will convey the whole interest of the husband, unless it appears that only a restricted interest was intended for her. 4. _____ Revival of original right—Suit to enforce conditions broken. Held, in accordance with a ruling of the Calcutta High Court, and in contravention of a ruling of the late Sudder Court in 1850, that when a compromise has been effected and a party allowed to withdraw his suit under the provisions of s. 98, Act VIII of 1859, if the compromise has not been acted upon, the plaintiff is restored to his original right of action. On the contrary, if acted on, either in whole or in part, the plaintiff cannot be restored to his original right of action, but may bring a suit for the performance of the condition uncomplied with. Held, also, where a compromise is filed in Court, and a decree passed in accordance therewith, such decree must be first set aside before a second suit can be brought on the original cause of action. consent decree for want of sanction. A suit instituted in 1879 against a minor was compromised by the plaintiff and the guardian ad litem, and a decree for the plaintiff was passed by consent. In 1882 the minor sued by his next friend to have the consent decree set aside on the ground that it had been obtained by fraud practised on the guardian ad litem. That suit was dismissed. In 1884 an application was unsuccessfully made in the original suit objecting that the compromise had been entered into without the sanction of the Court. The minor having attained majority now sued to have the consent decree set aside on the ground that it had not been sanctioned by the Court under Civil Procedure Code, s. 462. Held, that the Court by passing the consent decree had not, ipso facto, sanctioned the compromise under Civil Procedure Code, s. 462, and that the present suit was not barred by the order dismissing the application in 1884. 5. ——— Compromise of suit by Guardian ad litem—Leave of Court not obtained—Withdrawal from compromise by guardian—Inability of Court to enforce it. The guardian ad litem of three minors having agreed to compromise a suit and having signed a petition embodying the terms arrived at, undertook to present the petition at the next sitting of the Court. Leave of the Court had not been obtained; and at the time appointed the guardian declined to present the petition and opposed a decree being passed in its terms. Upon the plaintiff seeking to have the compromise enforced:—Held, that inasmuch as leave of the Court had not been asked for, and the guardian had objected to the Court passing a decree in terms of the compromise, the Court had no power to enforce the compromise, even though the terms of it might appear to be beneficial to the minors. 8. ——— Suit on behalf of Minor—Compromise without sanction of Court—Right of minor on attaining majority to impeach decree—Waiver—Practice—Procedure. One R as father and guardian of the present plaintiffs (three minors) filed this suit in 1870 to recover from the defendants, as executors of H, the arrears of a monthly allowance which they claimed under his will. By a decretal order, dated 6th November 1871, the suit was referred to the commissioner to take accounts of the administration of the estate by the defendants. Accounts were duly brought in by the defendants, and objections and surcharges to these accounts were filed on behalf of the plaintiffs in June 1874. In November 1875, R died, and in April 1876, his mother K (grandmother of the infant), was appointed guardian ad litem of his infant children (the plaintiffs). The commissioner made his report in March 1884, which was confirmed by the Court in 1885. The two elder children attained their majority and made no objection to the report, but the third plaintiff and the youngest of the three brothers, on attaining his majority in December 1887, at once instituted proceedings, and obtained a rule calling on the defendants to show cause why the proceedings in the suit subsequent to August 1876, should not be set aside, and why he should not be at liberty to proceed with the accounts filed in the office of the commissioner. He alleged that the inquiry before the commissioner had not been conducted in the interest of the infants, but had been improperly compromised by withdrawing objections which had been lodged to the accounts brought in by the defendants, and that this compromise had not been sanctioned by the Court. Held, that there had been, in effect, a waiver of the infants' claim under an agreement of withdrawal between the parties; and that for such waiver and withdrawal the Court's sanction on behalf of the infants was necessary; and that as such sanction had not been obtained, the plaintiff would be entitled to impeach the decree and re-open the accounts if he had proceeded in the proper manner by an application for review or by an original suit, but that the present procedure was wrong, and that the rule must be discharged. dian or next friend on behalf of a minor binding on the minor. In order to make an agreement or compromise, to which s. 462 of the Code of Civil Procedure applies, a lawful agreement or compromise, it is necessary that the next friend or guardian should ask the Court to consider the proposed term of the agreement or compromise, and before making the agreement entering into the compromise should obtain permission from the Court to enter into the agreement or compromise proposed. The Court should record the fact that such application was made to it; that the terms of the proposed agreement or compromise were considered by the Court; and that, having regard to the interests of the minor, the Court granted leave to the making of the agreement or compromise. From the mere fact that the Court passed the decree in accordance with the compromise, it cannot be inferred that any of those steps preliminary and necessary to the making of the decree have been taken by the Court. 10. _____ Compromise on behalf of a minor—Suit to set aside compromise as having been entered into without the leave of the Court. Where the guardian ad litem of certain minors assented on their behalf to a compromise, which compromise was accepted by the Court and a decree passed thereon, and was found not to be prejudicial to the interests of the minors; it was held, that the minors could not, after the decree based upon the compromise had become final, succeed in a suit to set it aside on the sole ground that the Court had not previously given leave to the guardian to enter into the compromise. Kalavati v. Chadi Lal, *I. The defendants agreed that a decree should be passed against them if they failed to perform an agreement by which they bound themselves to take an oath, the terms of which were set forth in the agreement and one of them failed to take the oath. It was agreed by the defendants who were majors and by the father and guardian of a minor defendant on his behalf, that one of the issues in a suit should be determined under the Oaths Act, s. 9, by the oath of the plaintiff. The oath was taken, and a decree was passed accordingly. Held, that the minor defendant was bound by the consent of his guardian since there was no evidence of fraud or gross negligence on the part of the latter, although the Court had not sanctioned the agreement under s. 462, Civil Procedure Code. 13. _____ Civil Procedure Code, s. 375—Agreement to be bound by oath of particular person—Oaths Act, s. 11. The question in a suit was whether the purchase-money for a house, which had been paid by the defendant, had been paid out of his own funds or out of monies belonging to the plaintiff. A witness for the defence having made statements apparently favourable to the plaintiff's case, the pleaders for both parties signed and presented to the Court a petition that if upon a particular bond in the witness's possession it should be stated that the money was received through the defendant the Court should decree the suit, otherwise the suit should be dismissed. Held, that this arrangement was not an adjustment or compromise of the suit within the meaning of s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code, so as to determine the jurisdiction of the Court and necessitate its passing a decree according to the arrangement. MUHAMMAD ZAHUR v. CHEDA LAL . . I. L. R. 14 All. 141

14. _____ Assignment of interest pending suit—Civil Procedure Code, s. 372. The "cases of assignment, creation, or devolution" or any interest pending a suit contemplated by s. 372 of the Civil Procedure Code, are those in which "the person to whom such interest has come" is arrayed on the same side in the suit as "the person from whom it has passed." Held, therefore, that a compromise in a suit for land, between the plaintiff and one of the defendants, whereby the latter consented to a decree being given to the former for half the land, was not a "case of assignment" of an interest in such land within the meaning of that section. had nothing to do. The plaintiffs subsequently objecting to consent to a decree being taken in terms of the first clause of the agreement, the defendants took out a rule nisi, calling on the plaintiffs to show cause why the agreement should not be recorded in Court, and why the Court should not pass a decree in accordance therewith, under the provisions of s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The rule was argued on affidavits on either side, the plaintiffs objecting that the above section did not apply to such a case as this, and that, in any case, the matter could not be decided on affidavits, but evidence must be gone into. Held, that s. 375 gave the Court the power to deal with such a case as this in the manner required, and that this was a proper case in which to exercise such a power; and that, in the circumstances of this case, no definite procedure having been enjoined by the Court, the matter might properly be decided on affidavits. Rule made absolute accordingly. RUTTONSEY LALJI v. POORIBAI . . . I. L. R. 7 Bom. 304

16. ——— Consent withdrawn before decree. By an agreement made in writing before the hearing, the parties to a suit entered into a compromise by which the plaintiff agreed for consideration to withdraw the suit. When the case came on for hearing, plaintiff refused to fulfil his promise. The defendant having produced the agreement, the Munsif held that it must be enforced, and dismissed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge held that the agreement could not be treated as a compromise, as the plaintiff did not consent, and remanded the suit. Held, that the agreement could be enforced. Ruttonsey Lalji v. *Pooribai, I. The petition stated the terms of arrangement, and also that an application would be made by the guardian of the minor praying the Court to allow the compromise to be carried out on his behalf. Ten days after the petition of compromise was filed, the first defendant and the plaintiff presented petitions to the Court withdrawing from the compromise, and praying that the suit should proceed. The second defendant presented a petition praying that the compromise should be recorded and a decree passed according to its terms. The Court made a decree in accordance with the prayer of the second defendant's petition. The first defendant appealed. Held, that an appeal lay, and that the lower Court was wrong in enforcing the compromise at the instance of the second defendant. Semble: That s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure merely covers cases in which all parties consent to have the terms entered

The Court being already seized of the suit which is adjusted, the application to record the alleged agreement is a proceeding in that suit, and the Court, in connection with that proceeding, necessarily has all the powers and has thrown upon it all the duties which appertain to it in regard to any other questions arising in any suit upon its file. Ruttonsey Lalji v. *Pooribai, I. It was further agreed that the plaintiff would be entitled to bring a fresh suit for the recovery of the latter jote, if the defendant failed to carry out the agreement. The plaintiff was obliged to bring a fresh suit, and both the lower Courts held that he was entitled to a decree. On appeal by the defendant:—Held, that the lower Courts were right in decreeing the suit, there being nothing in s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code to prevent the compromise from being enforced. Held, further, that it was not necessary that the deed of compromise should be registered in order to make it admissible in evidence. 21. ——— Dispute as to factum of compromise—Order dismissing suit in consequence of alleged compromise—Application to High Court by revision petition under s. 622—Right of appeal against order dismissing suit—Acceptance of civil revision petition as appeal on Court-fee being paid. During the pendency of an appeal in a District Court a petition was filed by the pleaders of the plaintiffs and defendants in the suit, praying on behalf of their clients that the case might be struck off the file on the ground that the matter in dispute had been compromised. Two of the plaintiffs then filed a counter petition denying that a compromise had been arrived at, and praying that the appeal might be heard on its merits. The District Judge, after some intermediate orders, struck off the appeal, as prayed in the petition. The two plaintiffs preferred a civil revision petition to the High Court whereupon it was objected that the petition could not be entertained as an appeal lay against the order of the District Judge inasmuch as it was not a decree in pursuance of a compromise under s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but an order passed on a dispute as to whether a compromise had in fact been arrived at. The petition had been presented within the time allowed for appeal. Held, that inasmuch as the petition impeached the alleged compromise as not being a "lawful compromise" an appeal lay against the order of the District Judge; but that the petition might be treated as an appeal, on the Court-fee being paid. Mahomed Wahiduddin v. Hakiman, I. L. R. 25 Calc. 757, at p. 778. Where a party to a suit impugns an alleged agreement or compromise by which he would be bound, the Court must satisfy itself by evidence that the agreement or compromise is a lawful one and that its terms have been consented to by the parties to the suit before it can proceed under s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure to record it and pass a decree in accordance therewith. to the plaintiff R6,000, and cancelling a certain account. It also decided the claim of the plaintiff to two ornaments, which was a matter not included in the "submission paper," but had been verbally referred to the arbitrator in the course of the arbitration. The plaintiff now applied that the submission and award should be filed as an agreement adjusting the suit under s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), or, in the alternative, that the award should be filed under s. 525. The defendant disputed the agreement and denied the validity of the award. Held, that under s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court had jurisdiction to determine whether, as a fact, the alleged agreement adjusting the suit has been made, and if it was satisfied that it has been made to record it. Whether that fact should be tried on affidavit or by oral evidence is entirely for the discretion of the Court. The Court, accordingly, holding that the suit had been adjusted by the submission and award, ordered the same to be filed and the adjustment recorded. Held, further, that the Court could make no order as to that portion of the award which dealt with matter not relating to the subject-matter of the suit. A separate application should be made with regard to the ornaments. SAMIBAI v. PREMJI PRAGJI . I. L. R. 20 Bom. 304

30. _____ Power of Court to frame additional issues as to an alleged compromise effected subsequent to the institution of the suit. The Civil Procedure Code, s. 375, was intended to meet cases where the parties having agreed to compromise subsequently fall out. 31. _____ Execution of decree—Compromise in execution of decree—Estoppel—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 257A, 647. Although a Court executing a decree is bound by the terms thereof, and cannot add to or vary or go behind them, the effect of s. 375 read with s. 647 of the Civil Procedure Code is that when a decree is put into execution, the proceedings taken therefor amount to a separate litigation in which the parties can enter into a compromise much in the same manner as in a regular suit. Such a compromise does not extinguish the decree, and the Court executing the decree is bound, subject to the conditions indicated by s. 375, to give effect to the compromise. In execution-proceedings the word "suit" in s. 375 must, with reference to s. 647, be read as meaning "execution of decree." By reason of the words in s. 375 "lawful agreement or compromise," the provisions of s. 257A become applicable to such a case; and, so long as the requirements of that section are satisfied, the compromise become a part of the decree itself, and—at least as between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor—can be given effect to in execution of the decree. When such a compromise has been duly made and sanctioned by the Court executing the decree, neither the decree-holder nor the judgment-debtor can resile from the position assumed by them in the matter of the compromise. Even if such a compromise has been irregularly sanctioned by the Court executing the decree—the irregularity not amounting to want of jurisdiction—the compromise must take effect until the order sanctioning it is set aside, and until that happens, the parties are bound by it in all proceedings relating to the execution of the decree, and, where they have acted upon it, they are estopped thereafter from questioning its validity. Sita Ram v. *Dasrath Das, I. The holder of such an office was sued by a person to whom he had mortgaged his right to the office, together with other property ; and a compromise was arrived at, by the terms of which the office-holder agreed that his right to the office and to its emoluments should be sold in satisfaction of the mortgage debt. A decree was passed in terms of the compromise, and the decree-holder sought to have the right to the office sold in execution of the decree, and contended (on objection being raised) that, inasmuch as a decree had been passed directing the sale of the office, the Court executing the decree was not at liberty to consider its validity, but must execute it according to its terms. Held, that, as the decree was based on an agreement of compromise, and the Court had merely adopted the contract, the Court must be taken to have adopted it with all its incidents. By s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Court had no jurisdiction to pass a decree on a compromise unless it was a lawful compromise. Any terms of a contract which are opposed to public policy are invalid, and will therefore not be enforced by the Court, and so far as a decree embodies unlawful terms of a compromise it is inoperative and will not be enforced. Nagappa v. *Vencata Rau, I. 40. ———— Minor—Compromise on behalf of minor—Compromise of execution proceedings—Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), s. 462—Sanction of Court—Form of sanction—Minority—Burden of proof. The plaintiffs, Shidappa and Basappa, both of whom were alleged to be minors, sued in 1895, by their mother and next friend, for partition and obtained a decree on the 21st December 1897. then of age, and Basappa, by his mother and next friend, got this application struck off the file, on the ground that they had compromised with the defendant and that the decree was satisfied. The compromise (farkhat) was executed by the first plaintiff himself, who, as alleged in the farkhat, had then attained his majority, and by the plaintiff's mother as guardian of the second plaintiff. Subsequently the present suit was brought by the plaintiffs by their next friend, to set aside the compromise, alleging that it was fraudulently obtained and prejudicial to their interests, and had not been sanctioned by the Court as required by s. 462 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The defendant alleged that the first plaintiff had attained his majority at the date of the compromise, and he contended that the order of the Court striking off the application for execution on the ground that the plaintiff's claim had been compromised was a sanction within the provisions of s. 462 of the Civil Procedure Code. The lower Court held (i) that both plaintiffs were minors, and (ii) that the compromise had not been sanctioned as required by s. 462. It therefore set aside the compromise, and passed a decree for the plaintiffs. On appeal by the defendant : Held, that, Shidappa (plaintiff No. 1) having described himself both in the former suit and in the farkhat as of age, the burden of proof now lay upon him to show that he was a minor, and that he had failed to do so. But held, also, (dismissing the appeal), that Basappa (plaintiff No. 2) being a minor, the farkhat required the sanction of the Court under s. 462 of the Civil Procedure Code. That sanction had not been given. The Court had not before it the materials necessary to enable it to arrive at a judicial conclusion with respect to the compromise. It did not appear that the terms of the farkhat were before it, or any evidence as to its propriety or reasonableness. S. 462 of the Civil Procedure Code, therefore, had not been complied with. The form of expression used for the purpose of indicating that the Court grants leave to compromise is of slight importance. The question is whether the Court after a consideration of the circumstances, really intends to grant leave. The compromise of a suit on behalf of a minor without the leave of the Court is voidable under s. 462 of the Civil Procedure Code, and can be avoided by the minor on his attaining majority. It can be avoided before that time. Bibee Solomon v. Abdool Azeez, I. L. R. 6 Calc. 687, referred to. S. 462 of the Civil Procedure Code applies to a compromise of execution proceedings. be express—Leave, granted by certificated guardian, when valid—Registration—Decree, if can validate unregistered lease—Holder of invalid lease, acceptance of, by certificated guardian—Trespasser—Ejectment—Notice. S. 462, Civil Procedure Code, requires every person acting as a next friend or guardian for the suit to a minor to take the leave of the Court before entering into an agreement or compromise on his behalf, and no exception is made in the case of a certificated guardian. The policy of the law being to protect minors from being taken at a disadvantage by their guardians, the leave of the Court is required, not only in the case of such agreements as are entered into out of Court, but also in the case of agreements which are given effect to by a decree of the Court. The words "any agreement or compromise with reference to the suit," in the section include a compromise finally determining the suit. Raja Gopal Takkaya v. *Mattupalem Chetti, I. L. The Court passed orders accordingly, in the terms of the petition, striking off the suit. The terms of the compromise were not, however, inserted in the decree, and were never carried out. Subsequently the plaintiff brought a second suit for partition of the same property. Held, that it was incumbent on the plaintiff to see that the Court did its duty and recorded a proper order in the suit with reference to s. 375 of the Code of Civil Proecdure, and that, as he had not done so, he must be taken to have withdrawn his suit without permission to sue again, and his second suit was barred by s. 373 of the Code. The confessions of the prisoner in one case in which he was convicted cannot be used against him in another case, unless they are deposed to on oath, either by the person who took them down, or by some one else who heard them. In re MUNGER BHOOYAN 10 W. of the others are of no weight as against the latter. Such confessions, as well as the statements of approvers, are always regarded as tainted; because, from the position occupied by the persons making them, they are not entitled to the same weight as the evidence of ordinary witnesses. 9. ——— Admissibility in Evidence—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 149, 150. To make the confession of a prisoner, not uttered in the presence of a Magistrate, admissible in evidence, the fact disclosed must be one which, of its own force, independently of the confession, would be admissible in evidence. 1. ——— Statement admitting crime, but pleading compulsion by others. An admission by A and B that the crime charged against them was committed by C and D, and that whatever share they had in it was under compulsion, is not a confession on which any person ought to be convicted. QUEEN v. KRISTO MUNDUL 7 W. R. Cr. 8

2. ——— Proof of circumstances under which confession was made—Warning by Magistrate, averment of—Allegations of irregularity—Duty of Sessions Court. Although the averment on the record of a Magistrate by whom a prisoner is tried, that the accused, before making a confession, was warned that it was optional with him to answer the questions put to him or not, is on appeal conclusive as to the fact of such a warning having been given, it is not conclusive to show that such a confession has not been made under the influence of fear engendered by previous maltreatment, or is not otherwise valueless. Allegations made in a regular and proper manner before a Sessions Court on appeal, that a confession made by the accused before the Magistrate who tried the case was made under such circumstances as to preclude its admissibility in, or diminish its value as evidence, should receive due attention and be enquired into. A Sessions Court refusing to make such enquiry commits a grave error in law and procedure. REG. v. KASHINATH DINKAR . 8 Bom Cr. 126

To give weight to confessions of prisoners recorded unde s. 149, Code of Criminal Procedure, there should be a judicial record of the special circumstances under which such confessions were received by the Magistrate, showing in whose custody the prisoners were, and how far they were free agents. 4. ——— Inducement to confess—Person in authority, statement to. W, a travelling auditor in the service of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company, having discovered defalcations in the account of the prisoner, who was a booking clerk of the company, went to him and told him that "he had better pay the money than go to jail," and added that "it would be better for him to tell the truth," after which the prisoner was brought before the Traffic Manager, in whose presence he signed a receipt for, and admitted having received, a sum of R826-8-0. The prisoner was subsequently put on his trial for criminal breach of trust as a servant in respect of this and of other sums. Held, that the words used by W, the travelling auditor, constituted an inducement to the prisoner to confess, and that W was a person in authority within the meaning of s. 24 of the Evidence Act, and that the receipt signed by the prisoner was, therefore, not admitted in evidence on his trial. 5. ——— Illegal pressure—Presumption—Evidence Act, s. 24. In the absence of evidence that a confession of an accused person has been induced by illegal pressure, it is not to be presumed that such confession was so induced. According to s. 24 of the Evidence Act, a confession is inadmissible only if the Court considers it to have been induced by illegal pressure. REG. v. BALVANT PENDHARKAR . . . . 11 Bom. 137

6. ——— Confession made under threat for a purpose other than to extort confession—Evidence Act, 1872, s. 24. A prisoner was tried for wounding with intent to murder, and wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm. The offence was committed on the high seas on board a ship on which the prisoner was a seaman. At the trial it was proved for the prosecution that the master of the ship had sailed from Calcutta and could not be found, and the Standing Counsel thereupon tendered in evidence his deposition before the committing Magistrate, which contained an admission alleged to have been made to the deponent by the prisoner, when in custody. The Court refused to admit the portion of the deposition containing the admission to be read, as it was stated to have been made immediately after the prisoner with others had been threatened by the witness with a loaded rifle; it was immaterial that the threat was not made to extort a confession, but to suppress an attempt at mutiny. 7. ——— Confession to panchayat caused by threat—Evidence Act, 1872, s. 24—Proof of oral confession. The matter before a "panchayat" was whether M and K had murdered B, and thereby disqualified themselves from further intercourse with the rest of their brotherhood. M and B made certain statements before the panchayat which it was afterwards sought to prove against them on their trial for the murder of B, as confessions corroborating the evidence of an approver. The witnessses called to prove these "confessions" did not state specifically what was said by M and K before the panchayat. One witness, a member of the panchayat, said: "M confessed and K acquiesced." Another witness, also a member of the panchayat, said: "M and K were taxed with taking B's house, upon which both admitted having murdered him." The same witness also said: "The admissions were not taken down." It appeared that it was not till at the sixth meeting of the panchayat, and when M and K were threatened with excommunication from caste for life, that they made such statements. Held, that, if the statements attributed to M and K had been actually made and assented to, and this fact had been duly proved, the provisions of s. 24 of Act I of 1872 could not be pleaded against their admissibility, on the ground that such statements had been caused by such threat, for the members of the panchayat were not in authority over M and K within the meaning of that section, nor was there any threat made having reference to any charge against them. The statements, however, could not be accepted as sufficient in themselves to corroborate the evidence of the approver, or to support the conviction of M and K for the murder of B. The statements were in general terms and represented only the impression conveyed by what might have been said to the mind of the witnesses. It was always essential that the Court should know as nearly as possible what were the words used by the supposed confessors, and what were the questions or matters in regard to which they were said. It might have been that the words ascribed to M and K, taken with the questions put and the exact subject-matter of the enquiry, did not amount to a confession of the guilt believed by the hearers to have been confessed EMPRESS v. MOHAN LAL . . . . . I.
